BIG WORDS!

"'A Yank at Oxford'—A first-class comedy . . . One of the most enjoyable of the season... Robert Taylor's engaging personality has much to do with the picture's enthusiastic reception at the Capitol."

—KATE CAMERON, DAILY NEWS

"A picture for any fan... charming, colorful, exciting, witty and tender... refreshingly different... Direction brisk, smart, inspiring to the gifted players... The film should add a masculine following to Robert Taylor's impressive army of feminine fans."

—BLAND JOHANESON, DAILY MIRROR

"Thoroughly entertaining . . . You'll find it fun."

—ROSE PELSWICK, JOURNAL-AMERICAN

"Uncommonly diverting show... A fresh background, and an entertaining one."

—FRANK NUGENT, TIMES

"Action picture . . . with a bag of gags that are crisp with freshness . . . Bright entertainment every foot of the way . . . Robert Taylor justifies the enthusiasm of his following."

—HERBERT COHN, B'KLYN-EAGLE

"Gay, happy-go-lucky... artfully and entertainingly told by a superior cast . . . Excellent . . . Really robust, rollicking, amusing . . . directed and performed with rare skill . . . Robert Taylor thoroughly ingratiating personality, as well as a comedian of the first rank . . . Fine mixture of first-rate acting, lively story-telling and expert direction. Undoubtedly one of the comedy treats of the early season."

—WILLIAM BOEHNEL, WORLD-TELEGRAM

"An engaging film... smart direction... consummately cast . . . Mr. Conway has conjured up much charm . . . Robert Taylor plays the Yank with conviction."

—HOWARD BARNES, HERALD-TRIBUNE

"First-rate cast... witty and dramatic... Robert Taylor's best effort to date . . . Taylor fans and others will find much to enjoy."

—ARCHER WINSTEN, POST

"A cracking good picture . . . dash and excitement . . . dry and likeable humor . . . characters well played."

—EILEEN CREELMAN, SUN

NEW MEDDLING

APPARENTLY the educators of this country find it impossible to attend to their own business.

Most extraordinary presumptions are involved in this week's manifestation by which the Institute of Propaganda Analysis, officing in the Columbia University region of Morningside Drive, demands that the motion picture industry should devote the screen to matters of "social significance."

As set forth in an article in the news columns of this issue, the membership of the Institute includes many persons of prominence in the field of education across the nation.

Typical is this expression from the Institute's literature:

"Only in rare instances is it (the motion picture) an agency for illuminating problems of human conduct, for developing social insight, for encouraging a review of our beliefs and customs, of our modes of government, and of the relationship between peoples and races. . . ."

That is happily correct.

The motion picture has done fairly well in becoming the world's greatest entertainment medium by devoting itself to its own special function of entertainment, by tending to its own business.

WHEN the names of eminent personages, carrying with them the association and authority of such institutions as Harvard, Columbia University, New York University, the University of Chicago, and numerous others, engage in such a movement they are certain to attain attention.

The influence of these august personages, while it can not reach very far among the millions of patrons of the box office, can be felt considerably among militants promoting special causes, special legislation, special taxation and otherwise disturbing the normal conduct of business and service of the box office public.

Once again, the answer is, to all those who want the screen to do something else, "go get a camera."

Most current endeavours are addressed at some process of acquiring for special causes the attention of the great audience which the screen has made for itself.

NEW BRIDGE MENACE

THE motion picture industry may look with an unfriendly eye on the current endeavours at the importation of the new bridge game, with five suits in a sixty-five card deck. The new game seems to be getting a gust of newspaper publicity that promises progress.

The unhappy fact is that bridge, as the predominant and family card game, is probably the most serious competitor of the motion picture in the first run brackets.

Anything that stirs interest in bridge creates more reasons to stay home and is adverse to the lures of the box office.

Card games got their big boost into the currents of civilization in the western world as a device for amusement at the court of a dim-witted king. Cards were a substitute for conversation among persons who had nothing to say, and probably others who were too discreet to say anything.

For automatic, self-feeding entertainment, without undue strain on the mentality, we recommend the motion picture. Five suit bridge is nothing less than a national menace. Perhaps it can be referred back to the League of Nations which seems to have not so much to do of late.

EDUCATION vs. VOCATION

A DEVIL of an uncomfortable time is being had among the schools of journalism in their endeavours at answers to the comment of Dr. Robert M. Hutchins, president of the University of Chicago, recorded on this page last week, in his charge that schools of journalism are "the shadiest educational ventures under respectable auspices. They exist in defiance of the obvious fact that the best preparation for journalism is a good education. Journalism itself can be learned, if at all, only by being a journalist."

"Editor & Publisher," journal of journalists, comes forth with a symposium of answers. Thirteen heads of schools of journalism answered, and two of those, by some indirection, supported Dr. Hutchins' general contention. Eight newspaper editors answered and five of those agreed. The percentage seems in his favour.

Most pungent of the remarks recorded is from an editorial in the New York Daily News, a spiritual scion of the aggressive hell-whooping journalism of Chicago: "The News has a lot of office boys B.A., B.S. etc., degrees; and we believe their prospects are better than those of any journalism graduate."

JUST above thirty-five years ago this windy March morning, the editor of Motion Picture Herald, sitting in a class room in an engineering school heard a professor of thermodynamics remark: "There is too much concern in this class about whether you are enrolled in mechanical, electrical, civil, chemical or mining engineering. I want you to know now that a few years after you are out of school with all your degrees you will have to think hard to remember what course you took."

A free translation of thermodynamics would be to call it the science of putting on the heat. That, in its various figurative applications, seems to have been an excellent course for one destined to an unpremeditated career in journalism.

Looking into the journalistic, or public relations, department of the motion picture industry, one finds an array of about a score of men in significant posts, all rating in earning power and spheres of influence rather high as journalists go. Not one of them has come into his position because of a positively directed vocational education.

On our motion picture industry the job is learned on the job. The school system finds itself in a plight because its vocational efforts have proved so often promises unfulfilled, unfulfillable.

Threat to Hollywood

Existing, new and contemplated quota, censorship and taxation restrictions in a score of foreign countries were cited this week by the United States Government as threatening the economic position of Hollywood motion pictures in the world's markets.

Declaring that these problems will have to be adjusted if the American motion picture business is to continue its wide operations abroad, the Motion Picture Division of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce analyzes the situations confronting U. S. product in the principal countries.

The report starts on page 12.

Increased Profits

Western Electric Company, Inc., Radio Corporation of America and General Outdoor Advertising Company, Inc., all doing business within or with the motion picture industry, this week issued financial statements showing increases in net profit for the calendar year of 1937 as compared to the previous year. Universal Pictures Corporation and all its subsidiaries, showed a net loss of $1,084,998 for the fiscal year ended October 31st, 1937, as against a net loss of $1,835,419 for the preceding year. Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the board of directors of Twentieth Century-Fox, announced his corporation will show a net profit of between $8,500,000 and $9,000,000 for 1937.

Financial news is reported on page 27.

Chicago Business Up

With exhibitors in Chicago and environs saying that never before have so many outstanding productions been available at one time from so many companies, the upward trend of receipts that showed itself at the beginning of the year is being maintained. The Balaban and Katz Chicago Theatre ran "The Buccaneer" three weeks, the first time in the theatre's 16 years that any production had stayed more than fortnight.

Reports on the business being done at other theatres in Chicago are detailed on page 28.

Anti-Block Booking

Senator Matthew Neely's anti-block booking bill, now pending in the Senate, was praised by Pete J. Wood, secretary of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, and attacked by New York Independent Theatre Owners Association this week. A movement to have the bill returned to the commerce committee because hearings were not held was started in Washington by opponents of the measure.

These and other trade practice developments are recorded on page 16.

Classroom Films

Consideration of ways and means of placing motion pictures in classrooms throughout the United States formed one of the chief topics of discussion at the National Education Association in Atlantic City this week. Similar subjects are to be discussed in Chicago June 20th to 23rd when the National Conference on Visual Education meets at the Francis W. Parker school.

Quality in France

The quality of French production, once accepted as one of the standards of the world but since surpassed, has been improving steadily and during 1937 reached a peak indicated by the winning of three separate awards at the Venice Exposition. Improvement in the financial condition of the French cinema industry, however, while not yet totalled, is not expected to show quite as well.

Pierre Autre, writing from Paris on page 44, reviews the progress of the production branch during the year, and names the outstanding pictures.

Employment, Not Wages

Wage increases, for the first time in years, will be a secondary bargaining issue when producers and heads of the international labor organizations meet in New York late this month to discuss provisions and the extension of the basic labor agreement. With studio labor costs near their all-time peak and with other costs mounting in proportion, union leaders this year say they are more interested in measures for spreading employment than in bargaining for important wage increases. Included in the negotiations in addition to the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and the American Federation of Musicians are the International Brotherhood of Teamsters and Chauffeurs, the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, and the Carpenters and Joiners.

A proposal for spreading employment by staggering work in the studios, already put before the producers by the IATSE, is explained on page 24.

Remaking Industry

A group of educators, in the new Institute for Propaganda Analysis, formed to "help the intelligent citizen detect and analyze propaganda" in public media of expression—press, radio, screen—asserted this week that Hollywood's motion pictures lack social significance and fail to give a realistic view of life. Hollywood producers were further charged with holding back the development of good taste.

Advancing five "popular stereotypes" which it called to be the basis for most Hollywood production, the Institute in its report, which is detailed on page 15, asked for a reconstruction of the motion picture.

Korda's Status

Although revealing that he had talked with Dr. A. H. Giannini, president of United Artists, and with Douglas Fairbanks, Sr., a part owner of the company, John R. Sutro, a member of the board of London Films, said, before sailing for London this week, that the discussions were "personal" and had nothing to do with Alexander Korda's releasing plans. Mr. Sutro, who sailed on the Normandie, said Mr. Korda will remain with United Artists and that no discussions were held regarding the British producer signing an outside releasing or production deal with Paramount. Mr. Sutro also expressed the hope that London Films' $9,000,000 program, now under way, will obtain a greater reception in the American market than London Films' product has in the past. In a general way, he said, he went over exhibition contracts with Emanuel Silverstone, the company's American representative.

MPTOA Bid

Morris Loewenstein, president of the Theatre Owners of Oklahoma, Inc., has addressed a letter to each officer and member of the board of directors of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, inviting the MPTOA to hold its national convention in Oklahoma City.

In his letter, Mr. Loewenstein, who is also chairman of the convention committee, said: "The writer told Ed Kuykendall (president of the MPTOA) that, while we couldn't supply some of the playboy elegance of prior convention cities, we would give you a genuinely sincere opportunity for the constructive working out of exhibitor problems—a meeting that will justify the presence of every leader interested in the welfare of this great industry. . . ."

Allied States Association is planning an elaborate entertainment program for its national convention which is scheduled for May 17, 18 and 19 in Pittsburgh, M. A. Rosenberg, president of the Western Pennsylvania unit, said this week in New York.

Co-Trustees

Edward L. Alperson and Lloyd Wright will act as co-trustees in the reorganization of Grand National under Section 77B of the Bankruptcy Act as a result of the court proceedings in Hollywood last week.

Mr. Alperson made the appointment possible by signing the petition for the reorganization in proceedings before United States District Judge William James. The court set March 12 as the date for a hearing and gave Mr. Alperson and Mr. Wright 30 days in which to develop a plan of reorganization.

Rumors that the Bank of America is interested in the refinancing of Grand National were denied in Hollywood this week by Dr. A. H. Giannini, chairman of the executive committee of the bank.

Monogram Directorate

Seven directors of Monogram Pictures Corporation were reelected at an annual stockholders' meeting Wednesday at the home office. They are W. Ray Johnston, Scott R. Dunlap, J. A. Sisto, Sol Rosenblatt, Trem Carr, William Rhinelandier Stewart and O. Henry Briggs. Officers reelected were Mr. Johnston, president; Mr. Dunlap, vice-president for production; Leon Fromkiss, treasurer; M. S. White, secretary; J. P. Friedhoff, controller, and Hugh G. Davis, assistant controller.

Mr. Johnston has called a meeting of Monogram franchise holders to be held in St. Louis, Friday, Saturday and Sunday of this week.

Radio Taxes

The Federal government would derive an estimated annual income of between $5,000,000 and $7,000,000 from the radio industry under a taxation bill proposed this week in the House of Representatives. The bill provides for imposing a levy upon broadcasting stations, based on the power authorized. The week also brought the cancellation of the Warner Brothers program, "Your Hollywood Parade," which is sponsored by the American Tobacco Company.

Advocates Missing

After repeated demands for action, the Chicago Council this week held a hearing on a proposed ordinance to ban double-feature programs by limiting the length of all shows to two and a half hours. The hearing lasted three minutes and failed to produce any advocates of the suggested measure. Agitation against double bills, however, was started in Milwaukee, Kansas City and Omaha.

The double feature situation is discussed in an article on page 24.

Bureau of Fine Arts

A subcommittee of the Senate Committee on Education and Labor started hearings this week on the Pepper-Coffee bill for establishment of a permanent Federal bureau of fine arts. Burgess Meredith, acting president of Actors' Equity, told the committee that proponents of the measure are prepared to conduct a militant campaign for its enactment. Robert Montgomery, president of the Screen Actors Guild, sent a telegram to the committee, endorsing the measure.

Details are on page 17.

New York Allied

Allied has been carrying on a quiet organizing drive in Albany, N. Y., which has developed to the point where officers are to be elected next month, Arthur K. Howard, business manager of Independent Exhibitors, Inc., said this week. Mr. Howard said the organization has been chartered as Allied Theatre Owners of New York, Inc., and has 120 members.

Mr. Howard said he plans to extend his organizing efforts to Buffalo and hopes to open Allied offices in Albany, New York City and Buffalo.

A meeting was held in the Hotel Lincoln, New York City, this week with more than 100 theatres represented, it was said.

Harry Brandt, president of the Independent Theatre Owners Association of New York, said that "Allied's attempt to organize a unit in New York City is Abram F. Myers' way of retaliating against the ITOA for our opposition to Allied's policies and tactics." He claimed that there were only four exhibitors at the organization meeting at the Hotel Lincoln.

Heads Studio

Moe J. Siegel, president of Republic, who arrived in Hollywood over the weekend, after a series of conferences with New York executives of the company, takes on the duties and title of managing director of Republic Productions in Hollywood, according to an announcement made this week by Herbert J. Yates. Mr. Siegel will be in complete executive charge of the company's studio.

The appointment is in line with the new studio setup which moves Sol C. Siegel up to the post of producer of all the company's feature pictures, and Charles E. Ford assuming Mr. Siegel's post as producer of all westerns and serials. Republic has approximately 40 features, 24 westerns and 4 serials lined up for new season announcement.

The moves complete the realignment of personnel.

JOSEPH M. SCHENCK, new president of Motion Picture Producers, Inc., standing with Louis B. Mayer, retiring president of the organization, at the dinner and ball held in honor of Mr. Mayer and in tribute to his achievements during the seven years of his incumbency. Among the 500 guests at the event in the Biltmore Hotel, Los Angeles, were representatives of Government, clergy, finance, society and the press as well as notables of the motion picture world. The speakers were Mr. Schenck, Governor Frank F. Merriam, Norma Shearer, Cecil B. DeMille, Archbishop John J. Cantwell of the diocese of Los Angeles, Will H. Hays and Mr. Mayer. At the left of Mr. Schenck and Mr. Mayer in the picture are Darryl F. Zanuck, Jeanette MacDonald and George Jessel, master of ceremonies.

This Week In Pictures

Mary Pickford and her husband, Buddy Rogers, with Major Frank W. Bering, manager of the Hotel Sherman, Chicago, above, as host and hostess at a cocktail party at the hotel. Guests were informed by Miss Pickford of her intention to write a book about Hollywood this spring and summer while touring South America with her husband whose orchestra is booked for engagements in the Latin American countries.

J. J. Wessel, left, retiring chief baker, and Joseph J. Oulaban, newly elected to that office by the Cincinnati Variety Club, Tent No. 3. Mr. Oulaban's duties will revolve largely around the administration of a welfare program, under which films are supplied to orphans and hospital patients, and an iron lung, owned by the tent, made available for paralysis treatment.

Hollywood yachtsmen who go to sea this season will sail under the command of Lee Tracy, RKO star, shown above receiving his ensign as rear commodore of the Pacific Writers Yacht Club from Max De Vega, fleet captain, and Tom Reed, commodore.

Augustin Lara, left, Latin American composer, was brought to Hollywood from Mexico by Paramount to write the music for "Tropic Holiday," according to the company, after search for authentic Latin American music. The studio caption informs that Senor Lara composes "on the piano, chop-stick style," but says nothing of his method for the typewriter.

U. S. WARNS OF THREATS TO HOLLYWOOD ABROAD

Rate of Increase of Film Exports Declines as Foreign Countries Aid Own Industry with Restrictions

"The problems of rising nationalism, of quotas, discrimination, subsidy, exchange restrictions and tariff barriers must be adjusted "if the American motion picture is to operate on as wide a scale as heretofore in the world's markets," the United States Government officially warned this week, taking cognizance of the various troublesome situations now facing American motion pictures abroad.

The accompanying table of exports of American motion pictures, negative and positive, shows that while there was an increase of 6,070,552 linear feet in 1937 over the preceding year, the increase was two-fifths less than for the year 1936 over 1935, when the gain had been 9,960,783 linear feet.

The Government's warning of widespread agitation aimed to supplant Hollywood films with those of foreign countries' own industries, follows publication last week in MOTION PICTURE HERALD of the report of a "Pact of Four," involving Italy, Germany, France and England, was being negotiated to "freeze" American films out of the foreign market. The movement was discussed by Joseph D. Ravotto in dispatches from Rome, where Italian producers and press were reported openly discussing the project, even though London, Berlin and Paris denied knowing of any such activity.

Building Own Industries

Apparently mindful that Hollywood motion pictures purportedly sell $100,000,000 worth of American manufactures abroad each year, a demand created in foreign markets after the articles are seen in Hollywood films, the United States Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, through its Motion Picture Division, this week completed a study which brought the conclusion that foreign countries' determination to establish their own producing industries threatened to cut down Hollywood film sales.

The Government offered no concrete plan for hurdling the barriers to the foreign markets, from which American distributors are variously estimated to have been receiving as much as 35 per cent of their total gross rental revenue. The Bureau predicts that "in their struggle to hold the high and richly deserved position which they have won abroad, American motion pictures will rely in the future as in the past on the qualities that foreign audiences have always so keenly appreciated—the qualities of story value, variety of theme and locale, fine acting by artists from every country, scenic investiture, technical proficiency, ingenuity in the devising of special efforts, and, in general, vivid humor and truly compelling drama, all combining to create engrossing entertainment which appeals to foreign audiences from Stockholm to Capetown and from Valparaiso to Rangoon."

While, according to the Government estimates, American motion pictures were shown last year in more than 80 countries to the extent of 70 per cent of all screen time, in some countries as much as 95 per cent, emphasis was

ITALIAN CURRENCY PAYS TRAVEL COST

A way to "export" some of the embargoed currency from Italy has been found by the foreign departments of the film companies. They buy transportation, both ways, for trips abroad for foreign representatives.

Mario Zama, Warner Brothers general manager in Italy, arrived here three weeks ago accompanied by C. L. Conradsen, manager for Warners in Scandinavia. Passage for both was bought in Italy and Mr. Conradsen went from Stockholm to Naples where he and Mr. Zama embarked for the United States.

After their visit here, which included five days in Hollywood, both men left Saturday on the Rex for the return trip, which was bought with Italian money before they sailed from Naples. Mr. Conradsen will go from Italy to Paris, thence to Stockholm.

Buying transportation in this manner is a common practice among American companies who cannot take their funds beyond the boundaries of Italy, it was said.

In the past year, said the Department, foreign production approximated 1,809 features, compared with 1,400 in 1936. The Far East and Near East led with 959 for 1937, an increase of 285 over 1936. Japan produced 500 films, India 350, China 52, the Philippines 32, Egypt 19, and Australia six.

Europe produced 760 features in 1937, or 30 more than in 1936. Of the 760 produced, the following countries made the largest contributions: England 225, Germany 125, France 123, Russia 60, Czechoslovakia 47, Italy 37, Hungary 35, Sweden 25, Poland 20, Finland 14, Denmark 13, Australia 10, Belgium six, Portugal six, Norway four, Switzerland three, Netherlands three, Turkey two, Latvia one and Rumania one.

Production in Latin America in 1937 totaled 90 features, an increase of 34. Leading producing countries were Mexico 52, Argentina 30, Brazil four, Peru two, and Uruguay and Cuba one each.

"With the increased restrictions imposed upon motion pictures by foreign governments," the U. S. report continued, "one discerns a marked tendency to prevent the motion picture from maintaining the truly international character or position which it has held for so many years. Hollywood still maintains its reputation for internationalism, as it knows no barriers in assembling the finest of talent and technicians from all parts of the world. In many foreign countries, bent upon establishing their own domestic film industry regardless of the methods employed, the motion picture screen is being used primarily for the dissemination of nationalistic propaganda.

Pressure by Governments

"Such policies sometimes react in the opposite direction, as evidenced in those markets which have created domestic industries to bolster nationalism. Exhibitors in some markets are forced by government decrees to hold domestic-made films for longer runs than the subject merits, despite the evident aversion to these films on the part of patrons. A striking revulsion on the part of foreign theatre patrons might conceivably come about in 1938; they may become so surfeited with this type of propaganda film that they may act to induce their government to abolish quotas and foreign-exchange restrictions and thus permit American pictures to be shown, so that they may get what they pay for when they go to the theatre, namely, good entertainment.

"The true character of the 'film industries' which ardent nationalistic interests are vainly striving to create in certain foreign countries may be vividly illustrated by brief quotations from two reports received in the U. S. Regarding the 'motion-picture industry' of one of the smaller (but important) western European countries, we learn that 'production facilities are not adequate, and the industry is not only poorly financed but precarious, film producers leading what amounts to a hand-to-mouth existence. The technique of the local men is not comparable with that shown in American films.' In a large country in southeastern Europe we find that 'the existing companies are small, poorly organized, and inadequately financed. Under such conditions they are unable to do any serious work. It is believed that most of them will eventually go out of business.' That, then, is the situation in two nations which are endeavoring, in a tentative and sporadic manner, to conjure up a film industry which would doubtless be inherently uneconomic."

The report on foreign barriers also said, "These 'totalitarian' trends in various areas have brought significant repercussions in the film business. The undeclared hostilities in the Far East, the civil war in Spain, and the unsettled conditions in other parts of the world have occasioned our American film distributors considerable concern and have unquestionably resulted in substantial losses of revenue.

"On the other hand, one may confidently and vigorously assert that American films retain a gratifying popularity with nearly all foreign audiences, that they are ordinarily received with admiration and enthusiasm, and that the spontaneous demand for them is genuinely powerful."

Restrictions Intensified

"Restrictions against film imports were considerably intensified by certain governments during 1937, and new quotas are looming on the horizon for 1938," the government report warned, citing England as the chief instance. "The workability of the quota legislation in Australia and New Zealand is something that only the next 12 months can answer."

"While Germany has a quota act, censoring is the real bugaboo in the distribution of American films. Dual censorship is in vogue in that market. American films coming into Germany are subjected to the approval, first, of the Contingent Office, and subsequently of the Board of Censors. The former permits or disallows the entry of film simply on the basis of the personnel concerned in its production and distribution. The Board of Censors reviews the film itself, approves or rejects it, requires cuts and alterations, etc. 'Dubbed' German text is also censored and must be approved by the Board. The entire German motion picture industry has now been regimented under Government control. Subsidies are paid to producers from taxes and from contingent licenses to German film exporters. Regulations enacted now require that permission must be obtained from the Reich Film Chamber for the establishment of any new enterprises for the production, distribution, preparation, or performance of motion picture films."

Favoring Domestic Companies

In a supplementary report, the Commerce Department cited still another Nazi decree by the Reich Film Chamber, by which producers in Germany in future will be entitled to increase their distribution rates beyond the present rates if the costs of a film are especially high. This increase, however, is subject to the approval of the Reich Price Commissioner who checks the calculation. The objective is to induce native producers or distributors to undertake the making of "super-films" to remedy the situation of German film business abroad, "which has been consistently disappointing."

In the first three months of 1937-38, there were 514 films shown in Germany. Of these, 449 were of German origin; of the 65 films of foreign origin, 34 were American.

Restrictions in France

The Commerce Department warned also of the conditions in France: "New censorship regulations promulgated by the Government's Board of Censorship provide for the banning of films that might affect the prestige of the French Army or other governmental agencies, or provoke diplomatic incidents with foreign countries, or which show crime or criminals in such a way as to have an injurious influence on the minds of youth."

"It is understood that the French Ministry of National Education is preparing a film bill which would provide for cooperative control and operation of the motion picture industry. Certain sections of this legislative measure are expected to provide for the virtual nationalization of the film industry. The bill is said to include provisions for 'pre-censorship,' a 'dubbing' tax, a central film syndicate, a central cinema commission, and a central collecting agency, which would control all monies in the film industry, collect all revenues from the release of films, and, in reality, supplant completely the distributors as they are now constituted. The decisions of these proposed dictatorial bodies would be absolutely binding on every person in the film industry. If such a measure were adopted, American companies would be confronted with great difficulties in France," in the opinion of the Bureau.

The report added that "on the whole the French people are beginning to prefer their own films in view of the marked improvement in French production during the past year, in which several notable successes have been released in France." It emphasized, however, that American productions "continue to enjoy a decided preference over English and German films. At the present time German films arouse very little interest in France."

There were 182 "dubbed" films censored

Rate of Increase of Film Exports Declines in Three-Year Comparison

Evidence of the effect of foreign quotas, censorship and taxation restrictions and rising nationalism, described by the Motion Picture Division of the Department of Foreign and Domestic Commerce in the accompanying article, upon exports of American motion pictures is shown in a three year comparison of footage shipped out of the United States. While there was an increase in 1937 over 1936, the total increase was considerably smaller than in 1936 over 1935. The tabulated comparison follows:

	1937 Quantity-Feet	1936 Quantity-Feet	1935 Quantity-Feet
Negative—
Silent	3,038,623	2,143,939	3,025,950
Sound	9,586,631	9,904,111	8,890,598
Positive—
Silent	2,851,039	1,695,980	2,206,235
Sound	200,245,663	195,907,374	185,567,838
Total	215,721,956	209,651,404	199,690,621

The increase of 1937 over 1936 was 6,070,552 linear feet, whereas there was a gain of 9,960,783 feet in 1936 over the year 1935.

from Jan. 1, 1937, to Nov. 23, 1937, listed as follows: German, 14; American, 140; Spanish, 2; English, 15; Austrian, 1; Russian, 3; Italian, 3; Hungarian, 2; Polish, 1; Czech, 1.

Britain and the Quota

"As proof that an industry cannot be legislated into being," the Department said, "one need only look at Great Britain. Ten years ago there was inaugurated a quota system designed to assist and promote a national industry. During the past ten years Great Britain has produced more films than ever before. But ordinarily they were not of the type enjoyed by the motion picture public of the world. Seemingly, they were not even enjoyed by the British public. The result was that theatres, to stay within the law and meet their quota footage, were obliged to show these pictures at hours during the day when patronage was either nil or at its minimum."

"Great Britain during 1937 produced 225 feature films, of which but a handful received world distribution, without which they cannot be financially successful. It might perhaps be best if the British producers would produce fewer pictures, whose chief ingredient should be quality and audience appeal, instead of concentrating upon inferior quantity productions which have been given 'artificial respiration' through legislative quotas and contingent systems."

In Mexico, the report continued, "taxes and labor limitations have militated against our American interests doing business in that market."

"There are intimations from Brazil of some sort of legislation which might affect distribution of our films during 1938. Such developments are rather disconcertingly common. Several other South American nations apparently contemplate attempts to legislate a domestic motion picture industry into being at the expense of American interests."

"During 1935 and 1936, money embargoes were eased up to some extent, but 1937 saw a more stringent application of foreign-exchange restrictions in many nations. Few markets of South America are without exchange-control restrictions. Restrictions in Europe on foreign exchange are often so drastic that it is virtually impossible to get money out of some of the markets. The same applies to Japan and China and other parts of the Far East."

The Commerce Department also pointed to Rumania, where "the distribution of American films is in danger of becoming complicated by difficulties over the payment of customs duties and income taxes."

The American Consul at Bucharest advised the Commerce Department that in accordance with a decision of the Ministry of Finance, the average value of motion picture films, including newsreels, on which the import, turnover, and luxury taxes are based, has been increased so that distributor-importers will pay a minimum of $940 per 100 kilograms for first copies, and about $450 per 100 kilograms for additional copies, to cover all import taxes, turnover taxes, communal and other minor taxes.

The Rumanian customs officials will have the right to examine the books of local distributors to determine what sums they have attempted or will attempt to transfer abroad on each picture, with heavy fines possible if the sum differs from the valuation given when the film was cleared through customs.

Censorship in Balkans

"In the Balkan Peninsula, as elsewhere, censorship troubles frequently obtrude," the Commerce report continued. "To cite a single example, one finds that in Greece, whose governmental system is now strongly authoritarian, one may expect prompt banning of motion pictures that are even remotely connected with political or social revolutionary movements of any nature, and the prohibition normally applies even to historical films portraying events in the French Revolution more than a century and a half ago."

On the other hand, so called "educational" films from America stand to benefit, a total of 150 of this class having been set for importation into Greece, duty-free, according to a new governmental decree.

"In Austria," according to the U. S. report, "there appears to be a movement for new restrictions against American films. While no official information has been forthcoming, it is expected that the new restrictions probably will take the form of a law to provide for increased titling in Austria." This, said the Bureau, would make the market unprofitable for Americans.

Of 328 sound features shown in Austria in 1937, as against 343 in 1936, there were 128 American and 120 German, the attache reported.

The Czech Market

"Foreign exchange control, high import registration fees, a dual form of censorship, exorbitant taxes, and the question of the right of American companies to do business in Czechoslovakia, combine to make that market a constant source of anxiety and vexation to American film distributors," according to the Commerce Department. "Some concessions may be received under the reciprocal trade agreement now being negotiated between the United States and Czechoslovakia."

"In Egypt," it was said, "nationalistic feeling is still running high, and Egyptian producers are pressing upon the government their recommendations that legislation should be enacted for all theatres in Egypt requiring them to show a quota of Egyptian films, in order to encourage the infant Egyptian film industry." It was expected that this proposal would not be favorably acted upon, because of the lack of facilities.

Italian Agreement Expiring

Turning to Italy, the Bureau noted that the agreement between the American film companies and the Italian government permitting the importation of 250 American films and the right to export 20,000,000 lire expires in June, 1938. "Whether this agreement will be extended remains to be seen."

"Up until July, 1937, theatres in Italy were compelled by law to show one Italian picture for every three foreign films. A Ministerial decree of July, 1937, changed this, and the ratio has been reduced to one Italian picture for every two foreign pictures. In Italy all films must be 'dubbed' in the Italian language, and such 'dubbing' must be done in Italy.. The tax on 'dubbing' has been increased."

The Commerce Department also warned that in Argentina "there is a possibility that the Instituto Cinematografico Argentino, an official agency created in 1935, empowered to regulate all phases of the film industry in Argentina, will propose some sort of quota or contingent law."

The Commerce Department found "the Japanese market for American films threatened with several discouraging factors."

"After the present supply of American pictures already placed in that market is used up, it is not improbable that Japan will cease thereafter to be a field of importance to the American industry. With Japanese occupation of certain parts of China, restrictions on American motion picture activities paralleling those in Japanese-controlled Kwantung Peninsula and in 'Manchukuo' may be imposed in those areas of China also. Films restrictions and an embargo on the shipment of monies were put in effect in Japan in September, 1937."

Cable advices from the American Commercial Attache at Shanghai said up to August, the industry had enjoyed a substantial increase over

THREE-WAY TOURIST UNION CONTEMPLATED

The suggestion of Propaganda Minister Goebbels of Germany, that his country and Japan cooperate toward booming tourist trade in the two countries has met with approval in Japan. As a result the Japanese board of tourist industry is undertaking to exchange "cultural" and travel films as a means of cementing still further the ties that bind the three co-signatories of the Anti-Comintern Pact. The board is seeking to obtain Italy's consent to the formation of a three-nation tourist union to further the plan.

It already has been decided to send to Germany some of the features produced by the board.

In return, Germany plans to send a number of propaganda films to Japan.

An invitation has been sent to Italy, asking it to join in the proposed union. If an encouraging reply is received, the board expects to open a branch office in Rome, similar to its office in Berlin.

the preceding year but since then business had fallen off approximately 50 per cent.

An income tax on earnings derived from the exploitation of motion pictures by foreign entities or individuals not domiciled in that country has just been imposed in Colombia.

According to the commercial Attache in Guatemala, the President there has approved an executive order requiring that all individuals or companies desiring to take motion pictures in the country must obtain authority from the Ministry of Education.

The Netherlands India Film Censorship Commission announced that the exhibition of newsreel scenes of military, naval or air force operations connected with the Sino-Japanese conflict would not be allowed, the Government Bureau said. There is a large local Chinese population.

'U' Adds Million To '37-38 Budget

Nate Blumberg and Charles R. Rogers, president and production executive of Universal, announced on Wednesday the addition of $1,000,000 to the budget for the remainder of the company's 1937-38 schedule.

Five specials have been set for monthly release starting in May, "Halfway to Shanghai," "Suspicion," "Rage of Paris," "My Letter of Introduction," a John M. Stahl production with Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy, Andrea Leeds and Adolph Menjou, and "That Certain Age," Deanna Durbin's next picture.

Japanese Select Ten Best Sellers

by HIROMU TOMINAGA
in Tokyo

A poll conducted recently by Kinema-Jumpo, national Japanese motion picture journal, to determine the ten best boxoffice pictures of the year resulted in the selection of nine American films and one French feature. The selections were: "Charge of the Light Brigade," "The Good Earth," "Michael Strogoff," "Lost Horizon," "Port Arthur," "The Plainsman," "Swing High, Swing Low," "Shall We Dance?" "Souls at Sea" and "Les Bas-fonds."

The films were selected from those which had run two or more consecutive weeks on first run release and which had proved good attractions not only in those situations but in subsequent runs.

In another poll conducted among 30 leading film critics of Japan to determine the ten most outstanding productions, apart from their boxoffice value, the following in the order of their selection, were named: "La Kermesse Heroique," French; "La Belle Equipe," French; "Les Bas-fonds," French; "Dodsworth," American; "Make Way for Tomorrow," American; "Club de Femmes," French; "The Good Earth," American; "Le Golem," Czecho-Slovakian; "You Only Live Once," American, and "Fury," American.

The critics also named the following as the ten best Japanese productions: "Kagiri-naki Zenshin" ("Endless March"), "Sohbo" ("The Peoples"), "Aiyenkyo" ("Love and Hatred"), "Kazeno Naka-no Kodomo" ("Children in the Wind"), "Hadakano Machi" ("The Naked Town"), "Wakai Hito" ("The Young"), "Ninjo Kami-Fusen" ("A Loving Paper Balloon"), "Shukujō Wa Nanio Waseretaka" ("What the Lady Left Behind"), "Osaka Natsu-no Jin" ("The Summer Battle of Osaka") and "Asakusa-no Hi" ("The Light of Asakusa").

Hutchinson Says Latin Films Compete with U. S. Product

W. J. Hutchinson, foreign manager of Twentieth Century-Fox, due in New York March 8th from a seven-week trip of South and Central America, has advised the home office that Spanish language films are offering increased competition to American product in Latin America.

The domestic product has cut so deeply into the revenue of foreign distributors that some arrangement will have to be made whereby the playtime situation can be better controlled, Mr. Hutchinson said.

There has been a considerable growth in the independent distribution of film made in Mexico and South America which, while sold on low terms, are doing outstanding business, due to the public's increasing support of films with a domestic flavor and in the native language, and this is making the market more difficult, it was said.

NOW COME EDUCATORS WITH PLEA FOR FILMS OF "SOCIAL INSIGHT"

Group Calling Selves "Institute for Propaganda Analysis" Accuse Producers of Using "Stereotype" Stories

A new group of first-rank educators, calling themselves the Institute for Propaganda Analysis, headquartered in the region of Columbia University in New York, this week set out to tell the motion picture industry what to do.

The Institute demands that the screen should take up the burden of developing social insight and illuminating human problems.

Charging that Hollywood producers are holding back the development of good taste, that their "stereotype" screen stories fail to give a realistic view of life, the educators called for motion pictures having "social significance." "Excuses" by producers that such product has questionable mass box office value were met with the citation of evidence of pictures having both social significance and box office success.

The Institute for Propaganda Analysis, Inc., of 132 Morningside Drive, New York, was formed by educators last September, "to help the intelligent citizen detect and analyze propaganda." Propaganda, according to the Institute's idea of the general conception, is "an expression of opinion or action by individuals or groups deliberately designed to influence opinions or actions of other individuals or groups with reference to predetermined ends." The motion picture is charged with advancing "popular stereotypes which can play significant parts in conscious or unconscious propaganda," and which "stereotypes" are described by the Institute as follows:

"Stereotypes" Listed as Faults

1. The successful culmination of a romance will solve most of the dilemmas of the hero and the heroine. What young lovers are going to live on in a world of insecurity and unemployment reaches the screen only rarely, as, for example, in 'Gentlemen Are Born.'

"2. Catch the criminal and you solve the crime problem. Only rarely does a movie give us some insight into unemployment, slums, insecurity, as causes for crime, notable exceptions are 'Dead End,' 'The Devil Is a Sissy,' and 'I Am a Fugitive From a Chain Gang.'

"3. War and the preparation for war are thrilling, heroic and glamorous. For one 'Broken Lullaby,' 'All Quiet on the Western Front,' or 'The Road Back,' we have had dozens of films such as 'West Point of the Air,' 'Annapolis Farewell,' 'Flirtation Walk,' 'Shipmates Forever,' 'Here Comes the Navy,' 'Devil Dogs of the Air,' and 'Navy Blue and Gold.'

"4. The good life is the acquisitive life with its emphasis on luxury, fine homes and automobiles, evening dress, swank and snarvity. Note, for example, the economic level of residences shown in a random selection of 40 feature motion pictures. Of the 228 different residences appearing in these movies, 22 per cent were classifiable as ultra-wealthy, 47 per cent as wealthy, and 25 per cent moderate. Only four per cent were shown as visibly poor. . . .

"5. Certain races, nationalities, or minority groups are comical, dull-witted, or possess traits

A NEW KIND OF COMPLAINT

American films were blamed as one contributing cause to a lack of national unity in Canada when M. E. Nichols, managing director of the Vancouver Daily Province addressed the Canadian Institute in Vancouver, B. C.

Mr. Nichols said that unintentional propaganda from the United States was making a spirit of national unity impossible in Canada. He attributed this to American motion pictures and magazines.

that mark them as greatly different from and inferior to native white Americans. We see this in the portrayal of the Negro in roles of inferiority, in the monocled and simpering Englishman. Studies of the stereotypes held by college students show that many influences have been at work in producing grossly inaccurate portraits of races and nationalities."

Issues Monthly Letter

The Institute publicizes its theories through a monthly letter, "circulated privately to educators and students, publishers and journalists, business men and trade unionists, ministers and welfare workers, and to all who desire periodic, objective appraisals of today's propagandas, their sources and the channels through they flow; newspapers, magazines, radio stations, motion pictures, labor and business groups, patriotic societies, farm organizations, schools, churches, political parties."

The Institute's sponsors, board of directors and advisory board, all in one, are composed of the following:

CHARLES A. BEARD, American historian; FRANK E. BAKER, President of Milwaukee State Teachers College; PERCY S. BROWN, Good Will Fund; HADLEY CANTRIL, Associate Professor of Psychology, Princeton University; EDGAR DALE, Associate Professor of Education, Ohio State University; NED H. DEARBORN, Dean of the Division of General Education, New York University; PAUL DOUGLAS, Professor of Economics, University of Chicago; F. ERNEST JOHNSON, Professor of Education, Teachers College, Columbia University; E. C. LINDEMAN, Professor of Social Philosophy, New York School of Social Work; ROBERT S. LYND, Professor of Sociology, Columbia University; KIRTLEY MATHER, Professor of Geology, Harvard University; ERNEST O. MELBY, Dean of the School of Education, Northwestern University; CLYDE R. MILLER, Associate Professor of Education, Teachers College, Columbia University; JAMES T. SHOTWELL, Professor of History, Columbia University; ROBERT K. SPEER, Professor of Education, New York University.

Officers are Hadley Cantril, president; Ernest O. Melby, vice-president; Clyde R. Miller, secretary, and Robert K. Speer, treasurer, all members of the directorate.

The officers and directors charged that today, in press, radio and motion pictures, 'America is beset by a confusion of conflicting propagandas, a Babel of voices, warnings, charges, counter-charges, assertions, and contradictions assailing us continually.'

The Institute turned to the motion picture as one of the first media of public expression to be "examined" and "revealed for what it is," and the basis of the Institute's conclusions were that "the movies, like great literature and drama, should enlighten as well as entertain," and should contribute "something to people's understanding of themselves and of the world in which they live."

"The motion picture, while giving people enjoyment through fantasy, gives this enjoyment within the framework of commonly accepted stereotypes and thereby exerts an influence which tends to strengthen them and to prevent criticism of them. Only in rare instances is it an agency for illuminating problems of human conduct, for developing social insight, for encouraging a review of our beliefs and customs, of our modes of governments, and of the relationship between peoples and races.

"Stock Responses"

"Contenting themselves with evoking stock responses to such stereotypes as those listed, the motion picture producers provide few films which give opportunity for other responses. Eight major producing companies dominate the industry. They are influenced not alone by the stereotypes common to America but to the censors of foreign countries.

The Institute asserted that "an easy, quick and partially valid reply to the charges of emphasis on certain stereotypes is that such emphasis is essential to profitable mass appeal. Yet this answer is too facile. We know that such motion pictures as 'Dead End' (United Artists), 'The Story of Louis Pasteur' (Warners), and 'The Life of Emile Zola' (Warners) have played profitably to huge audiences. We know that the policy of Warner Brothers in producing clarifying social documents such as 'They Won't Forget,' 'Black Legion,' 'I Am a Fugitive,' has met with financial success.

Example of Literature Cited

"To ask that the motion picture should contribute to social enlightenment is to ask no more than that it should do something which has always been done by great novelists and dramatists. It is asking that the motion picture industry should do more of what it has already done so well in such films as 'The Life of Emile Zola.' The success of such films proves that public taste is capable of appreciating films of much greater social value than the majority that are produced by the industry. Here the student of propaganda must ask why the industry seems to lag behind, and even to hold back, the development of public taste. He might also ask whether the praise that has been given to the motion picture by some distinguished men in the industry on the grounds that it allayed social discontent, was not perhaps a factor in the situation."

Turning to newsreels, the Institute said, "In spite of criticisms, a careful examination of newsreel content over a period of years shows that they have presented unbiased factual information on many current controversies."

The Institute said that financial support for its start was forthcoming from Good Will Fund, Inc., a charitable corporation financed by the late Edward A. Filene, Boston department store owner and philanthropist. The Institute hoped "that eventually the Institute will be self-supporting. Income from the sale of its letters (issued monthly at $2.00 the year), and donations from organizations and individuals will be used to increase the scope of its research and permit it to issue special letters or bulletins when occasions warrant."

EXHIBITORS DIFFER ON BLOCK BOOKING BILL

Ohio Independents Commend Neely Measure; New York ITOA Calls It Impracticable

Contrary viewpoints on the possible value of the Neely anti-block booking bill, pending in the Senate, were expressed this week by two exhibitor organizations, the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio and New York's Independent Theatre Owners Association.

In Washington, opponents of the measure gathered their forces for an attempt to prevent enactment of the bill during the current session of congress by seeking to have the legislation recommitted to the commerce committee.

Support for the legislation, introduced by Matthew Neely, senator of West Virginia, was urged in a service bulletin issued by P. J. Wood, secretary of Ohio's ITO. The New York group attacked the proposed law, calling it legislation which would "add cost and give us a headache."

It was also disclosed in Washington this week that a nationwide anti-trust attack upon the motion picture industry, involving cases in every exchange district, may be undertaken within the next few months by the Department of Justice.

The inquiry, based on hundreds of complaints which have been filed with the department, was directed principally to the block booking situation and particularly the inability of independent exhibitors to secure first-class films.

While refusing to discuss the matter in detail, officials of the department indicated that many weeks would be required for the study of the field agents' reports and the development of any campaign which may be undertaken as a result. However, it was said, the inquiry has been general, and conditions in practically every exchange territory have been studied.

Other developments on trade practices were:

The holding of hearings by the senate judiciary committee on the revised Borah-O'Mahoney bill, which is designed to eliminate violations of the anti-trust laws by licensing all corporations, including film companies, engaged in interstate commerce;

The adjournment of a hearing on Paramount's idea for an injunction to prevent enforcement of North Dakota's theatre "divorcement" law, the effective date of which was postponed from March 15th to March 22d;

Settlement, for $3,000, of an anti-trust suit brought by George Fuller of Pensacola, Fla., against seven film distributors.

Objectors to the Neely bill are expected to take advantage of the opportunity afforded by the failure of the commerce committee to hold hearings on the bill before reporting it, said Francis L. Burt, of the MOTION PICTURE HERALD bureau in Washington.

In reporting the bill, the committee relied upon the testimony taken at hearings two years ago. Opponents of the measure will contend that the committee should have made a further study to determine whether the evils of which it then complained had been eliminated by the film industry.

Mr. Wood, in his bulletin, pointed out that adoption of the legislation "would not prohibit exhibitors from buying in blocks, if they so desire."

The New York ITOA predicted the bill will never become a law" and declared that "there are not 10 exhibitors in the United States, independent or otherwise, who are interested in block booking." The organization said exhibitors want to buy a known quantity but declared the provisions in the Neely bill are impracticable.

Would Require Licenses

Licenses, under the Borah-O'Mahoney bill, would be required for all corporations which, by themselves or in consolidation with their subsidiaries, have assets with a book value of more than $100,000. The licensing provision would become effective on January 1st, of the year following enactment of the measure.

To obtain a license, a corporation would be required to report to the Federal Trade Commission all details of its organization and financial structure; the character of its transactions in interstate or foreign commerce; the terms, position, rights and privileges of the various classes of its outstanding securities; bonded indebtedness, and other details of its securities; contracts with promoters and with financial interests with respect to the organization of management, and service contracts; the amount of each class of stock held by each officer and member of its board of directors; its stock interests in any other corporations, and such other information as may be required.

The bill would eliminate control of corporations by persons not financially interested in them.

The bill was designed by its authors, Senators William E. Borah, of Idaho, and Joseph C. O'Mahoney of Wyoming, as a vehicle to give full effect to the anti-trust laws. Adoption of the bill, the two senators said, will make unnecessary the proposed revision of anti-trust statutes.

First witness before the committee at the opening of its hearings Tuesday was Elmer T. Cunningham, former president of Radio Corporation of America Manufacturing Company, appearing on behalf of the National Association of Manufacturers.

Enactment of the bill, Mr. Cunningham warned, would result in retarding recovery and increasing unemployment at a time when all efforts should be directed to the encouragement of business.

The former RCA officer dissected the bill, showing that the failure of licensed concerns strictly to adhere to the rigorous conditions which are to be laid down would result in revocation of license, a punishment, he said, of stockholders and employees for the acts of individuals over whom they have no control.

Injunction Petition Up Monday

Paramount's petition for an injunction, preventing enforcement of the North Dakota divorce law, is now scheduled to be heard by a three-judge federal statutory court at Fargo next Monday. The distributor and its subsidiaries, American Amusement Company and Minnesota Amusement Company, contend that state law violates the federal constitution.

Allied States Association sponsored the law which, if it becomes effective, will affect ten theatres operated in North Dakota by the two Paramount subsidiaries.

In addition to seeking the temporary injunction, Paramount has instituted an action to determine the constitutionality of the law. Louis B. Schwartz, counsel for Allied Theatres of the Northwest, and Abram F. Myers, board chairman and general counsel of Allied States, have been appointed special attorneys general to aid the state in defending the action.

Licensing Bill Seen Injurious To All Business

The pending O'Mahoney-Borah Bill for Federal licensing of business organizations, including motion picture companies, "would foist upon American industry bureaucratic regimentation without parallel except in Fascist countries," James H. R. Cromwell, co-author of "In Defense of Capitalism," said at the "Town Meeting of the Air" last Thursday. Speaking on the same program with Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney of Wisconsin, Mr. Cromwell declared that the proposal aimed to use the licensing device "to remake our economic structure."

"Pop-Gun to a Cannon"

"The old N.R.A. was a pop-gun to a cannon compared to the sweeping powers conferred upon the Federal Trade Commission under the projected laws," Mr. Cromwell said. "The N.R.A. could police, regulate and enforce various trade practices voluntarily agreed upon, but it had no power to forbid new or existing enterprise, or to force any business to a full-stop because of some real or technical violation."

"The fact that the Federal Trade Commission may bring within its jurisdiction persons not engaged in interstate commerce if they are competing with corporations federally licensed, thus drawing even local enterprise into the orbit of federal control, is final proof of how completely the present scheme seeks to control economic life in America."

"This measure seeks to direct the flow of virtually all business and enterprise in the United States through the bottle-neck of an omnipotent Federal Bureau."

Industry in Goose-Step

Mr. Cromwell then contrasted the objectives of the bill and its provisions, adding:

"There can be no one sweeping law or plan to regulate the entire economic life of a great nation like this. The living principle of the American system is free enterprise. Certainly there are maladjustments and abuses in our economic system. Surely reforms are needed. But our problems flow from fundamental causes. They cannot be solved by fiat of bureaucracy or by legislative edicts."

Even if one granted that "bureaucrats" might be found to run business better than business men, Mr. Cromwell argued, "the question still remains whether American industry should be regimented and taught to goose-step, or whether it should be given opportunity to create new industries, develop new inventions, initiate new enterprises, and find new services, without which the solution of our employment and other economic problems cannot be achieved."

Little Business Man Hit First

Mr. Cromwell declared that "you cannot shoot at business in general without hitting the most vulnerable, and it's the little business man who is likely to get hit first."

The economic system, he said, needs food, not stimulants; hope of reward, not fear of punishment, should be used to raise the productivity of the system.

"I do not seek to underestimate the seriousness of the problems," Mr. Cromwell declared, "but it would be folly to adopt a remedy which is worse than the disease."

He concluded with the observation: "Since eternal vigilance is the price of liberty, let us never forget that democracy has perished wherever economic freedom has been destroyed."

Admissions Levy Is Discarded by N. Y. Legislature

A suggestion that the two per cent tax on utility incomes in New York be voided and instead a two per cent levy on theatre admissions be voted was discarded when the State Senate this week passed the utility impost with but two dissenting votes.

Juveniles and Toronto

In Toronto, an alternate proposal for relief from the complete ban on juvenile attendance in film theatres of Quebec has been presented to the legislature in a form of a recommendation that the age limit be reduced from 16 to 10 years. In Louisiana, Governor Richard W. Leche is understood planning to submit recommendations for the enactment of a two per cent sales tax to finance social security and relief to the legislature when it reconvenes in May.

In St. Louis, Mo., at a recent conference between the chairman of the Board of Aldermen's 10 committees and Mayor Bernard F. Dickman it was decided to do nothing with the four revenue raising bills that have been pending in the board since last spring until the end of the present session when the state of city finances will be known. In Virginia, Senator A. L. Bivens of Newport News introduced a bill into the state legislature requiring projectionists to be licensed, and to undergo examination before a board.

In Manila, the Philippine legislature is considering four bills incorporating tax proposals affecting the industry, while in Boston, Representative Francis X. Coyne said this week that he was writing letters to every Governor asking for the introduction of bills requiring screen and stage players to file their real names. Representative Coyne has such a bill in the Massachusetts House. A hearing is to be held next week.

In New York Legislature

Senator Thomas F. Burchill of New York has two measures pending in the finance and taxation committee of the upper house of the state legislature. One places an impost of five cents per square foot on both outdoor and building advertising by a State Traffic Commission.

Meanwhile, the Assembly cities committee met Tuesday in Albany, with a number of important bill scheduled for consideration, including that of Assemblyman Robert J. Crews calling for a full crew of motion picture operators and projectionists in theatre booths in New York City and Buffalo.

The Reverend John B. Kelly, a personal representative of Cardinal Hayes of New York, wrote Senator John L. Buckley, chairman of the Senate committee on taxation and retrenchment, saying that "the chain store idea is a source of blessing to the vast majority of our citizens." While the chain store bill presented by Senator Schwartzwald seems to exempt chain theatres, producer-exhibitors feel its enactment would open the doors to amendment in subsequent sessions.

Buffalo territory Motion Picture Theatre Owners directed a brisk communication to Western New York legislators under the signature of legislative chairman Julius H. Michael calling for defeat of the Rossi bill to provide a matron for each 35 children in a theatre.

The Assembly was scheduled to pass Governor Lehman's taxation measures during the week, through Assemblyman Bernard J. Moran of Brooklyn, was known to be ready to speak in favor of substituting his five mills per foot tax on films for one cent of the gasoline impost.

NEW MOVE IN CONGRESS FOR U. S. STAGE BUREAU

Pepper-Coffee Bill for Bureau of Arts Is Subject of Senate Hearings

by FRANCIS L. BURT in Washington

The Works Progress Administration has accomplished "thrilling achievements" which could be continued under Federal patronage of the arts as provided for in the Pepper-Coffee bill for creation of a permanent bureau of fine arts as part of the Federal establishments, a subcommittee of the Senate Committee on Education and Labor was told Monday at the opening of hearings on the legislation.

The bill, introduced in the Senate by Senator Claude Pepper (Dem.) of Florida, and in the House by Representative John M. Coffee (Dem.) of Washington, is the same in intent as the measure written by Representative William I. Sirovich (Dem.) of New York, on which the House Patents Committee held lengthy hearings last month, but is less pretentious, providing only for a bureau in an established department instead of a separate Cabinet position. The Sirovich proposal, hearings disclosed, was merely for a subsidy for the legitimate theatre.

Witnesses before the Senate group, with few exceptions, were the same persons who testified before the House committee. The "lead-off man" was Burgess Meredith, acting president of Actors Equity, who, decrying the present state of the stage, served notice that the proponents of the legislation are prepared to conduct a "militant campaign" until their objective is achieved.

Would Supplant WPA Projects

Only through the adoption of federal patronage can the Government bring about the "preservation and development of American culture," Mr. Meredith told the subcommittee. The proposed bureau, he explained, would supplant the present WPA arts projects through which, he said, much has been done to revitalize the stage.

A large number of communications endorsing the measure have been received by the subcommittee, including a telegram from Robert Montgomery expressing the approval of the Screen Actors Guild, of which he is president.

Headliners testifying at the hearings included Lillian Gish and Jane Cowl, presenting their views as screen and stage players.

Urging the Senate to take advantage of the opportunity "of making a great contribution to the welfare of our country" and creating a basis for the "cultural enlightenment of the entire American people," Miss Gish declared the theatre has been given new life as a result of the arts projects of the WPA.

Emphasizing the need of Governmental action to aid the stage, Miss Cowl called attention to the "strange fact" that American artists give their abilities to everybody "yet are given assistance by no one but themselves."

The views of the musicians, authors and artists of the country were voiced by Roy Harris, Theodore Dreiser and Rockwell Kent, all of whom saw in the proposed bureau an opportunity for the Administration to give to those engaged in the arts the same sympathetic assistance as has been given those in agriculture and industry.

The motion picture industry has a stranglehold on amusements, the subcommittee was told by Orson Welles, New York director of numerous plays including "Julius Caesar," "The Cradle Will Rock," and the WPA production of "Dr. Faustus."

In Richmond, Va., Mr. Welles told the group, he was forced to obtain a special permit to stage a show because of the hold that the film producers had on all amusements in the city.

As at the House hearings, representatives of the WPA arts projects under Mrs. Hallie Flanagan staged a field day Tuesday, detailing to the subcommittee the activities of the various projects.

Exhibitors Protest Canada Music Law

Canadian theatre companies and exhibitors are complaining that the Dominion Parliament did not provide relief for the film industry in the statute curbing the privileges of the Canadian Performing Rights Society, Ltd. (similar to the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers), which was adopted without a dissenting vote and amid general applause in the House of Commons, Toronto, this week.

The measure, sponsored by W. K. Esling, prohibits the society from collecting its annual fee from restaurants, hotels, stores, and other minor places of business for the use of radio or gramophone instruments in such premises, whether public or not. Further, the society cannot now collect a fee for the use of music in skating rinks or sport structures, but the situation with respect to theatres has been left as before.

The new act disallows the claim of the Society to collect royalty on phonograph records on the ground that musical copyright for discs has been satisfied by the manufacturers of records before the marketing of the product. This is exactly the argument of the theatre men—that the imposition of a performing rights fee is a duplication of the score charge paid by exhibitors and that film producers had paid music royalty in the making of films.

Meanwhile, Louis D. Frohlich and Herman Finkelstein of Schwartz & Frohlich, ASCAP counsel, left New York for New Orleans to prepare for the hearing there, which was scheduled to get under way Thursday, of ASCAP's action to test the constitutionality of the Florida statute prohibiting the music licensing society from operating within the state. E. C. Mills, ASCAP general manager, accompanied the attorneys.

WARNERS OFF AIR IN DISAGREEMENT; BROADCASTERS FACE NEW TAXATION

Studio Would Sign Another Radio Deal "If Given Control Over Production of Program," Says Coordinator

Disagreement over production was seen in Hollywood this week as the reason for the announced cancellation of the radio program, "Your Hollywood Parade," which is presented by Warner Brothers studios on Wednesday nights under sponsorship of the American Tobacco Company.

The program will go off the air permanently after the March 23rd broadcast, it was announced simultaneously by Warner Brothers and Lord & Thomas, advertising agency handling the tobacco company account.

No formal announcement of the reason for discontinuing the program after the 16th broadcast was made, but Bob Tapping, studio publicity director and radio coordinator, said the studio would sign another radio deal "if given control over production of the program."

Under the Warner Brothers-American Tobacco Company arrangement the production lineup for the program was under a dual control system, the studio participating on one end and the tobacco company and the advertising agency on the other. Tom McArdy is radio production head of Lord and Thomas.

Ends Warner Participation

It was generally believed that the program would be continued after the advertising agency exercised its option on the "parade" time on the network, but this action, it was pointed out, is the usual practice of a large agency holding advantageous spots on the air. Agencies, it was explained, are sometimes in a position to act as brokers of radio time and are given concessions in matters such as short cancellation notice period.

Had the American Tobacco Company decided to abandon the Wednesday night time entirely, the advertising agency could have switched the spot to any other client or could have made a deal with a new client seeking such time.

Kay Kyser's "Musical College," also sponsored by the tobacco company, will take over the time occupied by "Your Hollywood Parade." The Kyser show is currently on the Mutual Broadcasting System and a possibility was seen that the show may double up on the two networks, NBC and Mutual. The sponsor is now seeking a program to replace the Kyser show on Mutual. If none can be found, the tobacco company, which used "Your Hollywood Parade" to advertise Lucky Strike cigarettes, will keep the Kyser program on both networks, as a cancellation of the Mutual time is not being considered.

Mr. McAvity, who also acts as production head of the advertising agency's "Mickey Mouse" program on Sunday afternoons, said this week that officials of the Pepsodent Company, sponsor for the show, will not make a definite decision for two weeks as to whether the Walt Disney characters will remain on the air after the March 27th broadcast.

The Warner Brothers program was the second coast to coast show produced in cooperation with a motion picture studio, the first being "Good News of 1938," which is offered Thurs-

DR. BUTLER VISIONS NEW USE FOR RADIO

Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, this week appointed a committee of seven Columbia officials "to consider all phases of radio with reference to courses of study, to broadcasting on the part of the university, or any groups or parts of it, and to the relation of radio to the educational services of the university."

Carl W. Ackerman, dean of the school of journalism, was named chairman by Dr. Butler who declared that "radio today is the most important instrumentality of public communication."

"It may well be as valuable to the people as an agency for the diffusion of knowledge as it is today in the distribution of information and in spreading appreciation and understanding of the cultural and industrial arts," Dr. Butler said.

day nights by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer under sponsorship of Maxwell House Coffee.

Louis K. Sidney, MGM executive, who has charge of the radio show, visited New York this week but declined to comment on the status of the program. The purpose of his visit, he said, was "to confer on home office matters."

The present contract for the program has about a month to run, Benton and Bowles, the advertising agency handling the series, announced in reply to queries as to whether the contract will be renewed.

George Jessel has left his post as production advisor and writer on the MGM show, to make a personal appearance tour with members of his own Mutual air show troupe. He plans to open April 15th, at Detroit, and to travel throughout the east for seven weeks.

20th-Fox Radio Previews

Two Twentieth Century-Fox productions will be previewed on radio programs this week. Helen Westley, who appears in the Shirley Temple musical, "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," will be interviewed over the Mutual System Thursday night and "Sally, Irene and Mary," will be previewed on the "Hollywood Hotel" program over the Columbia Broadcasting System Friday night.

The production of radio shows by film companies and the broadcasting of screen plays was condemned by members of the Independent Theatres Association of Ontario in a resolution stating that "this type of competition forced on independents by Hollywood producers is placing an unwarranted strain on the theatre business."

Albert Warner Robbed

Theft of jewelry valued at $90,000 was reported to Miami Beach police this week by Albert Warner, vice-president of Warner Brothers. The thief gained entrance to the Warner winter home through a second floor window. The jewelry was insured.

House Subcommittee Prepares to Hold Hearings on Bill That Would Cost Stations Five Millions a Year

In line with the recent declaration of Frank R. McNinch, chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, that "radio should pay its way," the tax subcommittee of the House of Representatives Ways and Means Committee this week prepared to hold hearings on a bill which would tax broadcasting stations an estimated $5,000,000 to $7,000,000 annually.

At the same time, Representative W. D. McFarlane, of Texas, predicted the bill will not be acted upon at the current session of Congress unless it is included in the pending tax revision bill.

Mr. McFarlane's opinion was expressed in conjunction with his charge, entered in the Congressional Record, that administration leaders and members of the House Rules Committee, despite general knowledge that conditions in the radio industry are close to monopoly, have done nothing to further the proposed investigation of the situation.

Sees 140 Millions Profit

The Texas Representative declared: "It seems strange that a private association, the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, can levy and collect yearly a tax of some $5,000,000 or more on these holdings of radio licenses, and yet these same radio licenses do not pay one dollar in tax or license fee for the right to operate these governmental grants, from which they yearly derive $140,000,000 for advertising."

Under the bill to be considered by the Ways and Means subcommittee, radio stations would be taxed according to the power authorized by the government. The measure was introduced by Representative John J. Boylan, of New York and is supported in principle by Mr. McNinch.

The rates proposed are as follows:

"For every station authorized to use not in excess of 1,000 watts, $1 for each watt authorized.

For every station authorized to use in excess of 1,000 watts and not in excess of 10,000 watts, $2 per watt for each watt authorized.

"For every station authorized to use in excess of 10,000 watts, $3 per watt for each watt authorized."

Target in New York State

The radio industry proved the target of proposed legislation and taxation in New York State too. John T. McCall, senator of Manhattan, introduced a measure to put the industry under supervision of the Public Service Commission. Revenue from radio utility and franchise taxes under the proposed law would amount to between $8,000,000 and $9,000,000 annually, Mr. McCall estimated.

Another New York bill affecting the radio industry was introduced by Julius S. Berg, senator, who seeks to have the libel law amended to include radio broadcasts.

In Canada, a widespread protest against a proposed increase in the annual license fee for the operation of receiving sets resulted in an intimation from the Dominion Government that the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation will abandon the operating end of radio broadcasting.

FILMS FOR 16 MM. PORTABLE SHOWS HINGE ON AVOIDING THEATRE FIELD

400 Circuits Have 500 Pictures Available, Largely from Independent and Foreign Sources; Control of Product Sought

by EDWARD HARRISON

The chief problem of the portable 16 millimeter film show, availability of pictures, is moving toward a solution, depending in part upon limitation of competition with theatres to a minimum.

There are approximately 14,500 motion picture theatres in operation in American cities, but many more than 14,500 communities do not have theatres. Traveling exhibitors, using 16 mm. and 35 mm. sound equipment, are meeting with considerable success in satisfying the entertainment wants of more and more of these showless towns, villages and summer resorts.

They are building up circuits embracing six or seven towns where they give shows once or twice a week. Four hundred or more such circuits are in operation, according to Frank B. Rogers, Jr., eastern sales manager of H. A. DeVry, Inc., equipment manufacturer. These circuits are in every state of the Union, with the greatest concentration in Maine, Vermont, New Hampshire, Ohio, Illinois, Texas and Pennsylvania, in regions away from large cities.

Control of Circuits Sought

The establishment of roadshow circuits that can be controlled as effectively as Loew's or RKO controls its theatres is being studied by important elements in the field.

It's quite true that these roadshow men offer competition to established theatres. Nevertheless, users of portable 35 mm. equipment can get all the product they need from large companies while almost no major product in 16 mm. is available to them.

This situation seems likely to change soon. Films, Inc., which distributes Paramount, Universal and Gaumont-British pictures in 16 mm., is seeking to determine whether product can be controlled so that competition with theatres will be at a minimum. Universal recently released ten features in 16 mm., including "Show Boat" and "My Man Godfrey," without the restrictions that previously made it almost impossible for roadshow men to obtain this type of production.

To a query on how soon 16 mm. theatres would be in operation, a distributor in that field said:

"The 16 mm. theatre is here. The roadshow man who gives a performance once a week in a Grange hall and then goes to the next town to put on a show there has established a 16 mm. theatre."

500 Features Available

Most features obtainable in 16 mm. are independent or foreign pictures. There are only about 500 features available but the number is increasing. Among more recent product acquisitions are ten of the old Art Cinema-United Artists releases, which Nu-Art Filmco is handling, and some of the Chesterfield-Invincible pictures, which W. O. Gutlohn has obtained. Mr. Gutlohn has a number of the old Monogram pictures on which substantial royalties are being paid. Other large factors in the rental field are Films, Inc., Bell & Howell, New England Film

SENATE THANKS LUCAS FOR WELFARE WORK

Arthur Lucas, president of the Lucas & Jenkins circuit, has been voted "thanks and appreciation" by the Georgia state senate for his long service as chairman of the State Board of Public Welfare and in particular for his work in preparing a recent report which brought about changes in conditions at the state hospital for the insane at Milledgeville.

The resolution, which cited Mr. Lucas "for his able and conscientious conduct of the institutions in his charge and for his outstanding example of public spirit in refusing to accept any salary or expenses for the services rendered," was reported as "a tribute richly deserved" in the editorial columns of the Atlanta Journal and the Georgian.

Service and Ideal Pictures of Chicago. Besides these companies there are several hundred film libraries that rent pictures for portable shows. All distributors offer special rates to these operators, depending on whether the rental is for a day, week or month. A whole program may be rented for a week from Gutlohn for twenty-five dollars. This is the average weekly rate. A few libraries charge less. The industry is trying to stabilize roadshow rentals at a weekly minimum, but without much success. Special features have special prices. Nu-Art Filmco is asking $40 a day for "Abraham Lincoln" with Walter Huston, and Kodascope gets $24 a day for the "King of Kings."

One Circuit Has 15 Machines

Of the 400 or more roadshow men operating in both 35 mm. and 16 mm., some, like Russell C. Roshon of Pittsburgh, have fifteen equipments in operation. Others have one or two machines or four or five like the Cinesound Company of Bloomfield, N. J. The number of users of the 16 and the 35 mm. equipment is about equal now, but 16 mm. is gaining fast. There are fewer fire restrictions on the use of 16 mm. equipment, it is much more economical and is more easily handled. And there lately has been great improvement in the quality of the sound. When more major product is released in 16 mm. there will be little use for 35 mm. by roadshow men.

Roadshow men give performances in schools, churches, Grange halls, summer camps and hotels, settlement houses, union halls, Elks clubs, fish and game clubs, and in numerous other places. Practically all private schools show motion pictures.

The school presents a special problem to roadshow men because there are few pictures suitable for schools that are available to them. On the other hand an organization like Films, Inc., which handles major product, has several hundred regular school accounts. In some schools, films are exhibited during luncheon hours; others have matinee shows. Schools generally pay roadshow men a flat sum to put on a show. Roadshow men usually hire a hall themselves for $10 a night and take whatever profit or loss comes along. Sometimes they have percentage tieups with churches and other organizations.

Several thousand churches show pictures. Roadshow men can reap a harvest with good religious films. "King of Kings" has been a favorite booking in churches. Two Paulist fathers recently leased "King of Kings" from the library of Kodascope, which controls the film in 16 mm., and took it on a nationwide tour. The Harmon Foundation, formerly called the Religious Motion Picture Company, has a large stock of religious films.

There is a growing outlet in 16 mm. for foreign language pictures, labor films and controversial and topical features such as "The Spanish Earth," and "China Strikes Back." Garrison Films, specializing in this field, has many of the foreign language subjects available in 16 mm., including French, Russian, Spanish, Italian and German films.

Most 16 mm. distributors say that they are developing a new and growing field for motion pictures and that the industry therefore should help to develop the 16 mm. market by providing good pictures.

The "Free Show"

Recognition by small town merchants of the value of motion picture shows has led to an odd development. At the instance of roadshow men, merchants in small towns surrounded by a farming community have joined in defraying the cost of a free film show as an attraction for the farmers to come to town. This type of show is known as a "tent" show. It is frequently an open air show and is most common during the summer. Merchants in one town bought a 35 mm. machine from DeVry. After a year the shows began to pay and the merchants got back their investment. Tent shows are most common in Illinois, Ohio and Texas.

Roadshow men play a considerable part in the life of many communities. In many towns they run midweek and Saturday dances after their shows.

To keep the patrons coming, they have had to employ chance games and other giveaways. One showman, who had lost his circuit, got it back by instituting Bank Night. These itinerant exhibitors use other exploitation devices that are routine with theatres, such as distributing handbills and putting up window cards. They generally avoid giving notice of shows in towns that have theatres.

Methods of Operation

It is comparatively easy to enter the roadshow business. Equipment manufacturers will advise on where to start a circuit and arrange for rental of halls and product. The roadshow man usually selects towns that have no theatres. He must be operator, bill poster, ticket collector, drive his own car from town to town, choose his product and do a hundred other things. It is not an easy life but he can earn several hundred dollars weekly if he builds up a good circuit.

One of the difficulties of the roadshow business is that the men often get poor prints with poor sound. A succession of poor prints can ruin a flourishing business. Reduction prints often vary with the laboratory.

On the other hand, distributors must guard against bicycling and duping of prints. This is quite common. In some instances prints are sold outright to roadshow men, who resell them to others. Distributors are trying to stop resale of used prints because this cuts into their business. They expect to do this by leasing instead of selling them outright.

REGENTS' UNIT VIEWING TWO REJECTED FILMS

Subcommittee Acting First Time on "Whirlpool," Sex Film, and Satire on Greta Garbo

The newly appointed subcommittee of the New York State Board of Regents meets in the projection room of the Department of Education's Motion Picture Division in New York Saturday to view two pictures on which appeals have been taken from denial of a license by Irwin Esmond, censor, consisting of Miss Susan Brandeis, daughter of Justice Louis D. Brandeis, George J. Ryan and Gordon Knox Bell, the Regents' subcommittee will view "Remous" (known also as "Whirlpool") and "I Vant to be Alone."

First Subcommittee Action

The subcommittee is functioning for the first time. In the past Frank P. Graves, commissioner of education, did the reviewing on appeals, and last month, following a change by the Regents, Chancellor Patrick Mangan and Regent William Leland Thompson reviewed "Nocturno."

Appeal from refusal to license "I Vant to be Alone" was filed by Bert Lewis, vice-president of Samjax Corporation, New York. According to the Motion Picture Division, Samjax Corporation presented on Nov. 30, 1937, the film which, it said, had been passed June 28, 1927, as a silent picture, entitled "Streets of Sorrow," with Greta Garbo in the lead role. Synchronization and dialogue had been added. Director Esmond takes the position that the film unduly burlesques Miss Garbo. Rejection was based on the grounds that it was "immoral," "indecent" and "would tend to corrupt morals."

Re-edited Story

Mr. Lewis' appeal said that "this is a re-edited story featuring Greta Garbo, made many years ago. Originally the film was passed by the Censor Board under the title 'Streets of Sorrow.' With the exception of the dialogue the film is the same as the original, which had been passed. Nothing has been added, but the film was cut considerably." Review is sought on the further grounds that Samjax Corporation is willing to make corrections or eliminations recommended by the Board of Regents.

"I Vant to be Alone," following its rejection late in November, was appealed, and Director Esmond personally saw the film. On Dec. 16, 1937, he rejected the appeal, saying the picture came within Section 1082, Education Law, and that it is obviously intended as a burlesque, ridiculing the said star of "Streets of Sorrow" . . . "and the serious conditions portrayed in that picture."

"Remous" Also Revised

The other film involved is "Remous." Hays, St. John, Abramson and Schulman of New York are attorneys for Arthur T. Mayer and Joseph Burstyn. Arthur Garfield Hays is expected to argue for the co-partnership following review by the board.

"Remous," a French-made film, was originally presented in August, 1936, by Kurt Laemmle. On Sept. 17, 1936, it was denied a license as being "indecent." The picture was materially revised and submitted for review Nov. 20, 1936, by Mayer and Burstyn, who hold distributorship rights in New York State. Following granting of license, English titles were superimposed and the same two men applied for a license under the title "Whirlpool." A license was granted Feb. 23, 1937.

The petitioners concluded, then, that original eliminations were so important and vital as to destroy the value of the film and that "many of the cuts were arbitrary and unjustified." The petitioners again worked on film "with the purpose of restoring to some extent the value of the picture and its artistic integrity." On Nov. 17, 1937, application was made for licensing of the second revised edition of "Remous," containing several scenes heretofore eliminated by the Motion Picture Division. Attached to the appeal by Mayer and Burstyn are voluminous exhibits of favorable notices on both "Remous" and its English version "Whirlpool," from critics in foreign newspapers.

The Motion Picture Division contends the picture comes within Section 1082 of the Education Law. Mr. Esmond said: "The story originally told of a sexually impotent young man, the sex frustration of his wife, her affair with an athlete, and the suicide of the crippled and impotent husband."

Some observers contend that in reality the review on "Remous" is an appeal from the action of the director in refusing to consent to the changes. Attorney Hays is expected to place weight on the fact that Sec. 305, 1930 Tariff Law forbids entry of treasonable or immoral books, pamphlets, paper and written advertisements.

At Albany word was received that Mayor Leach of Minneapolis had termed "backward and countrified" the rejection by Commissioner Graves of "The Birth of a Baby," on which the American Committee on Maternal Welfare, Inc., has filed a new appeal with the New York Board of Regents. In Minneapolis the picture was playing at the Lyceum Theatre. It was directed by Al Christie and produced by Jack Skirball for Special Pictures, Inc.

Ben Cohen to Calcutta

Ben Cohen, former manager of Loew's Poli College, New Haven, Conn., will take charge of the Metro theatre in Calcutta instead of the new Loew house in Bombay, to which he originally was assigned. Adolph Buehrig will transfer from Calcutta to Bombay, where he will open the new Metro theatre about April 15th. Mr. Buehrig, formerly a Loew manager in Columbus, has been in India a year. Mr. Cohen sailed Wednesday on the Conti di Savoia to assume Mr. Buehrig's duties in Calcutta. Sam Badamo, manager of the Globe, Bridgeport, succeeds Mr. Cohen in New Haven. Harry Rose has been promoted from assistant manager at the State, Providence, to manage the Bridgeport house and has been succeeded by Maurice Druker, assistant manager of the Orpheum, Boston, whose place has been filled by B. George Fornell.

Censorship Moves In U. S., Canada

Two censorship bills were introduced in Massachusetts, a censorship bill was defeated in Kansas, an Asbury Park (N. J.) newspaper referred to the reported move to establish state film censorship in New Jersey "a political maneuver," and the bill for the reorganization of the Quebec censorship board awaited the approval of the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council before becoming law, this week.

Of the two bills introduced in Massachusetts, one would set up a "commission" to censor pictures; the other would transfer film jurisdiction from the Department of Public Safety to the Department of Education, where a film division would be established. Charges of $3 a reel for the first prints of films and $2 a reel for extra prints would be made.

Films with any parts that were obscene, indecent, immoral, inhuman, sacrilegious, or which tended to incite crime or corrupt morals would be banned. Court appeals might be made. Newsreels, scientific, educational and religious shows might be excepted at the discretion of the reviewers. A public joint hearing is to be held later this month.

The Committee on Federal and State Affairs of the Kansas Senate killed the censorship bill which would have given the existing state censor power to eliminate sweepstakes and gambling scenes from newsreels. The special session of the legislature will adjourn Friday.

Commenting on the reported New Jersey film censorship, the Asbury Park Press said: "Now they are talking of a state board of censors to decide what motion pictures we may view. Patently, of course, a high-minded zeal for decency on the silver screen is the motivating force behind the movement to censor entertainment. Probably more accurate, however, is the assumption that a group of politicians sees an opportunity to exert a profitable regulatory power over the motion picture industry and its patrons."

The main aim of the Quebec bill is to increase the number of censors. At present, three men rule on all pictures shown in Quebec. The extent of enlargement and the salaries to be paid will be left in the hands of the Government, according to Premier Duplessis, sponsor of the bill. The new board, to be called "Board of Cinema Censors," will be stationed in Montreal. It will be appointed by the Government.

Holdovers for "Follies"

"The Goldwyn Follies" was held over for a full week in 20 of the first 22 theatres in which it has played, United Artists reported this week. In the other two engagements, the announcement continued, the picture was held extra days.

James Melton has been signed to an agency contract for films exclusively by Myron Selznick, Ltd., New York. Herman Bernie handled the negotiations.

After a tour of Gaumont British branches throughout the country and a week's stay in Hollywood, Arthur A. Lee, vice-president and general manager, returned to New York this week.

DUAL BILLS FOUGHT IN THREE NEW MOVES

But Champions of Single Features Are Silent at 'Hearing' on Chicago Ordinance

Milwaukee, Omaha, and Kansas City became the centers of agitation against double features this week after a widely heralded hearing on proposed legislation to ban dual bills in Chicago resolved itself into a one-sided affair with no one speaking against twin picture programs.

"The bride didn't show up," commented Edward Golden, Monogram sales manager, who flew to Chicago from New York, to fight against adoption of the suggested ordinance which would limit the length of all motion picture shows to two and a half hours.

Appeals to Goldwyn

Armand S. Cohn, general manager of All Star Features Distributors, joined the advocates of double bills by forwarding letters to Barnet Hodes, Chicago's corporation counsel, and to Samuel Goldwyn, who had endorsed the movement against dual programs.

"Your ruling on Alderman John Grealis' city ordinance forbidding double bills will do more harm to the youth of our country than the good claimed by its proponents," Mr. Cohn told Mr. Hodes.

In his letter to Mr. Goldwyn, Mr. Cohn appealed to the producer to recall the days when he fought to produce "independent of major domination."

Kansas City Movement

In Kansas City, a group of influential women, representing several organizations, launched a program to develop sentiment for single bills. Each of the women pledged herself to telephone about 50 friends and acquaintances, suggesting that they patronize theatres having single features.

Daniel W. Hoan, Milwaukee mayor, assigned Dr. John P. Koehler, health commissioner, the task of determining whether double feature programs are causing physical harm to children. The action was taken at the request of the Parent-Teacher Association.

The Independent Theatres Protective Association of Wisconsin indicated it would cooperate with the PTA in the campaign and sent a committee to Chicago to study its proposed ordinance.

Circuits voiced opposition to a proposed ordinance prohibiting double bills. H. J. Fitzgerald, general manager of Fox-Wisconsin, and Jack Keegan, district manager for Warner Brothers, both declared the public demands double features.

The Parent Teacher Association also is leading the fight against double bills in Omaha. Mr. H. T. Jones, president of the PTA council, declared that the group will meet March 21st to adopt a course of action. One of the plans which will be considered is to appeal to Dan Butler, mayor, to ban duals as a menace to health.

It was on this charge that Chicago opponents of double bills based their original protest. Expecting the charge to be made at the hearing in Chicago Monday, Mr. Golden had three physicians present to build up a case for duals.

Mrs. Louis Perlman, militant PTA leader, attended the hearing but when asked to comment she said she "came only to listen." Theatre executives and women's club leaders were present also, but none offered to speak against duals and the meeting lasted only three minutes.

The withdrawal of Parent-Teacher Association support from Chicago exhibitors opposed to duals was described as a serious blow. Mrs. Perlman was charged by several persons at the hearing on Monday with being a paid representative of an independent producers' group. The charge was denied.

In appealing to Mr. Goldwyn to aid in keeping the motion picture industry free from "throttling legislation," Mr. Cohn declared that "the question of double bills must primarily rest with the exhibitor and his patrons, and is not a subject to be controlled by either the producer, distributor or any group of women's organizations."

"In short," Mr. Cohn continued, "double bills came into being solely as a matter of merchandising by the theatre and not because of any demand or campaign inaugurated by any producer or distributor. . . ."

Warns of Legislative Meddling

"Once lending your encouragement to any group seeking to regulate exhibition by legislation is in effect lending your endorsement to the theory that legislation may also be enacted restricting the length of features, or their cost, or the time of their showing, or even the prices of admission and without end regimenting every branch of production, distribution and exhibition."

Mr. Cohn's letter to Mr. Hodes contained the charge that "such a law is unjust and un-American and discriminating against only the independent producers and independent distributors."

"I hear," Mr. Cohn added, "that prominent members of the Parent-Teacher Association are loud in their arguments against dual showings, but I, for one, believe that if the PTA would put forth their efforts in protecting our children of the junior high school age against the sale of narcotics in the form of marihuana cigarettes . . . they would be doing a greater service to the children and their parents than adding to the millions of unemployed people that we have in our country at this time."

Cinecolor Files Amendment with SEC

Cinecolor, Inc., this week filed an amendment to its registration statement with the Securities and Exchange Commission in Washington. The company showed that the proposed offering would consist of 104,142 shares of $1.50 par common stock to be sold through underwriters at $1.50 per share, returning $156,213, and 25,500 shares to be given the underwriters for services, to be resold at the same price.

DUAL FEATURE TEST PLANNED IN FLORIDA

A test to determine the public's wishes in regard to double features has been started by the Sparks circuit in St. Petersburg, Florida. A single feature policy has been adopted in one theatre already and a similar policy will be put into effect in other houses, it was announced.

If it is found that the public does not want double bills they will be discontinued.

A permanent double feature policy has been adopted at the Tri-States' Des Moines theatre after a trial of single features since September 1st.

IATSE Proposes Stagger System

After several weeks of conferences among representatives of labor organizations in Hollywood in an effort to curb the spread of layoffs and unemployment, the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, in a letter to Pat Casey, labor representative for producers, proposed staggering the work of studio technicians by limiting working time to four days per week per man.

The proposal, made in a letter written by Harold V. Smith, international representative in charge of the Hollywood IATSE office during the temporary absence of Harland Holmden, came on the heels of drastic retrenchment in film production. Mr. Smith urged that the procedure be instituted immediately "in an effort to bridge the present low production period."

The move would affect approximately 12,000 IATSE members and may possibly be used by producers for crafts outside of the Alliance with the exception of talent. Studio managers expressed themselves as receptive to the plan.

Mr. Smith urged reduction of the preferential lists of each studio to a minimum so as to handle present operation requirements; limitation to four days' work per man on a relay system to spread employment, except for key men; making all calls for preferential employees through IATSE locals during the slack production period for 30 days; making all additional calls other than preferential through IATSE locals.

A modification of this procedure was adopted at MGM and Twentieth Century-Fox following the discovery by Mr. Smith that some IATSE workers had been doubling up and working a shift at each studio in one day. Under the plan proposed in the letter, IATSE officers could eliminate the doubling.

Employees in Paramount's eastern laboratories this week divided in their choice of union affiliation in a National Labor Relations Board election. Workers in the news-reel plant in New York voted 91 to 8 in favor of affiliating with Local 702, Motion Picture Laboratory Technicians, an American Federation of Labor unit. In the Astoria, L. I., studio laboratory the vote was 36 to 30 against such affiliation.

A TRIBUTE TO GENIUS

I rarely sign my name to advertisements, but I insisted that this advertisement be a personal message from me to exhibitors.

I have just seen "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," and words cannot fully express my enthusiasm for this great picture. From every angle it is definitely not only Shirley Temple's best to date, but is one of the finest pictures our company has ever made.

Shirley, herself, has never been more appealing. Furthermore, the picture is made to order for adults. The cast is a cast of grown-ups—grown-ups not only with name appeal, but also with great acting ability. All of them, whether they make love, sing or dance, give exceptional performances.

The story, too, is strong in adult appeal. Darryl Zanuck has streamlined Sunnybrook Farm by putting in a modern Radio Center. He has filled it with romance, comedy and up-to-the-minute songs and dances. Those songs, I believe, are among the finest I have ever heard in a musical.

But the best proof of "Rebecca's" quality is seeing it. Therefore, we have arranged special trade screenings in all our exchanges. Every exhibitor who has booked this picture should see it at these screenings.

UNIVERSAL, WESTERN ELECTRIC, RCA REPORT ON EARNINGS; FOUR DIVIDENDS

20th Century-Fox Will Show Net Profit of at Least $8,500,000 for Year ($4.00 to $4.30 Per Share), Says Joseph Schenck

Combined net profit increases of more than $4,000,000 for the year ended Dec. 31, 1937, compared to the previous year, were reported this week by three companies with business activities in the industry. They are Western Electric Company, Inc., with a net profit of $19,514,197, an increase of $816,148; Radio Corporation of America, $9,024,197, an increase of $816,148, and General Outdoor Advertising Company, Inc., $1,109,963, an increase of $383,367.

Also reporting for 52-week periods were Universal Pictures Corporation, announcing a net loss of $1,084,998 against a net loss of $1,835,419 in 1936, and United Amusement Corporation, Ltd., a subsidiary of Famous Players Canadian Corporation, reporting net earnings of $246,125 compared to $254,268 in the previous year.

Although the annual report of Twentieth Century-Fox has not been issued as yet, Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the company, announced in Los Angeles that the corporation will show a net profit of between $8,500,000 and $9,000,000, after all charges and taxes. This would equal, after preferred dividends, between $4 and $4.30 per common share. The 1936 net income of $7,722,955 equaled $3.55 per common share.

Financial news of the week also included the declaration of dividends by RCA, Paramount Pictures, Keith-Albee-Orpheum Corporation, and Pathe Film Corporation. The Paramount board voted regular quarterly payments of $1.50 per share on first preferred stock and 15 cents per share on the second preferred stock. The directors of KAO authorized a dividend, out of capital surplus, of $1.75 per share on the seven per cent cumulative convertible preferred stock for the quarter ended March 31st, 1935. The Pathe payment was a regular quarterly payment of $1.75 per share on the $7 convertible preferred stock.

The dividends of the three companies are all payable April 1st, 1938. In the case of Pathe the payments will go to stockholders of record March 23rd, while for the other two companies payments will be made to holders of record March 15th.

RCA declared a quarterly dividend of 87½ cents on outstanding first preferred stock, payable April 1st, to stockholders of record March 9th, and a dividend of $1.25 for the period January 1st to March 31st, on the "B" preferred stock, payable March 16th.

Western Electric Sales Rise

In its annual message to stockholders, Western Electric, parent organization of Electrical Research products, Inc., whose business includes the manufacturing of studio and theatre sound equipment, announced a 39 per cent increase in sales, a 61 per cent increase in payrolls, and a 4 per cent increase in profits for the year as compared to 1936.

After reductions in prices amounting to $7,500,000 on the year's business, sales totaled $203,467,000 against $146,421,000 in 1936.

EASTMAN PAYS $3,425,000 BONUS

Employees of Eastman Kodak Company this week received the largest wage dividend since the company's profit sharing plan was adopted in 1912.

The employees received checks totaling $3,425,000 of which $2,250,000 went to the company's 16,202 workers in Rochester, where the main plants are located and the remainder, $1,175,000, was distributed to employees throughout the world.

Earnings, including income from subsidiary and associated companies, were $19,514,197 as compared with $18,698,049 in the previous 12-month period. The return on investment (relation of earnings available for interest and dividends to gross assets, less current liabilities) was 7.7 per cent, the same as for the previous year. Surplus at December 31st, was $15,351,000, an increase of $220,000.

RCA's Net Increases

Radio Corporation of America, parent organization of RCA Photophone and the National Broadcasting Company, had a net profit of $9,024,858.13 while in 1936 the net profit was $6,155,936.72.

Last year's profit, the company's annual statement to stockholders pointed out, represents a profit margin of 8 per cent on a gross income of $112,639,497.78 derived from the corporation's activities.

RCA's 1937 dollar volume was up 11.3 per cent from the 1936 figure of $101,186,309.90. On a percentage basis, the corporation's increased net profit was 46.6 per cent larger than in 1936.

During last year RCA stockholders received a total of $6,409,226.30 in dividends. This included regular quarterly dividends on the convertible first preferred stock, all dividends in arrears on the remaining shares of "B" preferred stock, and a dividend of 20 cents a share paid to holders of common stock.

Earned surplus at December 31st, 1937 was $16,528,905.02 as compared with $15,334,648.92 at the close of 1936. Other comparisons included:

	End of '37	End of '36
Current Assets	$39,358,710	$38,709,772
Current Liabilities	10,719,273	11,724,522
Ratio	3.7 to 1	3.3 to 1
Working capital	28,639,436	28,985,250
Cash on hand and in banks	15,103,296	14,657,407
Inventories	11,818,756	11,526,975
Fixed Assets	39,146,234	37,784,957

The annual report also included a report of the corporation's activities in radio, describing advances in television, facsimile and network broadcasting.

The net profit of $1,109,963 made by General Outdoor Advertising Company and subsidiaries, handling considerable bill posting for motion pictures, is equal, after charges and allowance for preferred stock requirements, to 85 cents a share on 663,059 no-par shares of common stock. The 1936 earnings of $726,596 equaled 22 cents a share on 638,391 shares of common.

The report of Universal and all subsidiaries, certified by independent auditors, showed the loss of $1,084,998 after federal and foreign taxes, interest, depreciation, amortization and provision for operating losses of subsidiaries operating in foreign countries, for the fiscal year ended Oct. 31, 1937.

In the preceding year, the net loss was $1,835,419, including $333,534 profit on the sale of the entire capital stock of a British subsidiary.

Total Assets $11,617,205

The consolidated balance sheet of the corporation and its subsidiaries, without consolidating the assets and liabilities of subsidiaries operating in foreign territories, showed current and working assets of $9,340,978 and current liabilities of $5,631,822, comparing with $7,985,836 and $3,486,090, respectively, Oct. 31, 1936. Cash amounted to $803,172 compared with $691,137 at the close of the preceding year and inventories were $7,844,405 against $6,574,009.

Total assets were $11,765,602 Oct. 31, 1937, comparing with $10,617,205 on Oct. 31, 1936. Capital surplus was $3,923,951, unchanged from 1936 and surplus arising through revaluation of land was $258,125, the same as the preceding year. The deficit from operations amounted to $3,620,138 comparing with a deficit of $2,535,139 Oct. 31, 1936.

Capital stock consists of 17,864 shares of $100 par value 8 per cent first cumulative preferred, 20,000 shares of par $100 7 per cent second cumulative preferred and 250,000 shares of par $1 common stock.

The consolidated income account of Universal for 52 weeks ended October 31st, 1937, as compared to the 52 previous weeks, follows:

	52 Weeks Ended Oct. 31, '37	52 Weeks Ended Oct. 31, '36
Income from operations	$18,150,876	$17,408,254
Cost of sales and service	12,260,524	13,093,300
Expenses	6,920,841	5,946,248
Loss before charges	$1,030,489	$1,631,294

Write-down investments in certain foreign subsidiaries		180,429
Loss	$1,084,998	$2,168,953
Profit on sale in capital stock of British subsidiary		333,534
Net loss	$1,084,998	$1,835,419

†Includes $309 profit on sale of capital assets.

In issuing the statement, J. Cheever Cowdin, chairman of Universal's board of directors, said: "The company operated at a profit of $51,970.27 in the last quarter of the fiscal year. Certain important pictures made and released during the year continued to show a substantial loss and, until their amortization is completed, they will have an adverse effect on the company's operating results."

Mr. Cowdin said Universal's agreement with Empire Films, Ltd., of Toronto for distribution of the company's product in Canada was on a basis which "the company believes will be more profitable."

CHICAGO THEATRES' RECEIPTS HOLD UP

Never Before So Many Good Pictures Available at One Time, According to Exhibitors

by WILLIAM F. COUCH in Chicago

Theatre business in Chicago and environs is maintaining the upward trend evinced since the first of the year, reports show, and exhibitors attribute it largely to the fact that never before at one time have there been so many good pictures available from so many companies.

Indicative of the grosses in Chicago's Loop, where only single features are shown, is the number of pictures that have played not less than two week runs.

At the 4,000-seat Chicago theatre 'Buccaneer' ran for three weeks, the first time in the 16 years of the theatre that a picture had played for more than two weeks. From the Chicago the picture went into the Oriental, second largest Loop house. It was estimated that the Loop engagement totaled near the $100,000 mark for the four weeks, a record.

'Hurricane' finished its sixth Loop week at the Garrick, having opened at the United Artists for the first three weeks.

'Wells Fargo' played two weeks at the Chicago and one week at the Apollo. 'Stage Door,' 'Mannequin,' 'Bad Man of Brimstone' and 'Happy Landing' each played two or more weeks in the Loop. At the World theatre 'Club de Femme' had four banner weeks.

Roadshow Record

'In Old Chicago,' at the Apollo theatre on a two-a-day basis, is doing record business for a roadshow attraction. All evenings of the first four weeks were practically sellouts and business on the matinees exceeded that of other roadshows.

Mae West was at the Palace theatre last Friday for a personal appearance. This week 'Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs' is opening a run that is expected to last six to eight weeks.

At the Oriental theatre 'Goldwyn Follies' started out with smash business.

With 'A' productions getting so much time in the main Loop theatres, much of the 'B' product has started at the State-Lake or in the deluxe neighborhood theatres.

What effect, if any, the opening of the new Esquire theatre on Chicago's near-north side will have on Loop theatres has not been determined. This deluxe theatre, which opened a week ago, is playing single features in 'B' week.

Selling 1938-39 Product

Further evidence of the way business is improving in this territory is the large amount of selling of next year's product in the outlying towns. Exchanges which have good product now available are selling their 1938-39 product to many of the smaller theatres.

There is also considerable activity among

"JEZEBEL" AD USED BY PAPER COMPANY

As a pictorial example of their product, the West Virginia Pulp and Paper Company is using the 24 sheet on Warner Brothers picture 'Jezebel' as the illustration for its national advertising campaign beginning with a full page ad in ADVERTISING AGE.

In addition, the company is sending out 100,000 mailing pieces carrying the 24 sheet illustration to every type of business throughout the country.

Warners are according the feature the largest 24 sheet campaign in its history with national posting in 4,000 cities through a special exhibitor co-operative plan. The posting will be done simultaneously with the release of the picture in key situations throughout the United States and Canada.

'Jezebel' is the subject of a poem by Phyllis McGinley which will appear with a page-length portrait of Bette Davis in the April issue of Red Book in the pictorial section, 'In Tune with Our Times.'

the large companies to interest the individual exhibitors more actively in exploiting their pictures. A number of the smaller circuits are finding that advertising campaigns is bringing in extra business.

The tremendous ballyhoo given 'In Old Chicago' by the imported publicity men from Hollywood and New York started the ball rolling.

Eight Films Listed For Paramount Drive

National dates for eight pictures, comprising the first group, to be released during the first eight weeks of the thirteen-week 'Paramount on Parade Around the World' international sales drive, have been listed by Neil F. Agnew, vice-president in charge of distribution.

The scheduled films, together with their release dates, are: 'Romance in the Dark,' Friday; 'Dangerous to Know,' March 11; 'Bulldog Drummond's Peril,' March 18; 'College Swing,' March 25; 'Tip-off Girls,' April 1; 'Her Jungle Lover,' April 15; 'Heart of Arizona,' April 22, and 'Doctor Rhythm,' April 29.

Cohn Becomes Columnist

Alfred A. Cohn, in addition to starting a writing assignment at Twentieth Century-Fox this week, also began to conduct a daily column in the Los Angeles Examiner.

Emanuel Cohen, who recently split with Paramount, sailed Wednesday on the Conte di Savoia for a two or three months vacation in the Mediterranean, Paris and London.

FIRST RUNS ASKED IN COUNCIL BLUFFS

A movement to obtain first run pictures for Council Bluffs, Ia., at the same time they are shown in Omaha, which is just across the Missouri River, has been launched by the Chamber of Commerce in Council Bluffs.

An arrangement of several years' standing allows Omaha theatres to show the films 28 days before they may be shown in Council Bluffs.

RKO's Creditors Study Amendments On Reorganization

Further postponement of the scheduled RKO reorganization hearing was granted in New York Monday when William Bondy, Federal Court judge, was informed that the principal creditors of the organization expect to agree, within the next few days, on amendments designed to speed up the rehabilitation proceedings.

The court set the case down for a hearing March 11th, after Hamilton C. Rickaby, attorney for Atlas Corporation, proponent of the reorganization plan, explained that once the amendments are agreed upon, an additional week will be needed to put them in form for submission to the court.

Nathan Berenson, a Boston creditor, entered the sole objection to the adjournment and as a result was censured by Mr. Bondy, who declared: 'It is inconceivable for anyone who has the interest of this reorganization at heart to oppose an adjournment of this kind.'

The judge also pointed out that the favorable report on the plan, submitted last fall by George W. Alger, special master, was based upon RKO's earnings for 1935, 1936 and the first half of 1937 and included the supposition that the company's earnings would continue at the same rate of improvement as had been recorded during 1935 and 1936. He continued by declaring there was a 'material change' since the court received the report.

Basic amendments being sought by the creditor groups include a reduction of the fixed charges to be met by the new company under the capitalization and interest and dividend charges set up in the original plan and revision of the underwriting terms for a new $1,600,000 stock issue to increase the attractiveness of the investment in view of prevailing market conditions.

Meanwhile, Pandro S. Berman, nominal production head of RKO studios, arrived in New York from the coast Sunday to confer with Leo Spitz, president. The chief topic of the discussions, it was understood, will be the formal designation of Mr. Berman as chief of production.

His visit was expected to be brief and on his return to Hollywood he probably will be accompanied by Mr. Spitz, J. R. McDonough, newly elected vice-president, and Jules Levy, sales manager.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Distaff

"Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" will influence feminine spring and summer fashions for the entire world. And exhibitors, who own wives, sisters, mothers, aunts, nieces or anything else feminine, had better turn the following over to them at once so that they may know what the style of the time will be.

We went down to the Disney studio the other day in search of more prosaic information and found the place looking like a combination of a style show and a warehouse.

A tall red headed girl told us that what we were looking at were the fashions, and she said something like this: "It won't be only the United States where these styles will be the vogue, but this picture is being released in fourteen languages and will be shown in every city and hamlet in the world and it will make the fashions there."

We already had seen, in department stores, fabrics bearing imprints about the seven little men, the cottage, the queen and other characters, and we were told about subtle shades, basque dresses, puffed sleeves, shoes and slippers. Most of all the tall red headed girl talked about hats and colors.

"Do you know," she said, "—" —naming a reigning screen belle—"wears one of the first outfits reflecting the 'Snow White' influence? It's a hip length jacket of burgundy, buttoned down the front with powder blue buttons, with a burgundy leather belt and a silver buckle. The skirt is powder blue wool, or slacks of the same material may be worn. Her conical cap is burgundy wool."

14 Films Start

Hollywood's production car, which for the last several weeks had been clattering along on a set of flat tires, took on the looks of a super deluxe ultra streamlined model during Washington's birthday week as fourteen pictures were started and twelve finished. Good news to exhibitors worrying about a possible film shortage, it was likewise a welcome word to the army of job-seeking workers. Intense as was the new activity, however, it is but a forerunner of what may be expected during March and April, as practically every studio, major and independent, has set plans that should make the spring months rank among the busiest in the community's history. Eighty productions are scheduled to start in that period.

Both the new and completed work was widespread. RKO-Radio started three pictures, "The Saint in New York" will feature Louis Hayward and Joan Fontaine. Joe Penner, Lucille Ball and Vicki Lester head the cast assigned to "Go Chase Yourself." In the third film, "Law of the Underworld," leading players are Chester Morris, Anne Shirley, Richard Bond, Walter Abel, Eduardo Ciannelli, Lee Patrick, Paul Guilfoyle and Eddie Acuff.

Warners Start Three

Three pictures also were started at Warners. "The Amazing Dr. Clitterhouse" will have Edward G. Robinson and Claire Trevor as its

QUADRUPLE PASTEL TONES ON MGM PRINTS

"Quadruple pastel shade" tone, latest effect in film printing, will appear for the first time when MGM's "The Girl of the Golden West" flashes on the screen.

The new effect, a further step in tinting processes seen in such pictures as "The Good Earth" and "The Firefly," is created by the blending of four tones, each of which has a special relation to certain phases of the image.

The pastel shading tone was developed by John Nicholas, MGM laboratory chief who recently had special toning machines installed to make possible the quadruple tone idea upon which he has been working since he perfected the sepia platinum tone which was used in "The Good Earth."

stars. "Woman Habit" will feature Kay Francis, George Brent, Ian Hunter and Gloria Dickson. Anna May Wong, Margaret Lindsay and Lola Lane are only a few of the players scheduled to appear in "When Were You Born."

Paramount started two productions. "Crime Gives Orders" will present Lloyd Nolan, Mary Carlisle, Lynn Overman, J. Carroll Naish, Regis Toomey. Leading players in "The Texans" are Randolph Scott, Joan Bennett, May Robson, Robert Barrat.

"The Last Stand," in which Bob Baker, Constance Moore and Fuzzy Knight will be featured, was started at Universal.

At MGM work was started on "Love Bites Man." Dennis O'Keefe, Florence Rice and Ray Bolger are the principals.

Columbia Making "Holiday"

With George Cukor directing, Columbia started "Holiday," with Katharine Hepburn, Cary Grant and Doris Nolan listed for the important parts. It may be remembered that when E. B. Derr first produced it for Pathe in 1930, with Mary Astor, Robert Ames, Edward Everett Horton, Hedda Hopper and Ann Harding as its stars, the picture was regarded as a model production.

Monogram's contribution to the new work is "Land of Fighting Men," in which Louise Stanley, Herman Brix and Rex Lease will be seen.

"Outlaws of Sonora," Republic, is a "Three Mesquiteers" picture and will present Bob Livingston, Ray Corrigan, Max Terhune, Jack Mulhall and Jean Joyce.

About half the completed quota appear to have the potentialities in cast, story and production values to make the big picture grade, and two or more of becoming extended runs.

Warner Bros. cleared its active list of three pictures. The cast of "Little Lady Luck" has Ann Sheridan, John Litel, Frank McHugh, Janet Chapman (the star), Robert Homans, Jean Benedict and James Nolan. The many names in "Cowboy from Brooklyn" include Dick Powell, Priscilla Lane, Pat O'Brien, Dick Foran, Johnny Davis, Ann Sheridan, Ronald Regan, Spring Byington, Robert Cavanaugh, Harry Barris, Dennie Moore and May Boley. "Golddiggers in Paris" will feature Rudy Vallee, Rosemary Lane, Hugh Herbert, Allen Jenkins, Melville Cooper, Frank McHugh, Fritz Feld and Curt Bois.

Two films were completed at Republic. In "The Gentleman from London" are featured C. Henry Gordon, Tala Birell, Alan Marshall, Mady Correll, Herbert Mundin and Gerald Oliver Smith. The cast for "Capital Punishment" includes Bob Livingston, Rosalind Keith, Warren Hymer and Jack LaRue.

Universal Completes Two

Universal also finished two pictures. "State Police" will present John King, Constance Moore, David Oliver, Larry Blake and J. Farrell MacDonald. In "Goodbye Broadway" will be seen Alice Brady, Charles Winninger, Tommy Riggs, Tom Brown, Dorothea Kent, Frank Jenks, Jed Prouty and Donald Meek.

"There's Always a Woman" was finished at Columbia. Joan Blondell, Melvyn Douglas, Mary Astor and Francis Drake are featured, supported by Wynn Cahoon, Jerome Cowan, Robert Paige, Thurston Hall, Arthur Loft and John Galloway.

Monogram finished "Rose of the Rio Grande." Familiar personalities to be seen are Movita, John Carroll, Antonio Moreno, George Cleveland, Lina Basquette, Duncan Renaldo and Don Alvarado.

RKO-Keith finished "This Marriage Business," which earlier bore the title "It Couldn't Happen Again." It will present Victor Moore, Allan Lane, Vicki Lester, Jack Carson, Jack Arnold, Frank M. Thomas, Cecil Kellaway, Bryant Washburn, Paul Guilfoyle, Kay Sutton and Leona Roberts.

National Theatre Supply Holds Regional Meetings

The first two of a series of regional meetings to familiarize managers with the National Theatre Supply Company's International E-7 and International Simplex sound equipment were held in Los Angeles this week and in Chicago last week.

Walter E. Green, president of National Theatre Supply, opened the Coast session by expressing confidence in the future of theatre business despite box-office recessions.

Mr. Green will leave Los Angeles Sunday for Dallas where another meeting will be held.

Two for Hay

Will Hay, English schoolmaster comedian from vaudeville, radio and screen, and hero of the industries record-breaking 1937-8 comedy, "Oh, Mr. Porter," has been signed for two more pictures to be made under the Gaumont-British Gainsborough auspices this year.

The two titles tentatively chosen are "Chicago Ben," which is being written by Ralph Smart and Howard Irving Young, Jr., with screen play and dialogue by Marriott Edgar and Val Guest, and "Bones," which is to be adapted for the screen from the Edgar Wallace story "Bones of the River," by Marriott Edgar and Val Guest.

For "Chicago Ben" Gainsborough plans to bring over from Hollywood several well known actors to portray gangster roles.

In "Bones" Will Hay will be seen as a captain of a decrepit African river launch, and will be supported once more by Moore Marriott and Graham Moffatt.

Next on the floor of the Gainsborough studios, Islington, and to succeed the Will Hay comedy, "Convict 99," will be a musical titled "A Girl Must Live," which is at present in the course of preparation for the screen by Austin Melford.

Joint stars of this new production will be Margaret Lockwood, personal hit of "Bank Holiday," Renee Houston, comedy favorite of British radio and vaudeville fans, and Lilli Palmer. "A Girl Must Live" is described as "a fast moving satirical tale of the private lives of the ladies of the chorus."

Cooperatives

Produced on a co-operative basis and with its team to star co-operatively in any profits, "A Spot of Bother," first production of Pinebrook Limited, goes on the floor at the Pinewood studios, Iver, this month.

Formation of this company has already been announced in MOTION PICTURE HERALD, but it is now possible to record details of the co-operative basis of the venture. Shareholders in Pinebrook Limited are:

General Films Distributors, a distributor concern, which puts up a cash advance;

Pinewood Studios, represented by Captain Richard Norton, whose contribution is studio credit;

Messrs. O'Bryen, Linnit & Dunfee, owners of the play, who contribute the film rights; and Alfred Drayton and Robertson Hare, principal comedians and stars of the film who will take half salaries while the film is in production.

All these will share in the proceeds accruing from box-office takings, from which Pinebrook will receive a substantial percentage. Anthony Havelock-Allan, who is resident producer at the Pinewood Studios, will be in charge, and Sandra Storm will supply feminine relief.

On the success of this venture other co-operative productions at Pinewood stand.

Last for Fox

"Second Thoughts," the last Fox British film which will be made until the Quota Act is law, went in production at the Wembley Park

Will Hay, favorite English comedian, as Convict 99 in Gainsborough's picture of that name now in production at Islington.

Studios. Albert Parker is directing and Frank Fox and Evelyn Ankers have the leading roles.

Frank Allenby, J. Bromley Davenport and Marjorie Fielding are also playing important parts in the picture.

David Evans, who during the past year has been responsible for 11 adaptations and screen plays and two originals for Fox-British, has written both the original and the screen play for "Second Thoughts."

On the conclusion of the film the Fox British studios will call a halt to active production, dismissing some 200 odd employees, and retaining a skeleton staff of 15.

No plans are advanced for future activity, and none will be prepared until the full contents of the completed and ratified Film Bill is made known.

Fox British will have made 16 films in the last 12 months.

Irish Story Planned

Scheduled to take the floor at Walton on Thames this month is "Mountains O'Mourne" from an original story by D. L. Fielding, to be directed by Harry Hughes.

As might be imagined from the title, the film has an Irish setting, and includes in its cast two noted Irish players, Niall Maginnis and Maire O'Neill. Among the supporting cast are Hamilton Keene and Johnnie Schofield. The script is in the hands of Gerald Brosnan.

"Mayflower" for Mayflower

"Mayflower" Productions headed by Eric Pommer and Charles Laughton are coincidentally planning to make a film about "The Mayflower."

One of the most famous stories in the history of Anglo-American records and dealing with the trials of the Pilgrim Fathers, it is to be taken from the life of William Brewster by Irving Leroy and Michael Sadlier. American and English authors respectively.

Matthews Musical Set

Preparations are now well advanced for the next Jessie Matthews musical to be made at Pinewood under the direction of husband Sonnie Hale, responsible for "Gangway" and "Sailing Along."

The film, a Gaumont British production, is to be titled "Asking for Trouble" and goes into active production in March.

Fourth Version

Comedy classic of British vaudeville, the music-hall sketch, "A Sister to Assist 'Er," is to be made into a feature film by Associated Independent Producers, at the head of which is Widgey R. Newman, film trade zoologist, expert on racing form and creator of a record number of documentaries. The show has already been filmed three times—twice as a silent.

George Dewhurst, who directed all three of the other versions, comes to the director's seat again and will occupy it jointly with Newman.

The film goes into production at the M. P. Studios, Elstree, almost immediately.

The role of "Mrs. May," immortalized on the stage by the late Fred Emney, has been given to Miss Muriel George. Polly Emory, who played in the three former versions, is again "Mrs. Getch," whilst Charles Paton, another of the original company, has taken the role of Mr. Harris.

Mr. George Dewhurst wrote the scenario.

Itemized

The West End stage actor, Michael Redgrave, at present appearing as Tusenbach in John Gielgud's revival of "Three Sisters" at Queen's Theatre, London, has been signed on long-term contract by Maurice Ostrer to appear under the Gaumont British-Gainsborough aegis. His first film will be "The Wheel Spins." Alfred Hitchcock will direct this international spy drama at Islington Studios immediately "Convict 99" has been completed there.

The Scottish character comedian, Will Fyffe, Gainsborough contract star, has been assigned to the part of the nervous little jeweller in the screen version of Barre Lyndon's stage success, "They Came by Night." So pleased were Gainsborough with Fyffe's portrayal of Adam MacAdam, the irascible old sheep farmer in "Owd Bob," that they bought this vehicle specially for him.

Jack Raymond, director of "The Rat," has finished work on the Gordon Harker comedy-thriller, "No Parking," at Beaconsfield. The film has been made by Herbert Wilcox Productions at Beaconsfield for British Lion release.

Adrian Brunel, British film director, has appeared in the role of playwright. His play, "Only Yesterday," is currently running in a Palmers Green repertory theatre.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

Sidney Meyer, of Wometco Theatres, Florida, sent a wire of congratulations to Samuel Goldwyn for the box office performance of Mr. Goldwyn's "Goldwyn Follies" at Mr. Meyer's theatres. "There was standing room only from opening 'till closing," telegraphed Mr. Meyer, "with thousands being turned away."

He added: "The aggregation of talent that has been gathered for this picture supplies entertainment for everybody's tastes. Whether highbrow or lowbrow. The fact that 'Goldwyn Follies' beat the previous record without the benefit of an extra-holiday business is the most amazing box office performance in the history of our theatres. 'You've got a smash hit on your hands.'"

A tough problem for Mr. Goldwyn.

Because of the possible participation of motion pictures in the California Golden Gate International Exposition of 1939, on "Treasure Island," off San Francisco, in the Pacific, it seems pertinent to report that the Exposition Commissioners, susceptible even though they usually are to the high-pressurings of some of their fanciful-minded colleagues, have put their foot down on the use of camels and elephants as the sole means of locomotion for hauling visitors around the Fair. The authorities felt that camels and elephants, while delightfully romantic and "Pacific" in symbolism, might bring the $50,000,000 Pageant of the Pacific into bad odor.

If and when Eddie Bergen's Charlie McCarthy ceases to pay the board bills, Eddie will turn to cinematography, an old hobby which, unknown to most, was mastered by him way back when. He's even a member of the American Cinematographers in Hollywood.

Eddie Bergen entered show business literally through the front of the house—getting himself a job as usher in a Chicago theatre. There again the camera—with a good bit of the Bergen Scandinavian luck—paid a profit.

Learning of Eddie's interest in photography, the manager asked him to make a picture of the theatre. Bergen gladly complied, but when the time came to exhibit a print, Usher Bergen probably wished he could usher himself to the least conspicuous seat in the back of the top balcony.

The picture itself had turned out all right, but the negative had been carefully left to dry in the sun—and it was a very hot day. As might be expected, the emulsion had softened and run, until the imaged theatre bulged and sagged in all the wrong places!

None the less, with true Viking fortitude, Bergen showed his distorted picture. And at that juncture, whoever was the Vikings' god of luck proved to be smartly on the job. "The manager looked at the picture," said Bergen, "and to my dismay suddenly broke into roars of laughter. When he stopped, he amazed me by ordering a lot of prints."

"He was a good showman all right, for he sent those prints out to all his friends with the notation that his house was doing such business with the comedy then playing that it was literally rocking and bulging with laughter."

Vittorio Mussolini, in Italy, is going ahead with his own plans for action picture production. Vittorio, with Corrado Alessandrini, has already made "Luciana Serra," a film extolling the life of a young Italian plane pilot in the World War and the Ethiopian "invasion"—except that Senor Alessandrini did most of the work, and probably will get none of the credit.

Anyway, Alessandrini is a very discontented young man today. He and the son of Il Duce took a look at the final rushes, and Vittorio decided to make some changes, to which Alessandrini did not agree. So, Young Mussolini ordered Alessandrini to Ethiopia to shoot some more exteriors. He left Rome only with great reluctance. With him out of the way, Mister Mussolini proceeded to "doctor" the film a la Mussolini. Taking, for example, the climactic scene, where "Serra" the pilot is dying, Vittorio inserted extracts of his father's war speeches, and "Serra" is now seen dying very, very happily, because he hears his Duce praise the mission of Italian soldiers in Africa.

The normal competitive feeling existing between sales executives of two competing motion picture companies was non-existent the other morning when Rudolph Berger, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer manager at Washington, D. C., telephoned to Harry Hunter, manager for Paramount in Australia, in the first call ever made from the Potomac district to Sydney. It was a case of Mr. Berger talking into tomorrow, and of Mr. Hunter, at Sydney, talking to yesterday—the Potomac time of the call clocking 11:45 on Wednesday morning, when it was 2:45 the next morning in Sydney.

Mr. Berger spent $45, at the rate of $15 the minute, to have his voice run from Roanoke, Virginia, up to Holden, Maine, across the ocean by short wave to London, England, thence by short wave directly to Sydney, for a total of 14,000 miles, and, from the exchange at Sydney, another few miles to Mr. Hunter's private telephone—his number is F3562.

Probing a bit into the mechanics, Metro Manager Berger learned that the conversation, in its short wave transmission, is transformed into "inverted speech" to make it impossible for any person tuning in on the circuit to understand the conversation. The inverted speech is a transposition of the high tones into low tones and low into high, and these tones are re-transposed into proper tone on each end of the short wave system.

LORDS RECEIVE NEW FILMS BILL UNCHANGED BY COMMONS DEBATE

Lower House Approves Act With Little Change From White Paper Draft; Final Ap- proval Expected Next Week

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

Grave consideration of the proposed new Films Bill in the House of Lords this week followed the heated debates over the measure in the House of Commons which reached a crescendo immediately before final passage of the measure by that body when the Government proposed and, at the last minute, withdrew a proposal which would have given renters a three to one quota advantage.

The measure received its first reading before the Lords last Friday and the debate and second reading were expected to take place late this week with the committee report stage to follow within a few days thereafter.

In general the bill went through the lower house as originally planned by the Government, most of the subsequent amendments having been rejected, and the belief that the measure which will supplant the current Films Act, expiring this year, would take the form first outlined by Oliver Stanley in the White Paper was confirmed.

Members of the House of Lords with labor leanings are expected to introduce a motion seeking to substitute a Films Commission for the Films Council now provided for in the bill. It is anticipated also that the same members of the upper house will seek amendments providing for additional safeguards for labor with respect to fair wages.

Appeals were made this week to the Government by the Premier of New South Wales to reconsider the clause, inserted in the measure at the last minute by Mr. Stanley, that films designed for quota eligibility must be produced in the United Kingdom. The clause has the effect of banning for quota purposes all film produced in the British Dominions of Canada, India or Australia.

Quota Starts at 15 Per Cent

The quota provisions, which proved the most controversial in the House of Commons, provide that the exhibitors' quota shall be 15 per cent for the first year, increasing gradually during the ten year period of the new law to 25 per cent. The distributors' quota will run from 15 per cent in the first year to a final high of 30 per cent. The present distributors' quota legislation will expire at the end of this month.

Alarm was spread through exhibitor ranks when, following publication of a press release by John Maxwell, head of Associated British Pictures, it appeared possible an attempt would be made in the House of Lords to reintroduce the Stanley triple quota plan which provided that films costing more than a specified amount would be counted for three on the distributor quota. Mr. Maxwell appealed to the exhibitor interests to reconsider their opposition to the plan, suggesting the value of concentration on quality pictures and hinting that the Board of Trade should provide greater elasticity to prevent a product shortage which was the basis of their objection.

QUOTA AS ANTIDOTE FOR WORLD CRISIS

The proposed new British Films Bill, currently in the process of debate and approval in Parliament furnished a handy antidote to the storms of hot debate aroused by the European crisis and its repercussions in the British Government, according to the New York Times.

A wireless dispatch to the newspaper from London this week said in part:

"After the tension and excitement, the House of Commons, after Mr. Chamberlain had either evaded or denied questions on foreign affairs, turned almost gratefully to the strictly internal, dull and complicated Films Bill, which was excellently calculated to act as an antidote to the violent emotions of the debate of the last two days."

Weeks of angry protest by various elements in the industry against certain phases of the new bill reached a climax last week when the Government voluntarily abandoned the three to one renters' quota proposal. After a general attack in the House of Commons in which every speaker opposed the plan, Sir Kingsley Wood said that under the existing circumstances the proposal would be withdrawn.

U. S. Blamed for Losses

The failure of Hollywood to produce a sufficient number of outstanding pictures during the year was blamed for the fact that English patronage did not increase during the 1937-38 season in the annual report of the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association.

The organization expressed confidence that if producers supplied good pictures greater patronage than ever would be attracted. Rentals now stand at a peak level and are endangering the whole structure of the industry, the report declared. Inclusion in the Films Bill of provision for a Film Council was the result of CEA efforts in complaining to the Board of Trade over the attempt of distributors to grade films, it was contended, and elsewhere it was suggested that in the future the Films Council might be of value in settling such trade problems.

Gaumont Sued by ABP

Action was filed last week in the King's Bench Division by Associated British Pictures Corporation against Isidore, Mark and Maurice Ostrer, claiming damages for alleged misrepresentation in connection with the agreement made in August, 1936, by which John Maxwell of ABP was to purchase shares in Metropolis and Bradford Trust, holding company of Gaumont British.

It was alleged that the claims regarding the status of the securities were incorrectly represented. The Ostrers have filed a denial.

Tax Adjustment Sought

With Britain's 1938 budget coming appreciably nearer, and her chancellor of the exchequer, Sir John Simon, faced with the annual task of balancing national accounts, exhibitors here have once again made one of their periodic bids for a cut in the entertainments tax, a duty imposed on them during the war, and excused by national emergency, but still fastened round the necks of the vast majority of entertainment impresarios.

Their demand this time is not exacting. It also has what the trade believes to be a strong bargaining point, the increasing and bitter competition of the football pool. This latter phenomenon, inexorably becoming a national institution, has been diverting £40,000,000 a year into other than entertainment channels and reducing the purchasing power of the nation. It is tax free, and devoid of any duty beyond the very nominal poundage charged on postal orders dispatched by the country's millions of week-end gamblers.

With this argument to back them up, exhibitors, through their official body, the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association, have appealed to Sir John Simon to take a meagre halfpenny off the three halfpenny tax on the cheaper seats, those between sixpence and a shilling. Sixpenny seats go tax free, but the three halfpence which is imposed on seats over that, and under a shilling, has necessitated exhibitors putting the eightpenny seats—recognized bread and butter bringers of the British cinema industry—up to ninepence, since English cinemagoers will have no truck with an odd halfpenny. The result, they claim, is that the vast majority of patrons spend sixpence, with an obvious attendant loss, not only to the exhibitor, but also to the national exchequer.

Backing up their appeal they point out that they are suffering intense competition from the football pool which goes tax free, and which is gaining an intensifying hold on the public every year.

Receipts Cut by Gambling

As already recorded, the diversion of money each year into this legalized gambling is colossal. It is not to be wondered at, for stakes are modest and dividends high. For a penny bet on fifteen selected football matches, clients have drawn tens of thousands of pounds, and the weekly dividend on forecasts, at sixpence a time, on four away winners three draws, or ten freely selected games, runs weekly into high figures, sometimes thousands of pounds.

It is claimed by exhibitors that apart from this divergence of money which has its obvious effect on the box office, with an ill paid proletariat, two nights of the week have been affected in attendance, Thursday night, on which the form is studied and the coupons filled in, and Fridays when the money is spent and postal orders dispatched. From all parts of the country cries of exhibitor alarm are being raised, and this appeal to the Chancellor is the first official and corporative reflection of that unrest.

Reference has already been made in these columns to the existence of a football pool organization backed by certain prominent, and some obscure film trade personalities, with offices in Wardour Street, and which organization has been the object of severe criticism from exhibitors.

Latest development in the situation has been the reported resignation from its board, and subsequent denial of resignation, of one of its leading personalities, the treasurer of the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association himself. Whilst not necessarily tied up with his Screen Pools directorship, it is none the less a fact that a new candidate is being put forward for the treasurer-ship of the association this year.

CEA, believes that football pools have a bad influence on the industry and objects to any organization which by its title suggests association with the industry in any way.

More is likely to be heard of the relations of the football pool to cinema takings, and already moves are afoot in Parliament to get a tax imposed on them. Until such a tax is imposed, exhibitors will, however, concentrate on an alleviation of their own tax burden.

Rental Talks Progressing

Joint talks between exhibitors and renters on the vexed subject of rentals have now taken a step forward and have reached the stage where practicable schemes of action are being discussed. Two proposals for the elimination of overlong programs and the prevention of booking of two "A" films in one show have been presented by the exhibitors for the examination and it is hoped approval of the Kinematograph Renters Society.

Emphatic assertion by the renters that there is no desire to cut rentals but only to stop excessively long programs has been accepted by the exhibitors, who in an expressed readiness to tackle the problem have suggested two ways of meeting the difficulty.

One of these aims at the elimination of the "A" film as a second feature by compelling 75 per cent of advertising and billing to be devoted to the "A" film in a program. The other suggests the drawing up of a special "A" film contract only one of which would be permissible in one booking period. Heavy penalties are proposed for offenders in either case. These are to be examined by the KRS in full session.

Exhibitors have remained solid in one bloc, circuits and independents alike being represented on the negotiating committee, and both jointly insisting that if the renters' desire is purely to limit programs and stop the booking of two "A" films in one program they will do their best to bring that about. The renters on their side have accepted this expression of goodwill and as a body have agreed to give serious consideration to any practicable efforts at solution.

Export Footage Down

Export of exposed positive films from Britain for January, 1938, were 1,874,152 feet valued at £11,376 ($56,880), against 1,963,567 feet valued at £10,175 ($50,875) for January, 1937, and 1,777,863 feet (£9,184 or $45,920) for 1936.

Films of all other descriptions exported in January were valued at £26,800 ($134,000), against £31,567 ($157,835) for January last year and £21,048 ($105,240) for January before.

Value of sensitized photographic plates, films, etcetera, exported, were: 1936, £34,017 ($170,085); 1937, £33,290 ($166,450); 1938, £32,388 ($161,940).

On the import side 7,853,910 feet of blank film came into this country valued at £19,218 ($96,090).

This shows a considerable increase in footage over the 5,855,221 feet of blank film imported in January last year, and the 5,234,319 feet of January the year before.

The value, however, decreased, the figures being: 1936, £19,296 ($96,480); 1937, £24,617 ($123,085); 1938, £19,218 ($96,090).

Exposed films imported showed a considerable drop.

Imports for January were 914,269 feet against 2,053,715 feet in January, 1937, and 2,240,319 feet in 1936.

CANADA SATISFIED WITH QUOTA STATUS

According to officials of the Canadian Department of Trade and Commerce the Dominion Government has no intention of appealing to the United Kingdom for the inclusion of Canadian-made features for shorts in the category of British films in the amendments to the British Films Act now before the House of Lords in London. The stand is taken that the matter is wholly for the consideration of the Imperial Government and one in which Canada has no say.

The official Canadian view is that British preference for made in Canada features is unnecessary under the revised quota law because Canadian films can still be shown on the screens of theatres in Great Britain without the blessing of quota privileges.

Values were lower, at £7,218 ($36,090), £15,048 ($75,240), £16,130 ($80,650).

Value of imports of sensitized photographic plates, films, etcetera, were: 1936, £23,390 ($116,950); 1937, £13,246 ($66,230); 1938, £18,520 ($92,600).

Re-exports cinematograph films were 907,178 feet for January this year against 672,688 for January, 1937, and 1,733,608 feet for 1936.

Paul Glase Anniversary Observed at Reading

A testimonial dinner was tendered Paul E. ("Peg") Glase in the Berkshire Hotel, Reading, Pa., last Thursday, to celebrate his 25th anniversary in the theatre business in Reading. Mr. Glase, manager of Wilmer & Vincent's Embassy theatre, and city manager for the company in Reading, started in the theatrical business in 1913 doing publicity for C. G. Keeney at the old Hippodrome there.

Among the 250 in attendance were John O. Glase, father, and Jack Glase, son, of the theatremen, both of whom spoke briefly. Another speaker was Joseph Egan, general manager of Wilmer & Vincent, who complimented Mr. Glase on his successful career. A special leased-wire broadcast by Frank L. Diefenderfer, a long-time friend and associate in many enterprises, from a bed in the Reading Hospital was a feature of the dinner.

Levy in Record 'Snow White' Deal

Walt Disney's "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" continues its unprecedented record of smashed box office receipts, attendance and long runs, with Boston, Providence, Baltimore, Reading, Richmond and Washington holding the picture for a fourth week. In New York the Palace and Albee are holding it over for third weeks and it will play concurrently with the RKO metropolitan circuit. Holdovers into second and third weeks are the rule in every key city in which the picture is playing.

Discussing reports of RKO Radio deals for "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" with the Skouras National Theatre circuit and with the Warner circuit, Jules Levy, general sales manager of the company, said that arrangements will return to the company the greatest revenue ever earned by a picture. Conditions of the National circuit deals included the playing of the picture on a single bill policy with guarantees for the longest playing time ever accorded a picture in each situation.

In many instances the runs will be for periods two or three times the length of top grossing pictures that have played in the past. Increased admission prices and particularly the matter of increased prices on children's tickets have been a factor in working out the circuit deals, according to Mr. Levy.

"The Call" to Open March 28

Best Film Company announces that it will present the American premiere of "The Call," opening at the Astor theatre in New York March 28th. "The Daughters of Mary, Health of the Sick," created by His Eminence Patrick Cardinal Hayes, will sponsor the opening. The committee includes, among others, Alfred J. Talley, chairman; John P. O'Brien, Alfred E. Smith, John J. Bennett, Jr., Major Edward Bowes, Eddie Dowling, Martin Quigley, Salvatore Cottillo and Mrs. Philip A. Brennan. "The Call," now an all-English talking film, is based on the life of Charles de Foucauld, officer of the Foreign Legion, adventurer, explorer and missionary.

Bryan Succeeds Cohn

The Senate in Washington on Monday confirmed the nomination of William Jennings Bryan, Jr., son of the late "Great Commoner," to be Collector of Customs at Los Angeles, a post recently made vacant by the resignation of Al Cohn, on his return to Hollywood production.

A welcome luncheon will be tendered Ted O'Shea by exhibitors in the New York zone at the Hotel Astor, March 23rd. Mr. O'Shea was recently appointed eastern district manager for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

SHOWMEN'S REVIEWS

Mad about Music

(Universal)
Whimsey

It is traditional that at least once a season Universal produces an extraordinary motion picture. For example, in recent memory it provided "All Quiet on the Western Front," "Frankenstein," "Magnificent Obsession," "My Man Godfrey." Earlier in its long history it had offered such films as "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," "Phantom of the Opera." Of late the pictures in which Deanna Durbin has been starred, "Three Smart Girls" and "100 Men and a Girl," have been Universal's show-case attractions. Now comes "Mad About Music," with Deanna Durbin, expertly supported by Herbert Marshall, Gail Patrick, Arthur Treacher, William Frawley, Marcia Mae Jones, Helen Parish, Jackie Moran, Christian Rub and a competent group of minor players, a production well qualified to take high place among those fine pictures mentioned.

Only rarely do productions so adroitly combine assured entertainment and exploitation values as in "Mad about Music." Whether it is shown in luxurious picture palaces or remote country theatres, it should charm all who see it, for it is rich in those essentials that stir the softer emotions. While the title bears no relation to the theme, no exhibitor who seeks to offer his patrons quality screen merchandise can do less than mark "Mad about Music" on his booking sheet in big bold letters.

Rich in comedy, threaded with pathos that brings an occasional tear or two, supplemented by a worthy music score and with Miss Durbin singing Gounod's "Ave Maria" and three topical Jimmy McHugh-Harold Adamson compositions, the simple story has universal appeal.

In a Swiss girls' school, fatherless "Gloria," long separated from her mother, who is a glamorous Hollywood star, creates a fictitious father for herself. Most of the girls thrill to the vivid letters which "Gloria," with the help of kindly "Pierre," writes to herself and in which her "father" is described as a world exploring-adventurer. One girl, jealous "Felice," doubts "Gloria's" white lies. As the story revolves around the "puppy love" of "Gloria" and "Tommy," "Felice" insists that "Gloria" produce her "father."

Much to the amazement of his valet, "Tripps," and to his own astonishment, traveling bachelor "Richard Todd" is selected by "Gloria" to be her make-believe "father." Embarrassed many times as he is forced to verify her tall tales, "Todd" acts the part of "father" perfectly, convincing the teachers, chum "Olga" and doubting "Felice" that he is actually "Gloria's" parent.

Accidentally "Gloria" learns that her mother, the great "Gwen Taylor," is in Paris, just as "Todd" is leaving. Warm comedy in the train, when the ticketless "Gloria" sings to attract "Todd's" attention to her, sets the stage for the climax. Rebuffed by manager "Dusty," "Gloria" does manage to get one glimpse of "Gwen," before again seeking out "Todd" to request he send her back to school. But "Todd" senses the relationship, notes the resemblance between "Gwen" and "Gloria," turns a gathering of the Paris press into pandemonium when he enters to present living proof of "Gwen's" statement that "I'll give you a big story. I'm the mother of a fourteen year old girl." Later in Switzerland, as "Todd" and "Gwen" hold hands, the singing "Gloria" realizes she will soon have a real father.

Selling "Mad about Music" to the public should be considered by any exhibitor both an opportunity and pleasure. Everything necessary for an outstanding attraction from a showmanship standpoint is included. There's a rising young star name to shout about loudly; there's a platoon of favorably known names with which to supplement every advertising effort. There's a story in which happiness banishes sorrow, where sobs give way to laughter, where the panic that threatens tragedy to a lonely little girl is the source of enjoyment to all who watch her live it. There's delightful music and production detail of superior grade.

Publicity that accentuates the sincere humaneness of "Mad about Music" and emphasizes the intelligent contributions made to it by producer Joe Pasternak, director Norman Taurog, authors Marcella Burke and Frederick Kohner, and adapters Bruce Manning and Felix Jackson, should bring the customers flocking to see this Deanna Durbin picture.

Previewed the Warner theatre, Beverly Hills. The press and studio audience was deeply impressed. Post-showing comment was admirably summed up in the concluding sentence in the Los Angeles Examiner review: "Judging from audience reaction, we advise everybody to chalk up 'Mad about Music' as a 'must see' picture."

No Time to Marry

(Columbia)

Comedy

Based on a Saturday Evening Post story by Paul Gallico, who deserted newspaper work for fiction writing, "No Time to Marry" depicts the adventures of a reporter and a sob sister who are seeking to be married.

In the leading roles are Richard Arlen as the reporter, "Perry Brown," and Mary Astor as his bride-to-be and his colleague on the newspaper, the Daily Blade. In the supporting cast, and supplying most of the comedy, are Lionel Stander as a newspaper photographer and Virginia Dale, as a missing heiress.

This department deals with new product from the point of view of the exhibitor who is to purvey it to his own public

A bit slow in getting started, the story is unfolded at a rapid pace once the situation is explained in the Daily Blade office.

"Brown" and "Kay" have repeatedly been forced to postpone their marriage because one or the other has been out on a news story. "Brown" in desperation passes up an opportunity to cover a missing heiress story. But "Petonsall" (Thurston Hall), managing editor, forces "Brown" to search for two goats which are to be a Christmas present to the editor's son. Through a telephone mixup, "Brown" arranges to meet the missing heiress, who joins the reporter and the photographer in their search for the goats.

"Kay" later joins the party, recognizes the heiress, and determines to break the story without her groom-to-be knowing anything about it.

The search is carried on in a zoo, in pet shops and finally a farm house, despite frequent and unsolicited trips to the police station for investigation. Everything is finally solved however.

Hawaii Calls

(RKO Radio)

Pathos and Melodrama

Conceivably this picture could have been made with a juvenile star other than Bobby Breen. If it had, showmen would have had for exploitation the beauty of the South Seas, the heart-touching pathos of two orphan boys making their way across 2,000 miles of ocean in search of a home and happiness, or the stirring drama of the same two unwanted boys confounding an international spy ring. As it is, they may concentrate first on the drawing power of a boy singer whose name has been broadcast by radio, by national advertising media and by word of mouth through the cumulative effect of previous successes, turning after that to bringing in the stragglers through exploitation of other values.

And of other values there is no stinting. Primarily, through the whole picture runs the thread of the potent fascination for the islands, summed up in the strains of "Aloha Oe," which, through the wide dissemination of travel bureau literature, the ubiquitous ukelele and the frequently maligned hula dance, has been exerted upon literally millions of Americans. to this are a well constructed story which wisely does not revolve entirely around Bobby, the peculiar and popular humor of Ned Sparks, some appealing acting by a young Hawaiian boy who is Bobby's orphan companion, singable and lingering melodies, the music of Raymond Paige's orchestra, and outstanding scenic photography.

The story is simple but well proportioned and kept in its place. A young orphan and his Hawaiian companion, determined to find a home with the Hawaiian's relatives on the island of Maui, stowaway on a passenger liner leaving San Francisco for Honolulu. Discovered and befriended by a member of the ship's orchestra, they escape at Honolulu with his help and are welcomed by the native family. They are instrumental in the capture of an international spy ring whose members have stolen naval plans from an officer who, as a consequence, clears up their difficulties with the steamship officials and the police. The boys' adventures end with adoption of the American youth by the officer.

Through this straightforward plot comedy, song, suspense and scenic beauty are interspersed in agreeable proportion. The musical numbers assigned to Bobby are introduced without strain and are not so numerous as to appear the sole reason for the production.

Dangerous to Know

(Paramount)

Melodrama

"With 'The Buccaneer' adding daily to his fame for his performance as the cannoneer, Akim Tamiroff's name is an ascending box office value. Here he is listed second to Anna May Wong, also on the upswing just now, but his part is the principal one and the story is built around him. These two are, just now, perhaps the best names available for use in exploiting this melodrama, although Gail Patrick and Harvey Stephens are the pair happily married in the final closeup and other names include Roscoe Karns, Lloyd Nolan, Hedda Hopper and Anthony Quinn.

Mr. Tamiroff plays "Stephen Recka," polished gangster in control of the city's politics and finances. Social ambitions lead him into trouble when he seeks to force socialite "Margaret Van Kase" to marry him by framing her sweetheart, "Philip Easton," as an embezzler. "Lan Ying," the gangster's household hostess (it is emphasized), commits suicide and a police inspector, unable to convict "Recka" of eight known murders, arrests him on what he knows to be the false but provable charge of killing her. The young folk fly away to matrimony.

The picture is from a play by the late Edgar Wallace, whose pen was both prolific and bloody. The treatment, in screen play by William R. Lipman and Horace McCoy and the direction of Robert Florey, is unique. Edward T. Lowe is associate producer. (An interpolated gramophone rendition of "Thanks for the Memory" is a nice ad for "The Big Broadcast of 1938," another Paramount picture, but stops this one in its tracks for longer than is good for it.)

Sally, Irene and Mary

(20th Century-Fox)

Musical Comedy

It would be pretty hard to find a place where the title of this production doesn't possess box office strength. It would be harder to find one where less than six of the names available for marquee display are of known pulling power. Adding title to cast to score, and mixing well with appropriate adjectives, the showman disposed to break out a full spread of sail would seem practically doomed to make some money with the picture. It's built that way.

No doubt a good many communities where Fred Allen's radio program is strong will turn out in force to see the comedian on the screen, where they'll probably see much more of him later on. There are Jimmy Durante communities, too, and there's been quite an increase in the Joan Davis-conscious population the last several months. The Gregory Ratoff public has checked in importantly at various box offices on occasion, and there is of course, a substantial Louise Hovick bloc, now that Minsky's has been liquidated. The Raymond Scott Quintette has its own allure for the college crowd, of all ages.

These are the persons who support Alice Faye and Tony Martin in the leading roles, "leading" being used here in the sense that they are the two who marry at fadeout time. Actually, although both have plenty of singing to do, and the lady also does some varied stepping, their romance just goes on quietly between production numbers and comedy sequences, never impeding the practically continuous activity of the assorted entertainers also involved, however lightly, in the narrative.

Gene Markey, who learned his musical comedy inside and out before Broadway went 5 & 10, whipped up the new "Sally, Irene and Mary" with an eye and ear to today's tastes. The play of the title was by Edward Dowling and Cyrus Wood. The story of the picture, by Karl Tunberg and Don Ettlinger, was suggested by this play. Then Harry Tugend and Jack Yellen wrote the screen play from that. That would have been about the point at which Mr. Markey and director William A. Seiter came in and decided to just go ahead and make the picture. Whether or no, the work bears the Markey imprint, the light touch and the suave manner acclaimed by the cinema public as displayed in "On the Avenue," a directly comparable offering.

Music is from three sources. Raymond Scott, of the Quintette contributed "Minuet in Jazz," the best single item in the picture. Gordon and Revel turned in two song numbers, and five more were had from Walter Bullock and Harold Spina. The radio is now in the process of determining the best of these, with "I Could Use a Dream" leading at the moment.

The Port of Missing Girls

(Monogram)

Melodrama

The chief exploitation assets are the title and the locale of most of the action—Shanghai and upper China. The plot is strictly formula and the performance of a kind.

Judith Allen, the feminine lead, sings "Dream Cargo" and "One Night One Kiss" (music by Charles Rosoff and lyrics by Eddie Cherkose), and the oldtime favorite, "Long, Long Ago," in pleasing voice, but the singing hit is made by Jane Jones, local night club entertainer, in the presentation of "I Changed My Routine," by Rosoff and Cherkose.

Others in the cast are Milburn Stone, Harry Carey, Betty Compson, Matty Fain, Eddie Kane, George Cleveland, William Costello, Sandra Karina, Lyle Moraine and Louis Vincent.

Judith Allen has the role of a San Francisco night club entertainer, who is implicated, although innocent, in a gang murder. She stows away on the boat of a woman-hating captain, played by Harry Carey, who agrees to take her to Shanghai, "the port of missing girls," so she can hide from the authorities. She falls in love with the ship's radio operator (Milburn Stone), and agrees to stay at the combination boarding house night club in Shanghai while the captain takes his ship up the river with a cargo of guns for the Chinese government. Hearing of a plot of enemies of the Chinese to seize the vessel, the stowaway gives herself up to the American consul so that he can warn the ship of the peril. In a gunfight the enemies are vanquished, American authorities solve the slaying and the girl is freed.—VANCE KING, Hollywood.

Call the Mesquiteers

(Republic)

Western

The three Mesquiteers, Bob Livingston, Ray Corrigan and Max Terhune, pit their skill and daring against a gang of silk thieves in this fairly entertaining if unexciting western. Romance, usually an important element in the series, is missing this time.

Opening on a freight train the story pictures the thieves dumping bales of raw silk from the train, where they are picked up by confederates in trucks. Leaving the scene, one of the trucks is wrecked in an accident, so the three occupants stop the first vehicle that comes along, a truck containing the Mesquiteers and three horses. The law catches up with the truck and in a gun battle the thieves are killed.

The Mesquiteers, accused of being members of the gang, escape and head for Cosmopolis, destination of the slain henchmen of the bandits. En route the Mesquiteers lend assistance to a medicine salesman, his daughter and young son, whose auto is stalled. The group arrives in Cosmopolis, a ghost town. The salesman's son chances upon the hideout of the gang, who kidnap him. The Mesquiteers follow on horseback and in a gun battle the last of the outlaws are captured.

Mystery

(Republic)

Murder Story

For a mystery story involving two murders and sundry other complications thrills have been given less attention than a comedy romance revolving around the district attorney and a girl fiction writer who get in each other's way trying to solve the crimes. Cast performance becomes a larger exploitation asset than story.

In the role of district attorney Neil Hamilton makes the most of a rather weak starring part and Evelyn Venable as the writer turns in the best performance of the cast. Others in capable character roles include Jimmy Wallington, Barbara Pepper, Lucien Littlefield and Lynn Roberts. Smiley Burnett, shadow of Gene Autry, appears briefly in an excellent imitation of a broadcast of an auto speed race.

"Bill Devons" (Hamilton) meets "Polly Ward" (Miss Venable) at a gathering of criminologists. Later while "Polly" and her agent are attending a championship boxing bout the challenger is murdered. "Devons," district attorney, is called upon to handle the investigation. Suspicion centers around the group at the ringside. When one of the suspects is found murdered the district attorney arrests "Edna" (Lynn Roberts), who is found unconscious a few feet from the crime.

"Polly" has her own ideas about the crimes and accuses the radio announcer. He in a counter move transfers suspicion elsewhere. "Polly" finally finds out who the murderer is, at another boxing bout. The killer kidnaps her, takes her to his apartment and is about to kill her when the "marines" arrive.

She Married an Artist

(Columbia)

Comedy Romance

Thematically based on the so-called temperamental nature of artists and fashioned into a modern, fast paced comedy romance of the sort currently fashionable in Hollywood, this Columbia picture is not in the same class with its "The Awful Truth" but it is lively and entertaining, with light treatment even of the supposedly more serious sequences.

The screen play by Gladys Lehman and Delmar Daves, based on a story that appeared in the Saturday Evening Post, concerns a French clothes designer who marries an American artist, illustrator for magazines, with situation after situation prolonging their honeymoon and threatening divorce before the happy ending.

John Boles and Luli Deste are a handsome team, a distinct asset of the production. Miss Deste is one of Hollywood's newest importations, and if the picture is any criterion, one of the best. In supporting roles are some excellent character players, including Frances Drake, Alexander D'Arcy and Helen Westley.

"Antoinette" (Luli Deste), arriving in America, denounces "Lee Thornwood" (John Boles) as an artist. "Lee," who knew "Antoinette" in Paris five years earlier, rushes to demand a retraction. The upshot of the meeting is a wedding.

"Lee," comforting his tired model "Sally" (Frances Drake), kisses her. "Antoinette" witnesses the scene but her calm disconcerts "Lee."

A divorce is agreed upon. "Lee" goes to Chicago to complete his work. While there he reads a newspaper interview with "Antoinette" in which she accuses him of being too temperamental. "Lee" takes the first plane for New York to have it out with his wife, a meeting that culminates in a happy reunion.

Songs and Dances

In a Spanish patio setting, four singing and dancing acts are presented with Luba Malina, one of the singers, serving as master of ceremonies. She first introduces the Mia Miles Foursome and after their adagio presentation Jan Peerce, tenor at the Radio City Music Hall, sings. Mr. Peerce then calls upon Miss Malina to sing a comedy number and the film closes with the Dansapators, 12 dancers, offering their routine with Mr. Peerce and Miss Malina singing. Running time, 11 minutes.

Informative

The "tops" in the revelatory material contained in this latest screen bulletin from the wonderland which is Hollywood is the presentation of that major social, historical and artistic event called a film premiere. The occasion is the opening of "The Hurricane." Compared to this lavish and important happening, the business of the James Gleasons entertaining a paltry number of two hundred visiting movie fans, the shooting of a collegiate picture on location, the arrival of the latest imported European screen stars and the Ritz Brothers memorializing their marks in the Grauman collection of famous footprints seem trivial matters. Running time, 10 minutes.

Cartoon Cutups

Translation of the pen and ink characters of the Captain and the Kids is effected with all the amusement and ingenuity of the original cartoon and amplified. The Captain attempts to avoid the unpleasant task of helping in the family house cleaning by pretending to be ill. How the kids pose as the attending medico to administer a disagreeable dose of rough house treatment affords high moments of grand fun and clever cartooning animation. This newest addition to the comic category should tickle the collective funny bone of the family audience.—Running time, eight minutes.

In the Swim

(RKO-Radio)

Pathe Sportscope

Swimming and diving, as the title implies, are featured in this reel which was made at swimming resorts in and around Miami, Fla. The film opens with a shot of a graceful swan dive from the topsail yard of a square rigger anchored in Biscayne Bay. Then the form and rhythm of Olympic champions is shown in a series of dives at various pools. Marshall Wayne does a half-Gaynor and a full twist. Jane Fauntz executes a back dive with a full twist and at the same time, Joe Bolton, narrator, explains that the dive is one of her own invention and never shown on the screen before. Tony Zukas, acrobatic diver, also goes through his routine.—Running time, 10 minutes.

THE SOLUTION

FINE grain, solver of many a photographic problem, has finally overcome the problem of duplicating. Eastman Fine Grain Duplicating Films are capable of making "dupes" that cannot be distinguished from originals. Now the original in the laboratory and the duplicate in the vault can be actually equal in quality. Eastman Kodak Company, Rochester, N. Y. (J. E. QUALITY OF FRENCH PRODUCTION SEEN AT PEAK IN AWARD PICTURES

Many of 123 Films Produced
In 1937 Outstanding; New Talent Gives Promise of Successful Year to Come

by PIERRE AUTRE
in Paris

Great improvement in the quality of the French production, a revival which may be said to have started two years ago, in 1937 reached a point which exceeded the most optimistic predictions.

The awards granted last September, at the Venice Biennial, to three French films, "Un Carnet de Bal" ("Dance Programme"); "Les Perles de La Couronne" ("Pearls of the Crown"), and "La Grande Illusion" ("The Great Illusion"), were confirmation of the improvement.

That 1937 was important for the French Cinema, perhaps more so morally than financially, as it is still too early to know the financial results, is shown not only by the awards but also in the unprecedented success, in France and in many foreign countries of some French films and in the opinion of foreign buyers and of foreign critics that French production has attained a place among the best in Europe.

It must be said that this high quality concerns only 20 per cent of the whole yearly production, which means about 25 of the 123 feature films turned out in 1937. Of these 123 films, 25 others were of good average quality and may be exported, and about 70, mostly comedies and rather vulgar farces, are not exportable and are suitable only for exhibition in France.

The 1937 total of 123 feature films represents the highest in recent years, compared with 117 in 1936, 115 in 1935 and 108 in 1934.

The total cost of the French production for 1937 can be estimated at about 225 million francs (about $7,500,000). The average price of $89,000 for a French film was the cost estimated last September, compared with $57,000, two years before. As the cost has not stopped increasing since June 1936, after the coming of the new Government, the application of new social laws, higher wages and higher cost of living, films produced at the beginning of 1937 were cheaper than those produced now.

In spite of this increase, the cost of a French film may still seem rather low to American or British producers. Outstanding French films, such as "La Grande Illusion," "Pepe le Moko" or "Un Carnet de Bal" did not cost more than between $100,000 and $130,000 each.

The improvement in production, which has been noticed this year by film people all over the world, is not accidental. Its reasons are various and can be deduced from the following facts.

The first thing to be noted is that the revival started with the disappearance, three years ago, of the only two big French producing companies, Gaumont and Pathé-Natan, each of which turned out regularly 20 to 25 films yearly.

It happened that the independent producers who previously had suffered from the competition of these concerns, found the whole market free for themselves. This opened to them opportunities they had never had before. Moreover, directors, artists, cameramen and writers,

IMPROVEMENT SEEN IN FRENCH FILMS

French pictures have been improved with the result they are making inroads upon American distribution, William Sussman, eastern division manager for Twentieth Century-Fox, announced when he arrived in New York last week from a European trip.

England is enjoying great prosperity which is admittedly due to the British armament program, Mr. Sussman said.

In Italy, he continued, business is good for American companies but it depends upon the pictures "you can get through the censors." Exhibitors in Italy have sufficient advance knowledge about American pictures, he added, so that they take only the better product.

who were under contract to these companies were also free and were taken up by the independent producers.

Nevertheless the situation was not too bright as actors and technicians were never sure of tomorrow's work. They were employed for one film and afterwards often unemployed for a period of three or six months. As only the best were employed, others were discouraged and left the business. Some excellent units were formed, however, working in close connection with their producer, concentrating all their efforts and their attention on the making of one film at a time.

These small independent companies were always short of money, and while three unsuccessful pictures in 20 for a big company is a reasonable proportion, one unsuccessful picture, for an independent producer, means bankruptcy. Because of this producers were obliged to be careful of every cent they spent and this obligation made them eliminate gradually all the inadequate staff, and keep only the directors, players, writers, and technicians capable of turning out successful films. Thus through the law of natural elimination, with a few exceptions, only the strongest and the most capable ones remained at the end of 1937.

This development seems to have reached its highest point in 1937, for, never up to date, has the quality of the production, and of the actors, and the variety and interest of the subjects treated, been so great.

The 123 French films produced in 1937 were made by 90 different producing companies, with the help of 80 film directors and of 17 studios, 14 in Paris and 3 in the south of France.

Whatever the quality of these films there are two connected questions which are still great problems for French exhibitors; finance and amortization.

French producers have much difficulty finding money to finance their films, a subject which has been treated in a previous article in MOTION PICTURE HERALD. The most important fact to be noted in the matter is that in 1937 half of the French films were financed by English money, especially by Lloyds of London.

Due to the high rate of exchange, this system is unlikely to be continued, but, since the recent success of many French films, French financiers seem ready to lend money and to give credit to the best and most serious producers.

The second problem is the amortization of French films. The domestic market is insufficient to amortize French production. The sales and the exploitation of French films do not give the figures that could be expected when one considers the quality of certain of the films.

Available Material

France possesses at the present moment, 18 film studios, 15 in Paris and the suburbs, one at Marseilles and two in Nice. Among them these studios have 40 sets. The main ones and the most modern are the Pathé-Cinema Studios, one in Paris and one in the suburbs, at Joinville; the Paramount Studios of St. Maurice, near Paris (which were closed during the whole of 1937 except for dubbing, and for Paramount Newsreel editing and printing); and the Paris-Studios-Cinema, of Billancourt, also near Paris. Of the 123 French features produced in 1937, 24 were made in the Pathé Studios, 20 at the Paris-Studios-Cinema, representing one third of the total production. The rest were divided among other studios, such as the Neuilly Studios and the François Ier Studios (these last ones being in the heart of Paris, near the Champs Elysees), with 12 films each, followed by the Gaumont Studios of Paris, with 11 films.

There are five developing and printing laboratories, and about half a dozen sound-recording studios, specializing in dubbing. MGM and Twentieth Century-Fox have their own studios for dubbing.

Other important allied industries are the manufacturers of raw film, Kodak-Pathé; the manufacturers of cameras, André Debrie, and Caméréclair; the manufacturers of theatre equipment, etc. All these industries represent a total capital of 390 million francs ($13,000,000) and a yearly turnover of 260 million francs ($3,670,000) with 8,000 workmen and employees.

Original Stories Increase

Sources of the films produced in 1937 were 54 original stories, 39 novels and 30 plays. These figures show a decrease in the number of plays and novels adapted for the screen, and an increase, from 38 to 44 per cent, of original stories. The decrease in the number of plays adapted, is mainly due to the fact that since the advent in France of the talking film, producers found in plays, an easy way of making films. All the old-fashioned or modern plays which were a success on the stage were put into films without much transformation. For at least six years the French talking pictures were filmed stage plays, with dialogue as the most important feature, little action and few location scenes.

At the beginning of 1938 a great improvement in the matter is to be noted. With a few exceptions, French producers no longer adapt their main films from plays, and when they do they make the effort of transforming them for the screen. The best examples of this are to be found in the screen adaptation of two plays by Henry Bernstein: "Le Messenger" and "Le Venin," adapted for the screen by the French author, Marcel Achard. Another play which has been turned into a very good film is "Maman Colibri," by Henry Bataille.

Regarding the screen adaptation of plays, there is the very personal and particular case of Sacha Guitry. Three years ago, this French author and actor, decided to interest himself in the cinema and personally to superintend the filming of his most successful plays, directing them and starring in them. Thus several of his most popular stage plays were screened,

PROJECTION POVERTY

All modernizing is progress; but the picture on the screen is what you sell and the most important place to modernize is in the projection room. And the way to do it is with High Intensity projection — already adopted by over 5000 theaters.

Simplified High Intensity projection positively gives two to three times as much light on the screen for so little more than low intensity costs, that one extra admission per show will pay the difference.

Snow-white light improves black and white and is essential for color projection. Every theater will be showing color regularly before long.

If you are still using old style, low intensity projection because you believe it economical, you may be astonished to learn that you are paying too much for what you are getting.

Write us for free booklet, "The Eternal Triangle in Picture Projection," giving you all the facts.

"Mon Pere Avait Raison," "Le Nouveau Testament," "Faisons Un Reve," and his year, "Desire" and "Quadrille." These plays were filmed exactly as they were on the stage, with the same cast, the same scenery and the same dialogues. The only concessions made by Sacha Guitry to the cinema were the introduction of a few outdoor scenes and close-ups, semi-close-ups and long shots.

It happened that, due to Sacha Guitry's excellent reputation as an actor-playwright, and the cleverness and wit of his dialogues, his films have been very successful, not only in the Provinces and in French speaking countries, where it is a rare treat to see any of Guitry's plays, starring its author and with the original cast, but also in Paris.

Sacha Guitry made two exceptions to the rule when he wrote the original stories for two of his films, "Le Roman d'un Tricheur" ("The Cheat") and "Les Perles de la Couronne" ("Pearls of the Crown").

32 Percent from Novels

Although novels have decreased as a source it is not for the same reason as stage plays, as there are many French novels which would make excellent films, using the most typical aspects of the French provinces and countryside, which, up to date, have never been used to their full advantage by French producers.

Russian and foreign producers, installed in Paris and making French films, have been much attracted by Russian novels. This series which started two years ago with Russian subjects such as "Tarass Boulba," "The Volga Boatmen," "Moscow Nights," "In the Service of the Tzar," "Lower Depths," etc, has been continued this year with many novels by Pouchkine and Tolstoi, which have been adapted for the screen, such as "Sonata to Kreutzer," which became on the screen, "White Nights of St. Petersburg," "The Post Master," which became "Nostalgie," "The Queen of Spades," "Nuits de Feu," "Nina Petrovna's Lie," and others.

However, it is to be noted that lately an effort has been made to depict French life and people by some French producers, with the making of such films as "Ramuntcho," from Pierre Loti's novel, a film with the Basque country as background; "Ces Dames Aux Chapeaux Verts," the background of which is in the ancient French province of Anjou; "Daughters of the Rhone" with action in French Camargue; "Dark Angels," by François Mauriac, with action in the Landes; "Regain" by Jean Giono, with action in French Provence.

Following the great success of "L'Appel du Silence," directed by Léon Poirier, exalting the heroic figure of the French monk of the Sahara, Father de Foucault, the same director has made "Sisters in Arms," showing the heroic lives of two French women in the north of France, invaded by the German armies in 1914.

Some producers have turned out films with action set in exotic countries, such as "Secrets of the Red Sea," by Henry de Monfreid, of which most of the scenes were shot on location at Djibouti and in French Somaliland. There were also: "Men Without Name," "Legions d'Honneur," "L'Escadrille de la Chance" and "Aloha le Chant des Iles," of which exterior scenes were shot in Morocco, "The Silent Battle," with exteriors in Bulgaria and "Naples au Baiser de Feu," made in Naples.

In 1937 French producers treated on a larger scale detective and action novels, such as "The Silent Battle" by Jean Bommart; "Double Crime Sur la Ligne Maginot," by Pierre Nord; "L'Homme a Abattre" by Charles Robert-Dumas; "Les Pirates du Rail" and "Mollenard" by O. P. Gilbert.

The three best French films of 1937 were

SIEBER TO PRODUCE WITH VON STERNBERG

Rudolf Sieber, Marlene Dietrich's husband, and Josef Von Sternberg, her director in most of her better known films, are reported to have formed a new production company in Paris. The first production, to be made in Paris, will be an adaptation of "Germinal," by Emile Zola and the second will be "Summer in Austria," from Zuckmayer's novel, to be made in Vienna with Richard Tauber.

If Miss Dietrich's contract with Paramount is broken it is expected that she will star in these two films.

based on original stories, written by the directors themselves: "La Grande Illusion" by Jean Renoir, "Un Carnet de Bal" by Julien Duvivier, and "Pearls of the Crown," by Sacha Guitry.

Other examples of films based on original stories are: "Gribouille" and "L'Alibi," by Marcel Achard; "Pepe le Moko" by Detective Ashelbé; and "Mademoiselle Docteur," based on the life of the famous German spy.

French producers, looking for something different, found interesting and good material in some famous French criminal cases, such as "L'Affair LaFarge" and "The Lyons' Mail."

Only one big historical film was produced, "La Marseillaise," an ambitious French film, with action in the days of the 1789-1793 revolution. This film was directed by Jean Renoir, who also wrote the screen play, with the help of Mrs. Jean-Paul Dreyfus. It has this particular feature, that it was financed, for the most part, by the workmen and the Trade Unions. Many of its scenes were shot in French historical castles and places, and it is expected to be a great success. Its première will be held shortly. Another film to be noted is the remake as a French talker of Cecil B. de Mille's famous silent film, "The Cheat."

New Production

At the end of 1937 about a dozen French films were in the making. Among them are:

RASPOUTINE, with Harry Baur, Marcelle Chantal, Jany Holt and Jean Worms. Directed by Marcel l'Herbier.

STORM OVER ASIA, with Conrad Veidt, Madeleine Robinson and Sessue Hayakawa, directed by the German, Richard Oswald.

THE JOYLESS STREET, a remake, with Albert Préjean, and Dita Parlo. Directed by André Hugon.

LE QUAI DES BRUMES ("Foggy Quayside"), a film of atmosphere, based on a novel by Pierre Mac Orlan. Directed by Marcel Carné, with Jean Gabin and Michèle Morgan. PRISONNIER DU CIEL, directed by René Sti, with Erich von Stroheim, the first French production for RKO Radio.

Another dozen films are in preparation, the most interesting of which are:

THE LIFE OF JEAN JAURES, to be directed by Pierre Chenal.

THE LAURY CASE, based on Henry Bordeaux's novel "La Chartreuse du Reposoir."

ALARM IN THE MEDITERRANEAN, with Pierre Fresnay.

LES DISPARUS DE ST. AGIG, directed by Christian Jacque.

HUNGARIAN RHAPSODY, a re-make of the silent film, with Dita Parlo and Pierre Blanchard.

THE LIFE OF ST. FRANCIS OF ASSISI, with Pierre Blanchard.

VERA MIREZA, to be directed by Raymond Bernard.

WAR AND PEACE, from Tolstoi's novel.

THE PATRIOT, directed by Maurice Tourneur, from Alfred Neuman's novel.

About 80 new films are announced, among them:

TROIS DE ST. CYR, based on an original story.

A film on the life of officers, at the famous French military school.

WERTHER, from Goethe's novel.

THE LATIN QUARTER, an original story by Maurice Dekobra.

RETURN AT DAWN, from Vicki Baum's story, which will be produced with Danielle Darrieux, on her return from Hollywood.

FROM MIDNIGHT TO DAWN.

ALTITUDE 3,200, the play by Jean Luchaire.

ON THE SOUTHERN TRAIL, by O. P. Gilbert.

SAINT HELENA, an original story by Charles Spaak.

GUYNEMER, HEROS LEGENDAIRE, a film based on the heroic life of the French ace aviator, during the Great War.

THE LIFE OF LA PAIVA.

THREE HOURS TO LIVE.

THE MOTHER, from Maxime Gorki's novel.

PRINCESS KATIA, which will star Danielle Darrieux.

FATHER SERGE, from Tolstoi's novel.

MARIA TARNOSHA.

THE GAMBLER, by Dostoevsky.

Films Produced in Foreign Studios

The number of French speaking films produced this year in foreign studios fell from 25 in 1936, to 13 in 1937. In 1937 six were produced in Germany, four in Belgium, two in Italy and one in England. Five of the films produced in Germany were French films, produced only in French. Among them was an excellent film directed by Jean Gremillion, "Gueule d'Amour," with the stars of "Pepe le Moko," Jean Gabin and Mireille Ballin.

The French director, Jacques Feyder, who had not directed a French film since "La Kermesse Heroique" ("Carnival in Flanders"), has just completed in the Munich studios, the French and German versions of a $500,000 film, "Les Gens du Voyage," a film produced by Tobis and depicting the life of traveling circus.

Four French feature films were produced in Belgium, among them a good drama, with action set in the invaded Belgium of the Great War, "Passeurs d'Hommes." In England, a French speaking version of "Girl in the Taxi" was made. In Italy, two French speaking versions were produced, "Voleurs de Femmes" and "Tarakonowa."

New Talent

An important problem for the French producers in 1937 was the exodus of some of the best French stars and directors to Hollywood. If, in some ways, the French producers were glad to see in those departures, a recognition of the quality of their actors and directors, they anxiously watched the departure of good box-office actors and actresses. But as a matter of fact, the movement has not developed the importance that was feared about six months ago. The most important losses were Danielle Darrieux, Mireille Ballin and Julien Duvivier, and Annabella.

A curious fact is that, up to date, the American films of the French stars in Hollywood, including those of Charles Boyer and Simone Simon, have never been successful in France.

On the other hand, new talent, both players and directors, has been discovered this year. Among the actresses outstanding is Michèle

Morgan, an 18-year old French girl, revealed by the producer André Daven and the director, Marc Allegret in "Gribouille," and who co-starred with Charles Boyer in "Orage." She has already signed a contract for Hollywood.

Others were Jacqueline Laurent, who made her debut in "Sarati le Terrible," and who was immediately signed by Louis B. Mayer, and who is now in Hollywood, Annie Vernay, 16 year old star of "Tarakanowa," Denise Bosc, revealed in "Le Fauteuil 47" and "Maman Colibri," Gilberts Geniat in "The Lyons Mail," Madeleine Robinson, now starring in "Storm Over Asia," Sveltona Piteoff in "Abus de Confiance," Louisa Carletti in "Les Gens du Voyage," Laurence Atkins in "Pearls of the Crown," Nadine Vogel in "Drole de Drame," Denise Pezzani in "Orage," and Blanchette Brunoy in "Claudine a l'Ecole." The progress of actresses such as Lise Delamare, Junie Astor and Josette Day, is also to be mentioned.

Among the male players, young men such as Jean-Louis Barrault, Gilbert Gil, and Bernard Lancret, have affirmed their talent, and now count amongst the best actors in French films. Others revealed in films this year were Fabien Lorys, Dalban Robert, Georges Grey, Lucas Gridoux, Roger Legris and Dallio.

With the exception of two singers, Tino Rossi and Jean Lumiere, the French screen has not taken any more actors from the radio or the gramophone.

Among the young directors who have given proof of their talents are: Marcel Carné, whose first film "Jenny" was a great success, who perhaps missed the mark with his second, "Drole de Drame," and who is at present directing "Le Quai des Brumes," Pierre Chenal, with "Alibi" and "The LaFarge Case," Maurice Cloche, who after making some outstanding documentary pictures such as "St. Michael's Mount," "Terre d'Amour," "Symphonie Graphique," has made his first feature film, "Ces Dames Aux Chapeaux Verts," Jacques Housin, who directed the charming comedy "Rendez Vous Champs Elysees," Léonide Moguy, director of "Prisons sans Barreaux," Michel Bernheim, Marcel Cohen and others.

Moral Quality Improved

One of the most interesting facts to be noted in production during 1937 was a trend to make fewer vulgar and immoral films, which, for a long time, earned a bad reputation for the French Cinema. Indeed, one of the biggest objections made by foreign buyers to French films was that too many of them, even some otherwise excellent films, were spoiled by immoral situations and risqué dialogue, such as "Club des Femmes," "Lucrece Borgia," etc, and many light comedies, in which, not only the moral point of view, but also mere decency, was conspicuously absent.

Due to the influence of the Catholic Committee of the Cinema and of some associations who have joined the fight for a better cinema, producers have come to understand that clean films based on worthy subjects, can be a great commercial success, as they bring to the theatres the family patronage, formerly kept away by immoral films. The great success in France of "L'Appel du Silence" and films of this category have amply proved the truth of this.

It is fortunate that this progress of the French film has not been stopped by the bad business conditions in France, and it is interesting to note that it was while French producers had to overcome many difficulties and troubles, that the best films were produced.

The most serious trouble in view for the producers is the French Cinema Bill, projected by

by PIERRE AUTRE
in Paris

The quality of some of the latest French films, and their low cost of production, estimated at not more than $100,000, has attracted the attention of British producers, who cannot make a film of equal importance and value in their own country, for less than $200,000. A movement to produce British talking films in the French studios has been started by British Unity Pictures, formed in England early in 1937 and which has transferred its company to France where it will produce films in English and French versions.

Also it has been announced that the American actor, John Davis Lodge, who for three years was a star of Associated British Pictures, is coming to Paris, where he will star in English and French versions of a screen adaptation of an English play by Fenn Sherrie and Ingram d'Addes. This film will be directed by E. E. Reinert who directed, in London, "Not Wanted on the Voyage," with Bebe Daniels and Ben Lyon.

the Government and which would mean a great interference of the State in the industry. Last year's results have proved that the organization of the industry must be done by itself, as producers making bad films disappear automatically by a kind of natural selection.

Due to the success of French films in 1937 one may expect an even greater progress in 1938. Bigger receipts from the domestic market, larger profits from the foreign markets, are the inevitable results of the improvement made in 1937. This will facilitate financing, make amortization easier and open the way for still better films.

Natan Loses Suit

Bernard Natan, former chief of the Pathé-Natan Company, which for four years has been in receivership and is now called Pathé-Cinema, who has refused to pay off the plural vote shares he owned in this company, has just been ordered by the Paris court to pay for them. He will thus have to pay 12 million francs ($400,000) to the receivers of Pathé-Cinema. Mr. Natan is reported to have rented, for an undetermined period, the Paramount studios at St. Maurice, near Paris.

Financial Aid Refused GFFA

The French cinema company, Gaumont Film-Aubert (GFFA), which, since 1934 has been in receivership, owes to the liquidation of the Banque Nationale de Crédit, 280 million francs ($9,340,000). GFFA obtained a bankrupt's certificate which will allow it to pay only a third of its debts, spread through a period of 50 years. This was to have started on January 17th, 1938, provided that, that time, the company had accomplished its financial reorganization. If this is not done, the judiciary liquidation (receivership) would be transformed into bankruptcy and the assets of the company distributed between the creditors. The financial reorganization could be made by the contribution of private capital, but this is very doubtful; or by the intervention of the liquidation organ of the Banque Nationale de Crédit, which means the French State, sole creditor of this bank. In a letter to the Finance Committee of the Chamber of Deputies, the French Government asked for the credit of 35,000,000 francs (nearly $3,000,000) to enable GFFA to continue its operations. This was refused by the Finance Commission and it is reported that the Government will present the project to Parliament for a vote.

National Decency Legion Classifies Nine Pictures

Of nine pictures reviewed and classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week five were approved for general patronage, three were listed as unobjectionable for adults and one was cited as objectionable in part. The pictures and their classification follow.

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "Cassidy of Bar 20," "Damin-cella di Bard" (Italian), "Rendezvous in Wien" (German), "Sara Lar Sig Folkvett" (Swedish), "Who Killed Gail Preston?" Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "Dangerous to Know," "A Slight Case of Murder," "The Wife of General Ling." Class B, Objectionable in Part: "Let's Make a Night of It."

Radio Team Breaks Up

Stoopnagle and Budd, after a long partnership in vaudeville and radio, have decided to break up the team, and will work individually. In 1933 the comedians appeared in "International House," for Paramount, and the following year made short subjects for Educational.

"Radium" Leads Poll

In a poll conducted by Allen Saunders, film critic of the Toledo News-Bee, the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer short subject "Romance of Radium" was chosen as "the best short subject of 1937."

SMPE Board Meeting Set

The next meeting of the Board of Governors of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers will be held in Washington April 24th, the day preceding the opening of the society's spring convention.

Bissell to Buffalo

Holbrook C. Bissell has sold his interest in the Cleveland exchange distributing Imperial Pictures to his partner, C. C. Linehan, and has moved to Buffalo where he will distribute independent films in the upper New York state territory.

Goldwyn Signs Baker

Samuel Goldwyn has signed Phil Baker to a long term contract. Baker will be available for one outside picture a year.

ANSWER TO QUESTION NO. 103

F. H. RICHARDSON

Question No. 103 was: (A) Is failure of a battery-powered test lamp to light, or a battery powered bell or magneto bell to ring when testing for ground, positive proof that no ground exists? (B) If one polarity grounds to a lamphouse and the other does not, what is the effect? (C) Why will there be no result when testing from Edison 3-wire neutral to ground? (D) What is surest method of testing an Edison 3-wire in which the neutral is involved?

The following made acceptable replies: S. Evans and C. Rau; H. Edwards; J. H. Prater; G. E. Doe; E. H. Toetde; R. and K. Wells; L. Cimikoski; W. H. Edmonds; C. Oldham; J. A. Zachritz; M. and J. (A) The answer of a new active member of the school has been selected as best suiting the needs of publication. R. Feasel says: "Testing for ground with a battery-powered bell or a test lamp, failure of bell to operate or filament to glow would prove only that no low resistance ground was present. It would not disclose presence of a ground of high resistance that permitted current leakage but not in sufficient amount to ring the bell or bring the filament up to visibility in red. The test lamp itself would offer 220 ohms or more resistance, depending on its type.

"The magneto is a much better instrument for the purpose. If one be connected across

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 108

(A) Explain why ballast resistance is necessary.

(B) What is meant by "negative temperature characteristic" as applied to an electric arc?

(C) Does voltage absorbed by resistance or impedance increase or decrease with increased current flow?

(D) Explain what happens as the arc length increases.

Note: I wonder what would be the reaction of theatre managers to occasional questions to be answered by managers. For example: "What width and type of seat do you consider most efficient? Explain. If enough managers write me in favor I will devote say one school session in every four to them.—F. H. R.

a ground and the bell did not respond, that fact might be accepted as proof positive no ground is present, at least so far as has to do with ordinary commercial voltages. This is due to two facts. First, its bell offers very low resistance as compared with the test lamp filament, and will operate with comparatively much less current than that required to cause a test lamp filament to glow. Second, voltage generated by a magneto is very many times more powerful than that available to a two or three battery bell, or to a test lamp. A good magneto should be included in the equipment of every theatre projection room."

(B) J. K. Robinson says: "That depends. If the lamphouse itself be thoroughly insulated from all electrical contacts save for the one grounded to it, nothing will occur except charging the lamphouse with E.M.F., a condition that subjects the projectionist to possibility of shock. As I see it there would be little if any increase in fire hazard.

"On the other hand, if the lamphouse be not thoroughly insulated from opposite polarity, and at some point, within itself or far away, opposite polarity be grounded, there will be current leakage in exact proportion to resistance offered by the path through which the current must flow to reach opposite polarity. What leakage there may be will of course depend upon length and character of the path between points grounded."

(C) Hundreds replied: "There can be no result of a test from an Edison 3-wire neutral to ground for the reason that such neutrals are themselves permanently grounded."

(D) G. E. Doe says: "Confining myself to the question as asked, there is but one really certain method of testing an individual Edison 3-wire circuit, namely, disconnect the circuit from the system by opening its main switch. Then make the usual test with a magneto. An equally efficient test may be made in the same manner with battery and bell, except that only very low resistance grounds will be disclosed by it because of low battery voltage."

In this connection may I suggest a magneto test in all projection rooms at least twice a week. When I projected in Chicago I owned a good magneto and made tests each day. It took only a very few moments, and since at that time almost all projection rooms were lined, floor, walls and ceiling, with sheet metal, a lively ground in, for example, a lamphouse, would either cause heavy loss in current or, if the lamphouse happened to be insulated, give one a hair-raising jolt. I can smile at one well remembered incident that was no joke at the time. The one-reel "production" was to be followed by an illustrated song. Stopping the projector I reached for the slides with one hand, picked them up, reached around to adjust the arc and touched the lamps' metal rod back of the fibre knob.

Wham! I was standing on a raw metal floor. It just rained glass slides all over the place. That song was not illustrated. However, I can assure you the "pleasure" of the manager was well illustrated by his language. There were sixteen slides, all brand new. Thereafter there were few grounds, for every darned one that developed was promptly discovered and the "hole" plugged up before starting the first show each day.

Such things cannot occur now. There are no iron floors. Nor do projectionists run song slides. But there nevertheless are leaks of current in very many projection rooms, and while the waste may be small and of little consequence if but one day be considered, in a month it may run to a very respectable figure. Not long ago I was consulted by a client over in New Jersey. He complained that his current bills were higher than they should be. I found no less than six small, constant current leaks in his projection room. Just a little in each one, but, except for the lights, the projectionist was in habit of leaving the projection room main switch closed all night, so the loss worked steadily for twenty-four hours. In a month it boosted the current bills, believe you me!

A magneto should be supplied as part of theatre equipment. Its use should be made obligatory at least twice a week, with a written report of the tests delivered to the office.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

AWFUL TRUTH, THE: Irene Dunne, Cary Grant—The perfect comedy! The audience that would fail to enjoy this must necessarily be a hopeless lot. We cannot understand why it was so poorly attended, however. Played January 16-17.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H.—General patronage.

AWFUL TRUTH, THE: Irene Dunne, Cary Grant—This is real entertainment and, what's more, everyone knows it or will know it before the show is over. Just the kind of a picture you need after the so-called specials have failed to click. Personally, I think this performance by Irene Dunne is by far the best performance of any star this season. It's a honey. Tell 'em you got it and play it up as the best thing you have had in your theatre for months. It won't let you down. Running time, 92 minutes. Played February 20-22.—John J. Metzger, Oriental Theatre, Beaver City, Neb. Small town patronage.

CODE OF THE RANGE: Charles Starrett, Mary Blake—Played this with "The Game That Kills." Both pictures well liked. Running time, 60 minutes. Played February 18-19.—John J. Metzger, Oriental Theatre, Beaver City, Neb. Small town patronage.

FIGHT TO THE FINISH, A: Don Terry, Rosalind Keith—What a picture for those who want action. Boys, you can't go wrong on this one. Keep Columbia's reputation high up. Running time, 58 minutes. Played February 13-14. Eugene Venne, Radio Theatre, Longueuil, Que. General patronage.

GAME THAT KILLS, THE: Charles Quigley, Rita Hayworth—Played this with "Code of the Range." Don't believe in long drawn out double features. This is the type of show we give them, approximately a two-hour program. Both pictures well liked. If you haven't played "The Game That Kills" be sure to tell your patrons you have an exciting ice hockey story. Running time, 60 minutes. Played February 18-19.—John J. Metzger, Oriental Theatre, Beaver City, Neb. Small town patronage.

I'LL TAKE ROMANCE: Grace Moore, Melvyn Douglas—I guess this one was O. K., but the young people stayed at home and rested two nights in a row. The old ones fell for it and that is the only reason that I could stay open. Play it on week days and you'll get by. Running time, 89 minutes. Played February 9-10.—B. J. Aylesworth, Lyric and Connellee Theatres, Eastland, Texas. General patronage.

IT HAPPENED IN HOLLYWOOD: Richard Dix, Fay Wray—Played this on a Bargain Night with a Community Sing and 3 Stooges. Pleased in spite of a few reports I had heard. Running time, 67 minutes. Played February 17.—John J. Metzger, Oriental Theatre, Beaver City, Neb. Small town patronage.

LIFE BEGINS WITH LOVE: Jean Parker, Douglas Montgomery—Another comedy hit from Columbia. It is a new angle on this comedy business and is sure to please all who see it. Running time, 68 minutes. Played February 11-12.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

LOST HORIZON: Ronald Colman, Jane Wyatt—Bad weather and public opinion on the picture only reasons for poor box office receipts. Staff and personal opinions, a rare production. Running time, 115 minutes. Played February 3-5.—Eugene Venne, Radio Theatre, Longueuil, Que. General patronage.

ROARING TIMBER: Jack Holt, Grace Bradley—This turned out to be a good action picture, with a nice story. Played to a fair house, considering the cold weather. Running time, 65 minutes. Played January 29-30.—Fischer & Bichler, Matray Theatre, Strasburg, N. D. Small town patronage.

First National

ADVENTUROUS BLONDE, THE: Glenda Farrell, Barton MacLane—Clever comedy drama tale, combining talents of newspaper girl and detective hero. Pleased.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

ALCATRAZ ISLAND: John Litel, Ann Sheridan—In the face of the publicity given Alcatraz at this time we seemed to have dated the subject in at the right time. All week the headlines brought out something about Alcatraz. People were curious to know what it was all about. Did better than average Sunday business and pleased. Very good story and no need to be afraid of it any day of the week. This Ann Sheridan just about as sweet as they make them. Why Warners don't wake up to the possibilities of this girl is beyond me. Give her something in the bigger class and I'll wager her personality will sparkle all over the screen. Running time, 64 minutes. Played February 13-14.—John J. Metzger, Oriental Theatre, Beaver City, Neb. Small town patronage.

ALCATRAZ ISLAND: John Litel, Ann Sheridan—very good picture of its kind, and it did real well at the box office.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

ALCATRAZ ISLAND: John Litel, Ann Sheridan—Too bad they gave little production or directorial attention to this, for even as carelessly produced as it is, it seemed to attract business. But it will fail to come up to your patrons' expectation. At least, so we found it. Played January 15.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

CHINA CLIPPER: Pat O'Brien, Beverly Roberts—A very interesting story that pleased 100 per cent. This picture has everything that pleases a small town audience. Running time, 83 minutes. Played August 13-14.—J. P. Johnson, Sons of Norway Theatre, Ambrose, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

DOWN THE STRETCH: Patricia Ellis—Just a honey for a small town. Thanks. Miss Ellis very popular here. Why don't First National use this star more? Play it.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Sask., Canada. Small town and rural patronage.

EARTHWORM TRACTORS: Joe E. Brown, June Travis—One of Joe Brown's best pictures. It had them all roaring with laughter. Joe is popular with our patrons. Running time, 67 minutes. Played August 27-28.—J. P. Johnson, Sons of Norway Theatre, Ambrose, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

EXPENSIVE HUSBANDS: Beverly Roberts, Patrick Knowles—Dear Mr. Sears: Here is the only argument for the boys who use some monetary attraction to get patrons. This picture is about the world's worst and we could not get by with it even on a double feature. My suggestion is to shelve it. Running time, 62 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

HOLLYWOOD HOTEL: Dick Powell, Frances Langford—Entertaining. Not big enough for extended runs. Will please and did. Running time, 104 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

MEN IN EXILE: June Travis, Richard Purcell—Good entertainment. Running time, 62 minutes. Played February 11-12.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

SUBMARINE D-1: Pat O'Brien, George Brent—Excellent story built around the submarine service. Instructive as well as thrilling, as a great many have never seen a ship. Good cast, but as usual Pat O'Brien talks a little too fast. Running time, 105 minutes. Played February 9-10.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

a snow storm but made it's way in spite of it. Running time, 105 minutes. Played January 30-31.—John J. Metzger, Oriental Theatre, Beaver City, Neb. Small town patronage.

WEST OF SHANGHAI: Boris Karloff, Beverly Roberts—Warner Bros. had something when they started this one but it seems they muffed their chance. This is a good action picture but a very weak plot for Karloff. Running time, 65 minutes. Played February 9-10.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

GB Pictures

SILENT BARRIERS: Richard Arlen—One of the best pictures to date coming from Gaumont British. If you can, by all means play it. Running time, 95 minutes. Played January 20-22.—Jno. S. Erickson, Rex Theatre, Iron Mountain, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

Grand National

HIDEOUT IN THE ALPS: Jane Baxter, Anthony Bushell—A swell show spoiled by smutty sound and dialect. If it wasn't for its excellent photography this picture would be a flop. Running time, 70 minutes. Played February 10-12.—Jno. S. Erickson, Rex Theatre, Iron Mountain, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

SOMETHING TO SING ABOUT: James Cagney, Evelyn Daw—Only fair. No story value. Business fell off bad. Played March 29-31.—W. C. Lewellen, Federal Theatre, Denver, Col. Neighborhood patronage.

SOMETHING TO SING ABOUT: James Cagney, Evelyn Daw—A very good picture. But Cagney is such a different person in this some may quibble over the entertainment offered. Generally well liked. However, only fair draw. Played January 22.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

AFTER THE THIN MAN: William Powell, Myrna Loy—This was one of our ten best pictures shown at this theatre the past twelve months. A great show, and a wonderful performance by two popular stars. Pleased 100 per cent. Received many favorable comments on this picture from our patrons. Running time, 112 minutes. Played January 21-22.—J. P. Johnson, Sons of Norway Theatre, Ambrose, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

BAD MAN OF BRIMSTONE: Wallace Beery—Very favorable comments from the customers. New tint adds a lot to the picture. Photography beautiful. Beery gives a fine characterization. Dennis O'Keefe was well received here.—John A. Milligan, Broadway Theatre, Schuylerville, N. Y. Small town patronage.

BEG, BORROW OR STEAL: Frank Morgan, Florence Rice, John Beal—Good picture that did not do business. Why, I don't know, except perhaps the title did not appeal, but with Frank Morgan in it, it should have done better than the film rental, but it didn't. There is no question but with this so-called recession on, which is approaching a major depression, those of us who bought early are oversold. That we are finding out each week that we run.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

BRIDE WORE RED, THE: Joan Crawford, Franchot Tone, Robert Young—The very best Crawford performance that I have seen to date and what few of our folks saw it really enjoyed it. Marred only by Crawford's pronunciation of the word "contessa," the picture beautifully captures the spirit of the Tyrolean Alps and gives it universal appeal. Running time, 103 minutes. Played February 14-15.—H. Wilson Young, Wahoo Theatre, Dubach, La. Small town and rural patronage.

utes. Played January 30-February 3.—M. W. Matthecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

BROADWAY MELODY OF 1938: Robert Taylor, Eleanor Powell, Buddy Ebsen, Judy Garland—Although this picture is star studded, it proves to be just another musical. It will draw, but not up to standard.—R. L. Hall, Aztec Theatre, Van Alstyne, Tex. Small town patronage.

CONQUEST: Greta Garbo, Charles Boyer—Oh what a headache. Poorest weekend gross for a long, long time. A few of the more serious students of the drama seemed to think it was O K but the regular movie patrons thought it was the bunk. Played January 28.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

DAY AT THE RACES, A: Marx Brothers—A hilarious, mirth rollicking, side splitting comedy by this famous comedy trio that kept them going from beginning to end. A few of our audience came near rolling on the floor with laughter. Pleased 100 per cent. Running time, 111 minutes. Played February 4-5.—J. P. Johnson, Sons of Norway Theatre, Ambrose, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

DOUBLE WEDDING: Myrna Loy, William Powell—Good show that hardly drew film rental. Perhaps heavy rain spoiled the gross. Played February 13-14.—Ike Hables, Reel Joy Theatre, King City, Cal. Small town patronage.

DOUBLE WEDDING: William Powell, Myrna Loy. The customers all liked this and came out with a smile and the box office had a few shekels in the till. Played January 21.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

DOUBLE WEDDING: William Powell, Myrna Loy, Florence Rice—A very satisfactory comedy. It gave us two good houses in spite of snow and zero weather. Running time, 87 minutes. Played January 7-8.—G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming community patronage.

FIREFLY, THE: Jeanette MacDonald, Allan Jones—A little extra business on this one so it must be all right. A little high class for the hill billies. Played February 4.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

GOOD EARTH, THE: Paul Muni, Luise Rainer—Paul Muni and Luise Rainer combine to make this one of the best pictures of the year. Your audience will like this one, but the hard part is getting them in the theatre. Personally, I think this picture should be voted the best of the year.—R. L. Hall, Aztec Theatre, Van Alstyne, Tex. Small town patronage.

LAST GANGSTER, THE: Edward G. Robinson, James Stewart, Rose Stradner—I think Robinson's portrayal of the gangster is wonderfully convincing; so much so that one wonders whether he was not intended to be a gangster and that he became an actor by accident. The picture drew good houses and gave excellent satisfaction to all who saw it. Running time, 81 minutes. Played February 11-12.—G. A. Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming community patronage.

LAST GANGSTER, THE: Edward G. Robinson, Rose Stradner, James Stewart, Lionel Stander—a very good small town picture, as all like Robinson. The story is the same as most of the gangster pictures, especially all the Robinsons. This one will draw well though. Play up Lionel Stander well, as he is good. R. L. Hall, Aztec Theatre, Van Alstyne, Tex. Small town patronage.

LIVE LOVE AND LEARN: Robert Montgomery, Rosalind Russell, Robert Benchley—Just fair; not good enough to eulogize and not bad enough to condemn. Running time, 78 minutes. Played February 4-5.—G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming community patronage.

LIVE, LOVE AND LEARN: Robert Montgomery, Rosalind Russell, Robert Benchley—An excellent picture that did just average at the box office. Played February 11.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

LIVE, LOVE AND LEARN: Robert Montgomery, Rosalind Russell, Robert Benchley—This picture will fail to pay the film rental, notwithstanding the fact that there are some first rate stars listed in the cast. The story is weak and so will be the box office.—R. L. Hall, Aztec Theatre, Van Alstyne, Tex. Small town patronage.

LOVE IS A HEADACHE: Gladys George, Franchot Tone—Just a programer that gets by nicely. The stars help a lot. Running time, 73 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

MADAME X: Gladys George, John Beal, Warren William—An old favorite brought back, and what a wonderful portrayal Gladys George gives. Hope she is given the lead in some more features soon. Warren William is unusually good, while John Beal is tops. This was enjoyed by the ladies more than the men, as they all enjoyed a good cry. Running time, 72 minutes. Played February 11-13.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

MAN-PROOF: Myrna Loy, Franchot Tone—Just an entertaining picture that will not stand extra playing

FOUR SHOWMEN JOIN REPORTERS

Four exhibitors, from Canada and three widely separated areas in the States, enroll this week in the corps of reporters to "What the Picture Did for Me."

Reporting for duty on their first enlistment are:

Eugene Venne, Radio Theatre, Longueuil, Quebec.

R. L. Hall, Aztec Theatre, Van Alstyne, Texas.

Reenlisting after two or more years are these:

Ike Hables, Reel Joy Theatre, King City, Cal., who last reported on Dec. 28, 1935.

John J. Metzger, Oriental Theatre, Beaver City, Neb., whose last previous comment appeared in the issue of Feb. 20, 1936.

Read the reports of these showmen in the columns of the department this week.

time. Running time, 72 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

MY DEAR MISS ALDRICH: Edna May Oliver, Maureen O'Sullivan—Nothing big, but satisfactory comedy fare. Miss Oliver is very good in this and is responsible for most of the picture's merit. Running time, 73 minutes. Played January 21-22.—G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming community patronage.

NAVY BLUE AND GOLD: Robert Young, James Stewart, Tom Brown, Florence Rice, Lionel Barrymore—This is one of the best of the year and will answer the exhibitor's prayers for a box office attraction. With James Stewart, Robert Young and Tom Brown in the leading roles, this picture will please all audiences. Brown is outstanding in this one. Play up the football feud between Army and Navy.—R. L. Hall, Aztec Theatre, Van Alstyne, Tex. Small town patronage.

PARADISE FOR THREE: Robert Young, Frank Morgan—Fair comedy. Snow scenes were beautiful, but not a weekend picture. Played with "Jimmy Fidler's Personality Parade." Running time, 80 minutes. Played February 20-21.—Ouida Stephano, Grove Theatre, Groveton, Texas. Small town patronage.

Monogram

DANGER VALLEY: Jack Randall, Lois Wilde—As a western it was very good. Somehow Randall is not there when it comes to musical westerns. Running time, 50 minutes. Played February 3-6.—John S. Erickson, Rex Theatre, Iron Mountain, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

WEST OF RAINBOW'S END: Tim McCoy—Excellent western. McCoy's first on this Monogram releasing schedule. Action good, photography very good and story carries sustained interest enough to please any western movie fan. Running time, 54 minutes. Played February 11.—Harry M. Palmer, Temple Court Theatre, Washington, Ind. General patronage.

WHERE TRAILS DIVIDE: Tom Keene—Keene, since he has started in out and out western roles, bids fair to prove popular with boys and girls, both young and old, who like their westerns. Give Keene credit for one thing: he doesn't burst into song every reel or no. Monogram seems to be doing right by Keene. They are giving him good production. Running time, 59 minutes. Played February 4.—Harry M. Palmer, Temple Court Theatre, Washington, Ind. General patronage.

Paramount

ANGEL: Marlene Dietrich, Herbert Marshall, Melvyn Douglas—Excellent, but too well polished to suit the average patron. The box office was an awful lone-some spot on this. Played January 20-21.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

ANGEL: Marlene Dietrich, Herbert Marshall, Melvyn Douglas—Get ready for a surprise when you play this one, for it won't satisfy the majority of the crowd (if you have a crowd). For small towns, Dietrich will not do. If it hadn't been for Melvyn Douglas, the acting would have to go in the ash can. Half the people walked out before it was over.—R. L. Hall, Aztec Theatre, Van Alstyne, Tex. Small town patronage.

BARRIER, THE: Leo Carrillo, James Ellison, Jean Parker—Very slow. Unexciting. But will get you big money if you sell the Rex Beach story value and the wilds of "White Fang" country. Did far above average here on this angle. Previous run sold differently and flopped. Played February 5-8.—W. C. Lewellen, Federal Theatre, Denver, Col. Neighborhood patronage.

BARRIER, THE: Leo Carrillo, Jean Parker, James Ellison—Story a good one, but the studio muffed it in part. Action too slow. Cast poor. If they had had a good strong lead it would have been different. Scenery does not make a picture. Running time, 93 minutes. Played February 11-12.—M. W. Matthecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

BLONDE TROUBLE: Johnny Downs, Eleanor Whitney—Doubled this with "Hopalong Rides Again" and pleased our Saturday night fans.—John J. Metzger, Oriental Theatre, Beaver City, Neb. Small town patronage.

BLOSSOMS ON BROADWAY: Edward Arnold, Shirley Ross—This picture will do plenty to you and nothing for you. It starts slow and gets slower, finally failing to jell completely. A good show to pass up. Played February 12.—Ike Hables, Reel Joy Theatre, King City, Cal. Small town patronage.

BULLDOG DRUMMOND COMES BACK: John Barrymore, Louise Campbell—Bury it before the Board of Health gets you. Impossible. Really kept people away after opening. Sorry we couldn't pull it. Played February 2-4.—W. C. Lewellen, Federal Theatre, Denver, Col. Neighborhood patronage.

DAUGHTER OF SHANGHAI: Anna May Wong, Charles Bickford, Larry Crabbe—This is a good picture for Dime Night or other half of double feature. I played it on bargain night and the crowd liked it. Plenty of action. Running time, 62 minutes.—R. L. Hall, Aztec Theatre, Van Alstyne, Tex. Small town patronage.

EBB TIDE: Oscar Homolka, Ray Milland, Frances Farmer—It's not big, but it will get big money if you sell the Robt. Louis Stevenson story angle with a "Mutiny on the Bounty" build up. Try it—and reap. Running time, 96 minutes. Played February 12-15.—W. C. Lewellen, Federal Theatre, Denver, Col. Neighborhood patronage.

EVERY DAY'S A HOLIDAY: Mae West, Edmund Lowe—Mae West is washed up for us unless she is given some pictures. This one had a little interest aroused, but very little. Picture got by. Running time, 56 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

EVERY DAY'S A HOLIDAY: Mae West, Edmund Lowe, Charles Butterworth, Herman Bing—Mae can still strut her stuff. There is no smut in this picture and it is okay, but from the business done on it, Mae is through drawing as she did.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

EVERY DAY'S A HOLIDAY: Mae West, Edmund Lowe, Charles Butterworth, Herman Bing—The first Mae West picture I ever played. It gave splendid satisfaction to patrons and business was excellent. I have seen every picture this star has made and consider this her best effort. Absolutely clean and not a suggestive line in it. Running time, 86 minutes. Played February 20-22.—William Powell, Lonet Theatre, Wellington, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

HOLD 'EM, NAVY: Lew Ayres, Mary Carlisle—Good little filler. Not much football in it, but makes 'em think there is and you're safe. We sold this angle and got average to fair increase in biz. Played March 29-31.—W. C. Lewellen, Federal Theatre, Denver, Col. Neighborhood patronage.

HOPALONG RIDES AGAIN: William Boyd, George Hayes—This, the first of the new series of Hopalong, shows a decided improvement, both in musical score and background. Doubled this with "Blonde Trouble," another Paramount which pleased our Saturday night fans. Running time, 58 minutes. Played February 4.—John J. Metzger, Oriental Theatre, Beaver City, Neb. Small town patronage.

MEET THE MAESTROS: Headliners—Paramount has made the greatest improvement in their shorts which we have found this season. This one is wonderful and enjoyed by all. Good any day of the week. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

ON SUCH A NIGHT: Karen Morley, Grant Richards—Play it with a big picture if you double bill. Otherwise you'll be better off not playing it. Little excitement. No thrills. A "run-of-the-mill" attraction. Played March 26-28.—W. C. Lewellen, Federal Theatre, Denver, Col. Neighborhood patronage.

SWING HIGH, SWING LOW: Carole Lombard, Fred MacMurray, Dorothy Lamour, Charles Butterworth, Jean Dixon—This feature was right down the alley for our type of audience and in fact should be suitable for any class of movie fan. There is some good acting and trumpet playing by Fred MacMurray. Carole Lombard is a great favorite of ours and comes through in great style. In addition there is Jean Dixon and Charles Butterworth to supply the needed comedy. The songs are tuneful, the plot interesting, the action dramatic and it's grand entertainment from start to finish. You can't go wrong with this Paramount feature. Running time, 92 minutes. Played February 19.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, Prison Theatre, State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

THIS WAY, PLEASE: Charles "Buddy" Rogers, Betty Grable, Ned Sparks, Rufe Davis—This is an ideal small town picture where people are great radio fans. Play up the stars, as all of them are well known on the air. Rufe Davis (remember "Mountain Music"?) is especially good. Running time, 73 minutes.—R. L. Hall, Aztec Theatre, Van Alstyne, Tex. Small town patronage.

THRILL OF A LIFETIME: Ben Blue, Judy Canova, Eleanor Whitney, Johnny Downs, Lief Erickson, Larry Crabbe—Here is the first musical that Paramount has slipped on this season. It is just a hodge podge thrown together and is lacking badly in continuity and hit numbers. Feel that Erickson and Crabbe trying to sing are pitiful. Blue and Canova are the whole show. Tried it Sunday, Monday, Tuesday and it is going to fail us badly. Would suggest it for midweek or the better half of a dual bill. Running time, 70 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

THUNDER TRAIL: Marsha Hunt, Gilbert Roland—Made from Zane Grey's "Arizona Ames." As well made as any out-of-door we have played. Pleased.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

TRUE CONFESSION: Carole Lombard, Fred MacMurray, John Barrymore—This lively comedy drama drew and pleased our Sunday-Monday patrons. John Barrymore and Lynne Overman contributed some nice support in comedy bits.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

TRUE CONFESSION: Carole Lombard, Fred MacMurray—A good comedy-drama. Some of the comedy was rather silly, but, on the whole, the picture gave satisfaction. Business was just fair. Running time, 82 minutes. Played February 6-8.—William Powell, Lonet Theatre, Wellington, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

WELLS FARGO: Joel McCrea, Bob Burns, Frances Dee—The finest picture to play this theatre in a year's time. Business was tremendous and everybody satisfied. Paramount can be as proud of this super-special as they were of "The Covered Wagon." Never was a picture better directed. I sat through this feature three times myself. Running time, 115 minutes. Played February 13-15.—William Powell, Lonet Theatre, Wellington, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

WELLS FARGO: Frances Dee, Bob Burns, Joel McCrea—A natural if there ever was one. Last night the weather was very bad and the crowd small, but still it is a knockout. Paramount is outstanding in their product for such situations as ours. Burns is tops and Miss Dee again shows her ability as an actress. We consider Frank Lloyd the best money making director in Hollywood for the small town exhibitor. We played this picture Thursday, Friday and Saturday, but it can be shown any day in the week and should be box office. Just a swell show. Running time, 115 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Republic

ESCAPE BY NIGHT: William Hall, Anne Nagel—A fairly good gangster story, but the sound was plenty poor. Business fair. Running time, 67 minutes. Played February 19.—Fischer and Bichler, Matray Theatre, Strasburg, N. D. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

ANNAPOLIS SALUTE: James Ellison, Marsha Hunt, Harry Carey—Good title. Good exploitation possibilities. And that's the works. Nothing to the picture. Running time, 65 minutes. Played February 12-15.—W. C. Lewellen, Federal Theatre, Denver, Col. Neighborhood patronage.

BREAKFAST FOR TWO: Barbara Stanwyck, Herbert Marshall—Don't overlook a single angle of this picture. Screen it and form your own opinion. It did great here. Several hilarious comedy sequences and lots of laughs in between. Played February 5-8.—W. C. Lewellen, Federal Theatre, Denver, Col. Neighborhood patronage.

DAMSEL IN DISTRESS, A: Fred Astaire, Burns & Allen—Running time too long for the story. Astaire below former standard. Show saved by Burns & Allen. Dancing secondary. Story poor. Running time, 99 minutes. Played February 13-15.—M. W. Mattechek, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

DAMSEL IN DISTRESS, A: Fred Astaire, George

Burns and Gracie Allen—While this picture did not do "Follow the Fleet" or "Top Hat" grosses, we had no walkouts, no complaints. Picture contains an abundance of laughs, and contrary to previous reports our patrons did not feel that Gracie and George were overdone. Fred's Drum Dance is in a class by itself. Of course, Ginger Rogers was missed in this production, but our patrons had the pleasure of seeing her the night before in "Stage Door." Running time, 101 minutes. Played February 9.—John J. Metzger, Oriental Theatre, Beaver City, Neb. Small town patronage.

DAMSEL IN DISTRESS, A: Fred Astaire, Burns and Allen—A fairly good musical comedy that starved to death at the box office. Grossed about half the usual "take" on the team of Astaire and Rogers. In spite of the valiant efforts of Burns and Allen, the picture was dull in spots and many patrons were frank to say they did not care for it. RKO should either give us the team of Astaire and Rogers, or reduce the allocation. Running time, 98 minutes. Played January 30-February 1.—William Powell, Lonet Theatre, Wellington, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

DANGER PATROL: Sally Eilers, John Beal, Harry Carey—This picture had no drawing power, but it gave very good satisfaction. Several patrons remarked on its entertaining qualities. An excellent feature for a double bill on weekends. Running time, 60 minutes. Played February 10-12.—William Powell, Lonet Theatre, Wellington, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

FIT FOR A KING: Joe E. Brown, Helen Mack, Paul Kelly—A "screw" hokum comedy which the kids will go for in a big way, as well as a lot of grown-ups. The show was "everything," from a storm at sea to a somewhat modified "Ben Hur" chariot race. Running time, 73 minutes. Played January 28-29.—G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming community patronage.

HIGH FLYERS: Wheeler and Woolsey—Comedy that pleases. Dual program only.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

PARK AVENUE LOGGER: George O'Brien—This picture has everything to please any class of audience. By all means play it. Running time, 65 minutes. Played February 10-12.—Eugene Venne, Radio Theatre, Longueuil, Que. General patronage.

SHE'S GOT EVERYTHING: Ann Sothorn, Gene Raymond—Our patrons thought this a pretty good comedy.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

STAGE DOOR: Ginger Rogers, Katharine Hepburn, Adolphe Menjou, Ann Miller—One of the "Ten Best" and rightfully holds its place in the list of really good pictures. Played this on a Monday-Tuesday following a good Sunday business and preceding "A Damsel in Distress," which cut down attendance somewhat. Katharine Hepburn once more establishes herself with the smaller situations. Heretofore, her work was too heavy for rural patronage. Ginger Rogers does a swell job and watch this Ann Miller. "Stage Door" should please every type of patronage. It's a pleasure to show a picture of this class. Running time, 92 minutes. Played February 7-8.—John J. Metzger, Oriental Theatre, Beaver City, Neb. Small town patronage.

STAGE DOOR: Katharine Hepburn, Ginger Rogers, Andrea Leeds—At long last RKO has come through with a picture that is swell entertainment. The girls run in some very funny wise cracks. The only picture that Hepburn has really hit and there is no question but what she has something, given the right material and a cast that supported her as this one did. Miss Leeds is very good.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

SUPER SLEUTH: Jack Oakie, Ann Sothorn—This is a good comedy program that was enjoyed by our prevue crowd. Oakie's characterization won the sympathy of the audience by entirely too narrow a margin and this is a problem that his directors will need to give their careful attention.—Running time, 70 minutes. Played February 12-13.—H. Wilson Young, Wahoo Theatre, Dubach, La. Small town and rural patronage.

THERE GOES THE GROOM: Mary Boland, Burgess Meredith, Ann Sothorn—A fair little comedy with Mary Boland the whole show. A picture like this is the exhibitor's answer to the producer why we must run double features. This is a clever little comedy, but in our situation it could not have been run alone. Running time, 57 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

WINDJAMMER: George O'Brien, Constance Worth—Just fair. Got by only showing it one day. O'Brien has slowed up in this town as far as a good draw is concerned. Running time, 59 minutes. Played February 8.—B. J. Aylesworth, Lyric and Connellee Theatres, Eastland, Tex. General patronage.

Supreme Pictures

LAW RIDES, THE: Bob Steele—After three years' experience, I can say that I have never yet heard a single kick on any Steele western, and I feel that year in and year out he has been the most consistently satisfactory western star in the business. And he is still going strong. Running time, 60 minutes. Played February 5.—H. Wilson Young, Wahoo Theatre, Dubach, La. Small town and rural patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

BANJO ON MY KNEE: Barbara Stanwyck, Joel McCrea—A swell comedy and program picture. First class entertainment for the whole family and a picture that will please any small town audience 100 per cent. Good for any day in the week. Running time, 95 minutes. Played November 26-27.—J. P. Johnson, Sons of Norway Theatre, Ambrose, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

CHECKERS: Jane Withers, Stuart Erwin—This one was her best to date. Don't be afraid of it. Played it on a Friday and Saturday and really went to town. Broke all records for an "A" house for kid attendance. Had a Buck Jones running in my "B" house and it didn't have a chance. The older folks said that it was one of the most refreshing pictures that they had ever seen. Play it. Running time, 72 minutes. Played February 11-12.—B. J. Aylesworth, Lyric and Connelle Theatres, Eastland, Tex. General patronage.

COUNTRY BEYOND, THE: Rochelle Hudson, Paul Kelly—A good program picture for any small town theatre. An interesting northwoods story well filmed and a wonderful performance by two popular stars that are ace high with our audiences. Running time, 68 minutes. Played August 20-21.—J. P. Johnson, Sons of Norway Theatre, Ambrose, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

COUNTRY DOCTOR, THE: Dionne Quintuplets, Jean Hersholt, June Lang—Showed this picture a little late, but nevertheless it did the business for us. The Quins, Jean Hersholt and June Lang are off to a good start with our patrons. Let us have more of the same type. Played September 3-4.—J. P. Johnson, Sons of Norway Theatre, Ambrose, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

HEIDI: Shirley Temple, Jean Hersholt—Some said this was Shirley's best picture, but I do not think it is. Struck two very stormy nights, but even that did not account for the extremely low gross. Shirley has always been very popular here, but "Wee Willie Winkie" took such a nosedive I am afraid her pictures will never go over very well again. My patrons prefer something more modern. The cast is very good and photography is excellent, but it just didn't bring them in. There were more adults than children and that is unusual with a Shirley Temple picture. Running time, 88 minutes. Played February 16-17.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

LITTLE MISS NOBODY: Jane Withers, Ralph Morgan—Jane Withers is very popular with our patrons and this picture is one of her best. Running time, 72 minutes. Played October 29-30.—J. P. Johnson, Sons of Norway Theatre, Ambrose, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

LOVE AND HISSES: Walter Winchell, Ben Bernie, Simone Simon—This picture was a very big disappointment to me and everyone else. We did not draw well on it and am glad we didn't because people would think that all the good pictures had been used up. Play it on week days and you will get by with it. Running time, 84 minutes. Played February 13-14.—B. J. Aylesworth, Lyric and Connelle Theatres, Eastland, Texas. General patronage.

ONE IN A MILLION: Sonja Henie, Adolphe Menjou—A new star that sure broke the ice as far as our audience was concerned and held them spellbound from start to finish with her winning personality, sunny smile and wonderful performance on her flying skates. Credit must also be given to the balance of the cast which was exceptionally good. This picture had box office appeal and pleased 100 per cent. Running time, 94 minutes. Played November 5-6.—J. P. Johnson, Sons of Norway Theatre, Ambrose, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

PEPPER: Jane Withers, Irvin S. Cobb—Another Jane Withers picture that drew well and pleased our audience 100 per cent. Little Jane is very popular with our patrons. Running time, 64 minutes. Played December 10-11.—J. P. Johnson, Sons of Norway Theatre, Ambrose, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

POOR LITTLE RICH GIRL: Shirley Temple—It was rather late when we got to play this picture, but that did not seem to make any difference. Shirley sure drew them in and pleased 100 per cent with her usual wonderful performance. Played November 12-13.—J. P. Johnson, Sons of Norway Theatre, Ambrose, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

PRIVATE NUMBER: Loretta Young, Robert Taylor—A good program picture that pleased our audience 100 per cent. Running time, 79 minutes. Played October 22-23.—J. P. Johnson, Sons of Norway Theatre, Ambrose, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

REUNION: Dionne Quintuplets, Jean Hersholt, Rochelle Hudson—This was our second picture of the Dionne Quintuplets and Jean Hersholt, and it went over just as good as our first one, "The Country Doctor." We did not get to show it until quite late, but it drew them in just the same. A beautiful story, entertaining, and a swell performance by all of the cast. Pleased 100 per cent. Waiting for the next one. Running time, 81 minutes. Played December 24-25.—J. P. Johnson, Sons of Norway Theatre, Ambrose, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

SECOND HONEYMOON: Loretta Young, Tyrone Power, Lyle Talbot—Just a light, frothy tale of a divorced couple meeting again and starting a new romance, ending in the divorce of husband No. 2, Lyle Talbot. Drew a little extra and seemed to please.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

TARZAN'S REVENGE: Glen Morris, Eleanor Holm

—No stars. With the proper stars in the leading parts this would have been a good picture. Played it on a double bill with "Danger Patrol." The Tarzan picture drew them in and "Danger Patrol" gave them their money's worth. Running time, 70 minutes. Played February 10-12.—William Powell, Lonet Theatre, Wellington, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

THIN ICE: Sonja Henie—Nice picture, well directed. More than average business. Fox is always Fox for good pictures. Running time, 78 minutes. Played February 6-7.—Eugene Venne, Radio Theatre, Longueuil, Que. General patronage.

YOU CAN'T HAVE EVERYTHING: Alice Faye, Don Ameche—Played that picture for a midnight show, then again on a two-day run. Swell picture, enjoyed by everyone. You don't have to hide in operator booth after showing such a picture. (Lady in late fifties asked re-showing of scene Alice Faye-Don Ameche showing how to act to leading actor and singing "Afraid to Dream.") Running time, 98 minutes.—Eugene Venne, Radio Theatre, Longueuil, Que. General patronage.

United Artists

COME AND GET IT: Edward Arnold, Frances Farmer, Joel McCrea—This proved to be a popular program picture and pleased our audience 100 per cent. An entertaining story, well filmed, and a performance that was tops with three stars that are very popular with our patrons. Running time, 99 minutes. Played November 19-20.—J. P. Johnson, Sons of Norway Theatre, Ambrose, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

DEAD END: Sylvia Sidney, Joel McCrea—Very good show that failed to click at the box office. Played February 6-7.—Ike Hables, Reel Joy Theatre, King City, Cal. Small town patronage.

DODSWORTH: Walter Huston, Ruth Chatterton, Paul Lukas, Mary Astor—A swell picture based on a good story, that pleased 100 per cent. This picture had everything to bring them in for an evening's first-class entertainment. Received many favorable and pleasant comments on this one. Running time, 101 minutes. Played December 31-January 1.—J. P. Johnson, Sons of Norway Theatre, Ambrose, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

ELEPHANT BOY: Sabu, W. E. Holloway, Walter Hudd—A first-class picture that brought them in. Had them both laughing and crying. Pleased 100 per cent. This was our first picture from this star, and from reports received from our patrons it appears that we will have to book another one soon to keep peace in the family. Running time, 81 minutes. Played January 7-8.—J. P. Johnson, Sons of Norway Theatre, Ambrose, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

GARDEN OF ALLAH, THE: Marlene Dietrich, Charles Boyer—A great picture for those that like swell scenery and large scale productions, in color. However, our box office did not suffer any and it drew well. Running time, 78 minutes. Played December 3-4.—J. P. Johnson, Sons of Norway Theatre, Ambrose, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

HISTORY IS MADE AT NIGHT: Charles Boyer, Jean Arthur—A good picture that drew well and pleased 100 per cent. A nice story that was interesting from start to finish, well acted by Charles Boyer and Jean Arthur. Running time, 97 minutes. Played January 28-29.—J. P. Johnson, Sons of Norway Theatre, Ambrose, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

NOTHING SACRED: Fredric March, Carole Lombard—Just an ordinary picture. Color entertains. Won't stand extra playing time and don't pay any more than the ordinary picture price. We got trimmed plenty. Running time, 71 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

NOTHING SACRED: Carole Lombard, Fredric March, Charles Winniger—A swell comedy that will make them all laugh and be glad they saw it. I played it on a night when under ordinary weather conditions I would have had a full house, but rain ruined it. Running time, 75 minutes.—R. L. Hall, Aztec Theatre, Van Alstyne, Tex. Small town patronage.

ONE RAINY AFTERNOON: Francis Lederer, Ida Lupino, Roland Young—A dandy program picture that seemed to draw and please our patrons. Consider this first-class entertainment for the whole family. Running time, 79 minutes. Played December 17-18.—J. P. Johnson, Sons of Norway Theatre, Ambrose, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

PRISONER OF ZENDA, THE: Ronald Colman, Madeleine Carroll, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.—Magnificent, but withal a flop! We seemingly can never surmount the obstacle of a costume picture, not even when it hits such strides as does this one. Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., was outstanding. Played January 13-14.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

STELLA DALLAS: Barbara Stanwyck, John Boles, Anne Shirley—When folks brave a blizzard, the worst of the winter and the temperature dropping steadily, to come out to see a picture you have a pretty good idea it is good. Some said that it was too realistic, but was one of the best pictures we have shown. Boles and Stanwyck do a wonderful job of acting and are supported by able cast. Running time, 111 minutes. Played February 13-15.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash.

STELLA DALLAS: Barbara Stanwyck, John Boles, Anne Shirley—This is one of the best dramas of all the year. I ran it on Saturday night prevue and Sunday and then four months later brought it back for one night only. Did more on it the second time than the first. Stanwyck excellent in her part, also Anne Shirley. Play up to the ladies on this one as a tear jerker. Running time, 104 minutes.—R. L. Hall, Aztec Theatre, Van Alstyne, Tex. Small town patronage.

YOU ONLY LIVE ONCE: Sylvia Sidney, Henry Fonda—A good program picture that pleased our audience 100 per cent. Good for any day in the week. Running time, 86 minutes. Played January 14-15.—J. P. Johnson, Sons of Norway Theatre, Ambrose, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

Universal

BEHIND THE MIKE: William Gargan, Judith Barrett—Too awful for words! Children would hardly conceive such fragile material as this. Can it! Played January 18.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

BEHIND THE MIKE: William Gargan, Judith Barrett—Poor. Played February 9-11.—W. C. Lewellen, Federal Theatre, Denver, Col. Neighborhood patronage.

CARNIVAL QUEEN: Dorothea Kent, Robert Wilcox—Minor attraction that hasn't much to offer anyone. Played January 15.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

IMITATION OF LIFE (reissue): Claudette Colbert, Warren William—Still good for added good gross after all these years. Running time, 108 minutes. Played February 16-18.—W. C. Lewellen, Federal Theatre, Denver, Col. Neighborhood patronage.

MAN WHO CRIED WOLF, THE: Lewis Stone, Tom Brown—Not a bad little murder-mystery. Has a swell new slant on how to kill 'em and not get caught, only it don't work. Will get by because it's different. Running time, 66 minutes. Played February 16-18.—W. C. Lewellen, Federal Theatre, Denver, Col. Neighborhood patronage.

100 MEN AND A GIRL: Deanna Durbin—Wish I had a picture like that every month, to cure box office anemia. Swell singing and good music. An every day of the year picture that will draw everyone. Running time, 85 minutes. Played February 10-12.—Eugene Venne, Radio Theatre, Longueuil, Que. General patronage.

REPORTED MISSING: William Gargan, Jean Rogers—A good aviation thriller that can be used in any double bill. Running time, 63 minutes. Played February 8-9.—Eugene Venne, Radio Theatre, Longueuil, Que. General patronage.

SUDDEN BILL DORN: Buck Jones, Evelyn Brent—Pretty good. Not near as good as some of his previous ones. Slow and draggy in spots. Running time, 60 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

THAT'S MY STORY: William Lundigan, Claudia Morgan—If you have had a bad day this will be the perfect climax. Wonder why they wasted the time to make it? Played February 9-11.—W. C. Lewellen, Federal Theatre, Denver, Col. Neighborhood patronage.

YOU'RE A SWEETHEART: Alice Faye, George Murphy—First of all, this picture fell down at box office. Actually did twice the business of "Wells Fargo" a week before. However, the picture itself is a honey and one wonders what it takes to do extra business these days. Alice Faye and George Murphy are a fine pair to draw to, and then there is Frances Hunt, who from now on will be marked as the Girl with the Million Dollar Legs, and there are many, many others to mention along with the fine Will Rogers memorial.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

Warner Brothers

EXPENSIVE HUSBANDS: Beverly Roberts, Patric Knowles—If you pay more than two dollars for this one it is too expensive. I advertised that all ladies who bought a 25-cent ticket could bring their husbands for 10 cents, but at that I felt like a bandit when I took their money. Poor story, poor stars and a foreign brogue is too great a handicap for one picture. Running time, 62 minutes. Played February 19-20.—Gladys E. McArdle, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

GREAT GARRICK, THE: Brian Aherne, Olivia de Havilland—Some 1750 atmosphere and costumes detracting from the wonderful acting of the principals. Some of the cast using English and French accent, in keeping with the costumes and speech, also hurt. No box office draw and our patrons gave me those "suffering but resigned" looks.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

ONE WAY PASSAGE: William Powell, Kay Francis—Good program picture that did pretty good at the box office. Running time, 64 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

SWING YOUR LADY: Humphrey Bogart, Nat Pendleton, Louise Fazenda, Penny Singleton, Weaver Brothers and Elvira—I want to go on record that this is the screwiest show on record. A female blacksmith and Nat Pendleton emoting, ain't that something? But here is the catch, it is different. Has the Weavers with good music, and this Singleton girl is plenty good. She has that something; dancer and singer. Elvira and the Weavers extra good; the whole show, in fact. The audience ate it up, but it is strictly a new departure in comedy.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia Ia., Ind. General patronage.

VARSITY SHOW: Dick Powell—Entirely too long. Some very good numbers, but Powell, with his air program, is poison to local fans. He is on the down grade, and his radio performances are doing him no good, and this applies to a lot of the stars. They think they are smart, but they are working themselves out of the studios. Running time, 121 minutes. Played February 7-9.—M. W. Mattheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

CITY OF THE GOLDEN GATE: World in Color—Interesting.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

COMMUNITY SING, NO. 1: Our first one; very good. Hoping all of them the same. Audience's singing very poor. Running time, 10 minutes.—Eugene Venne, Radio Theatre, Longueuil, Que. General patronage.

COMMUNITY SING, NO. 1: A good subject.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Educational

MISS LONELY HEARTS: Song and Comedy Hits—Two lovely dance numbers in this will make up for any deficiencies. Running time, 10 minutes.—H. Wilson Young, Wahoo Theatre, Dubach, La. Small town and rural patronage.

MGM

BEHIND THE CATHEDRAL: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—First class entertainment.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

FRIEND INDEED: Pete Smith Specialties—These Pete Smiths always are good and should be run whenever they can be gotten. Running time, 10 minutes.—B. J. Aylesworth, Lyric and Connellee Theatres, Eastland, Texas. General patronage.

HOW TO START THE DAY: Robert Benchley—Very amusing.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

JIMMY FIDLER'S PERSONALITY PARADE: Special—Brought a few old-timers in. Advertise it. Of movie stars long ago, and the fading of Will Rogers and Jean Harlow brought a few tears. Business pretty good in the cold and rain.—Ouida Stephano, Grove Theatre, Groveton, Texas. Small town patronage.

SUNDAY NIGHT AT TROCADERO: Musical Comedies—I was disappointed in this one as I was under the impression it was in color. Rather good musical, but would have been better in color. Running time, 20 minutes.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

Paramount

LET'S GO LATIN: Xavier Cugat and Orchestra—These boys play that long-hair music but it is good.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

PEEPING PENGUINS: Color Classics—A good cartoon and the color was keen. My patrons like these because the makeup is different.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

PICKING PETS: Grantland Rice Sportlights—The best animal reel we ever played. A No. 1 short for any day of the week. Don't fail to play this one.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. Small town patronage.

PICKING PETS: Grantland Rice Sportlights—A good short subject and worth a spot on your best program.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

POPEYE CARTOONS: The kids enjoy this series. Running time, seven minutes.—George W. Pettengill, Jr., Cameo Theatre, Mattawamkeag, Maine. Rural patronage.

QUEENS OF HARMONY: Phil Spitalny and His All Girl Orchestra—It is a plenty good musical short and just right for any program, even a musical.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

SPINACH ROADSTER, THE: Popeye the Sailor—These Popeye cartoons seem to be getting on a par with the rest. There was a time when they were really standouts but they aren't worth what Paramount charges.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

STAR REPORTER, THE: Headliners—Interesting.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

WHISPERS IN THE DARK: Screen Songs—Fair enough.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kansas. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

LONESOME GHOSTS: Mickey Mouse—A good one. Never go wrong on these.—B. J. Aylesworth, Lyric and Connellee Theatres, Eastland, Texas. General patronage.

LONESOME GHOSTS: Mickey Mouse—Kept the audiences in roars all during this Walt Disney. Fine color and recording. Running time, eight minutes.—Eugene Venne, Radio Theatre, Longueuil, Que. General patronage.

MAJOR BOWES: These are getting to be an old story. One out of three or four are OK. The rest are not so hot. We consider them just a filler. Poor prints from the Boston exchange. Running time, nine minutes.—George W. Pettengill, Jr., Cameo Theatre, Mattawamkeag, Maine. Rural patronage.

TRAMP TROUBLE: Edgar Kennedy Comedies—Fair. Kennedy just don't go over with our patrons. Running time, 19 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

United Artists

DISNEY CARTOONS: In this town of 9,000 we have played these cartoons back the fifth time. Such popularity must be deserved (Apologies to Chesterfield). Do you know of any cartoon series that can take that many repeat runs in an average sized town?—Harry M. Palmer, Temple Court Theatre, Washington, Ind. General patronage.

Universal

AIR EXPRESS: Meany-Miny-Moe Cartoons—Good.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

HAWAIIAN CAPERS: Mentone Musical Comedies—Don't fail to play. Wonderful little musical. Running time, 18 minutes.—Eugene Venne, Radio Theatre, Longueuil, Que. General patronage.

KEEPER OF THE LIONS: Oswald Cartoons—Good. L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

RHAPSODY IN ZOO: Mentone Musical Comedies—A fair presentation of vaudeville acts.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Vitaphone

ALIBI MARK: Floyd Gibbons' "Your True Adventure"—The most consistent good series of shorts which any company has made in a long time. It is really astounding that a new series such as these should take such a hold on the public in such a short time. We give them extra billing. Running time, 11 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

DAY AT SANTA ANITA, A: Broadway Brevities—Good. The coloring very beautiful. Running time, 19 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

JUNGLE JITTERS: Merrie Melodies—No better to be had than this one. Enjoyed by large and small. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

LITTLE RED WALKING HOOD: Merrie Melodies—Very good cartoon in color.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

MY LITTLE BUCKAROO: Merrie Melodies—As entertaining a cartoon that an audience could expect. Merrie Melodies have made such rapid strides that they're as entertaining as Disneys. If they had characters like Disneys they would mean as much at the box office. Running time, eight minutes.—Peter Panagos, Sipe Theatre, Kokomo, Ind. General patronage.

PLAYING WITH DANGER: Floyd Gibbons' "Your True Adventure"—Play this series by all means. They sure go over and are very interesting. Running time, 16 minutes.—B. J. Aylesworth, Lyric and Connellee Theatres, Eastland, Texas. General patronage.

PURE FEUD: Edgar Bergen, "Charlie McCarthy"—These are sure knockouts, both for the kids as well as the adults. Running time, 10 minutes.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

SHE WAS AN ACROBAT'S DAUGHTER: Merrie Melodies—Fair. Running time, 9 minutes.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

SOUND DEFECTS: Rufe Davis—Very good. This sure helped to put over "Wine, Women and Horses." Running time, 19 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. Small town patronage.

STARLETS: Broadway Brevities—Extra good. The kids know their stuff.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kansas. Small town patronage.

SWING FOR SALE: Hal LeRoy—Hal's dancing pulls this one into the spotlight. Running time, 19 minutes.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

Michel's Testimony Ordered in Action

William C. Michel, executive vice-president of Twentieth Century-Fox, has been ordered to appear Friday for an examination before trial in connection with the $50,000 "piracy" suit brought by Grosby George, author, against Twentieth Century-Fox by Justice Bernard L. Shientag in New York supreme court. Mr. George had asked for an examination of either Frank Underwood, present head of the scenario department, or Joseph C. Shea, former story editor.

Mr. George alleges that he submitted his story, "Little Miss Nobody," which was published in the February, 1931, issue of Modern Romances, to Mr. Shea, and that it was rejected. Subsequently, Twentieth Century-Fox produced a film of the same name based on an original story by Frederick Hazlitt Brennan. Mr. George claims $50,000 for use of the title and also seeks an accounting of the profits.

Court Reserves Decision On "March of Time" Suit

Decision was reserved this week by Justice Ferdinand Pecora in the New York supreme court on a motion for a temporary injunction made by the district committee of the National Maritime Union and three members of the crew of the Algic, to restrain Time, Inc., from further exhibition of the March of Time reel which deals with conditions in the American merchant marine.

The union is suing for $200,000 damages for alleged slander, and the individual plaintiffs ask $50,000 each. It is claimed that the trial of the seamen who are under indictment in the Brooklyn Federal court for alleged mutiny will be prejudiced by the continued exhibition of the film.

ERPI Suit Set for April

The $211,743 breach of contract suit brought by John G. Paine, as agent and trustee for approximately 100 music publishers, against Electrical Research Products, Inc., was ordered to trial in April by Federal Judge John C. Knox in the United States district court in New York this week. At the same time, Judge Knox permitted Homer H. Breland, attorney for ERPI, to withdraw his motion for summary judgment, dismissing the complaint. The publishers claim that certain royalties remain unpaid under a licensing contract with ERPI for the reproduction of their music in films exhibited in foreign countries. ERPI contends that the publishers did not own the international copyright and that nothing is due under the contract.

Darmour Writ Denied

Ruling that the "good faith" of the plaintiff was not shown, Justice Peter A. Schmuck in New York supreme court this week denied a motion of Larry Darmour, independent producer, for a permanent injunction pending trial to restrain Twentieth Century-Fox from using the title, "Second Honeymoon," on a recent picture. An accounting of the profits, damages and a permanent injunction are sought. No date was set for the trial.

Seeks to Examine Books

International Projector Corporation, defendant in a $250,000 breach of contract suit brought against it by Sentry Safety Control Corporation, was scheduled to ask Justice Aaron J. Levy in the New York supreme court this week for an inspection of the plaintiff's books. Sentry claims that a license agreement was made in 1930 under which International agreed to manufacture Sentrolas, a sound picture projector for home use. The agreement allegedly provided for a $65,000 guarantee, plus $2.50 royalties on each machine. Sentry contends that the defendant breached the contract by refusing to fill orders. Trial has been set for March 25th.

Test Case on Sale of Rights

Eugene Pauker, agent, filed a test suit against the Federal Government in the United States district court in New York this week to determine whether sale of film rights by foreign authors and publishers residing abroad are subject to United States income taxes. Mr. Pauker seeks the return of $3,600 which he paid under protest. The petition alleged that he arranged the sale of world film rights.

Jones' Plea Denied

Federal Judge Bascom S. Deaver in Atlanta, Ga., this week ruled that Robert Tyre ("Bobby") Jones could not recover $53,339.37 he paid in income taxes on revenue from a series of golf shorts he made for Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc., in 1931 and 1933. Robert P. Jones, father of the ex-golfing champion, also involved in court action, announced that an appeal would be taken.

The elder Jones paid $1,000 for his son's services and film producers paid Jones, Sr., $101,000 in 1931 and $55,200 in 1933, which money was placed in trust for younger Jones' three minor children.

OBITUARIES

Owen McKivett

Owen McKivett, 51, pioneer Racine, Wis., exhibitor, died February 26 at his home there. Mr. McKivett had been in charge of Warner Brothers theatres in Racine. He celebrated his 25th anniversary as an exhibitor last month. He is survived by his widow and son.

Gianni Bettini

Gianni Bettini, 78, one of the scientists who helped Thomas Edison in the development of the phonograph, and who recently has been working on photography and television, died Sunday in San Remo, according to word received in New York.

Richard C. Stout

Richard C. Stout, 53, executive of Heywood-Wakefield Company, died February 24th in New York after a short illness. He is survived by two brothers.

William B. Dailey

William B. Dailey, president of the Dailey Corporation of Verona, N. J., manufacturers of photographic film, and former member of the local city council, died in Newark February 23rd after a nine-month illness.

Mrs. Catherine McCarthy

Funeral services were held in Santa Monica, Cal., last week for Mrs. Catherine McCarthy, 80, mother of Augustine Vincent McCarthy of the Hollywood editorial staff of Quigley Publications. Two other sons, Joseph McCarthy of Boston and Charles McCarthy of Santa Monica, also survive.

Carrie Black

Carrie Perkins Black, once a Broadway character actress, died Sunday in Amityville, L. I. She was 77 years old, the widow of William Black, an actor, who died four years ago.

Tribute to McCarthy

A group of friends of the late J. J. McCarthy visited his grave in Gate of Heaven Cemetery, Mt. Pleasant, N. Y., last Friday. McCarthy, former head of the Advertising Advisory Council of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors, died in Hollywood a year ago February 25th.

Rev. Ahern Sees Place For Out-of-Ordinary Film

At last Thursday's meeting of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers in the International Casino, New York, Reverend Michael J. Ahern, S.J., of Boston, the guest of honor, emphasized the fact that there is a market for films dealing with subjects not ordinarily treated by producers. Father Ahern had much to do with preparing "Monastery" for the American screen.

The luncheon was attended by 125. Dr. Hyman Judah Shachtel, rabbi of the West End Synagogue, pleaded for "higher standards" in films and proposed "supervision at the source by a committee representing the public." Dr. Everett R. Clinchy, director of the National Conference of Jews and Christians, speaking as a Protestant churchman, told of the role of the screen and the church in promoting amity.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

*An international association of showmen meeting weekly
in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress*

"MISS HUMANITY HOME"

Every now and then a tie-up is effected in New York which is not only great in importance but which can be adapted in practically any city in the country.

Such a tie-up was recently engineered for the exploitation of "The Goldwyn Follies" in the nature of a "Miss Humanity Home."

Inspired by the recognition of the influence of motion pictures in shaping trends in style and interior decoration, more than twenty home-making industries combined to create "The Miss Humanity Home." It was a model, modern five-room apartment adapted from Andrea Leeds' home shown in the "Goldwyn Follies."

The idea is of a timely nature, having a direct appeal to the public, particularly young girls about to be married, since this home is so designed as to show the public that the finest American products have definitely come out of the "high cost" class.

Beside attracting thousands of curious people to the "home" itself, tremendous publicity breaks occurred co-incident with the promotion. Further, each of the participating merchants took advertising space in practically all the metropolitan dailies, advertising their individual items, giving the picture itself a splendid plug in all ads.

We are of the opinion that while the number of co-operating merchants in the smaller towns may be less than twenty still even a greater interest could be created in this promotion than displayed in New York. Also, it may be remembered that all this free publicity and advertising is obtained at no cost to the theatre. How effectively it would work out for you depends on the care you take in its planning and execution. Its possibilities are practically unlimited.

OWEN McKIVITT

Close to the whole town recently turned out to honor genial Owen McKivitt, in charge of the Warner houses in Racine, Wisconsin, in honor of the celebration of his twenty-fifth year in show business. The leading newspaper devoted a section of six complete pages to this beloved person. Editorial comment was abundant in all papers. Leading authorities of State and City, besides theatremen were extremely generous in their praise of McKivitt. This short editorial salute was practically in type, when we received a shock in form of the announcement of his demise less than a week ago. Nothing we can say can adequately express the extreme regret we feel at this untimely and appalling loss to our business and the community.

SERIALS

In selling the short subject a lot of exploitation work has been done by theatremen in connection with important news events, colored cartoons, etc. There has been a noticeable lack of activity concerned with the selling of "serials." This week, however, it was gratifying to receive from both Phil Laufer of the Criterion and John Joseph's office at Universal, truly worthwhile material on ticket-selling exploitation, on this type of entertainment.

Laufer, during the run of the first episode of "The Lone Ranger" at the Criterion Theatre in New York, adopted an unusual and attention-getting angle. He had the "Lone Ranger" ride down Broadway, with appropriate costume, etc., and enlisted the aid of the police, who, with an eye to safety rather than adventure, insisted the Ranger unmask. This proved to be a crowd-stopper. We believe that this same slant can be used at small cost in practically any situation.

On "Flash Gordon's Trip to Mars," John Joseph's crew completed a tie-up with Look Magazine for the serialization of the story with "stills" in typical screen fashion, using a total of sixteen full pages for the purpose. The first "episode" breaks on March 15th.

Utilizing this for local purposes, it might not be a bad idea to write Mr. Joseph for copies of these layouts for use in a special frame in your lobby.

As a matter of fact, it might not be amiss to mention at this point, that this "serialization" idea of illustrating a story with stills from the picture, could be used on any serial in the photo sections of your newspapers. Picture editors, we have discovered by past experience, "go" for this sort of material in a big way.

Round Table In Pictures

Tommy Kelly and Ann Gillis were guests of honor at a Lincoln's Birthday luncheon party given for them by John Wanamaker's in New York as part of a tieup for "The Adventures of Tom Sawyer" engagement at the Music Hall. The store advertised the event in all local newspapers and drew a great crowd of mothers and children.

For the date of "Penitentiary" at the Alvin Theatre, Pittsburgh, Penna., Manager George Tyson used this unique illuminated electric sign directly above the pit. Just before each preview of the trailer, sign was lighted as sirens blew and shots were fired.

As part of his exploitation for "True Confessions" at the Lido Theatre, Los Angeles, J. E. Poynter promoted use of oversize French phone for his lobby display. Copy above read "Hello, Hello, Hello. We're calling to tell you of the all laugh program" etc. etc.

From City Manager Ed Crabtree, Fischer Theatre, Danville, Ill., comes this "Buccaneer" setpiece. Cap and blouse done in pale green; hair gold and rich brown. Shadows of face purple over light flesh; Red orange necklace; blouse blue; cobalt and Prussian blue cuffs and collar and chains and scissors of gold. Skirt three shades of green and underskirt in purples.

Forwarded by Frank Boucher, Strand Theatre, Altoona, Pa. is this front on "You're a Sweetheart" which was created by Staff Artist Douglas Melliott. Giant cutouts of Alice Faye were flanked on either side of boxoffice.

Window display for "Gold is Where You Find It" was planted by A. B. Morrison, Warner Theatre, Memphis, Tenn. Window shoppers were asked to guess weight of nuggets displayed and theatreman awarded passes to those guessing nearest to correct answer.

Eye-attracting indeed was Anton Janssen's "Alcatraz" front at the Astor Theatre, Minneapolis. Giant banners covering all three sides of marquee heralded the opening. Painted on the display was the Island of Alcatraz itself.

QUICK REPORTS FROM THE FIELD

Gangster Material

For "The Last Gangster" engagement at the Fox Capitol, Glendale, Cal., Jack Cleland promoted 25,000 blotters from local typewriter dealer. Front carried agency's ad and reverse and blotting side carried theatre stamp and copy "blot on the last gangster." To further carry out the idea, a large blot of ink was splashed on each blotter which was distributed at the theatre, placed in banks, schools, hotels, etc.

Display for Cleland's lobby consisted of large blowups of fingerprints against a gold backdrop and surrounded by large red cardboard blotches upon which were mounted "wanted" circulars of various types and offenses. All of these were obtained on loan from Bureau of Investigation. In foreground were letters "The Last Gangster" nailed together and painted with red paint denoting blood. Step platforms were "rigged up" by newspapers which formed covering.

Industrial Show

Unique was the tieup arranged by Nathan Wise, RKO director of Publicity in Dayton, when he arranged for an Industrial Show, featuring nationally famous products manufacturer in Dayton and held in the RKO Keith Theatre lobby for one week. The purpose of the exhibit was to bring to the attention of local citizens exactly what that city was contributing to the national manufacturing picture.

Show gave local companies a chance to display their new 1938 models and created general goodwill. Seventeen major companies participated, each building his own display and meeting all expense involved. Wise promoted tea and wafers which were served by uniformed attendants, companies represented met cost of cooperative ad and plugged the event in their store windows. Theatre ran trailers and carried special lobby posters, and the theatremen reports that approximately 10,000 people visited the show and examined the displays.

Premiere

To mark the world premiere of "The Adventures of Marco Polo" at the Lincoln Theatre, Miami, Sonny Shepherd of the Wometco Theatres and Carl Erbe of United Artists arranged with the stewards of Hialeah Park to have the sixth race known as the "Marco Polo Handicap."

ROSENTHAL PLANTS RESEMBLANCE CONTEST

Discovering that Mayor Jasper McLevy of Bridgeport resembles Lincoln, Morris Rosenthal, Loew's Majestic tied in with the Times-Star several days ahead of Lincoln's birthday and ran a photo of the Mayor in that paper. Prizes were offered to those who transferred the picture into an actual portrait of the great emancipator. Cards heralding the contest were planted in hotel lobbies, Western Union branches and announcements tacked on bulletin boards of all nearby schools.

Stage Coach

Managers Proctor and Marsh, Ritz Theatre, Muskogee, Okla., for the opening gun of their "Wells Fargo" date report using the original Deadwood Stage Coach that was on the regular mail run from Denver to Kansas City. Starting at 10 A. M. on a Saturday morning, coach lumbered down the street amid gun shots and shouts of cowboys aboard, halting in front of theatre to pick up waiting passengers made up in period costumes. Several large Wells Fargo strong boxes with title and playdates stamped on sides were piled on to coach and delivered to three leading banks and left on display.

Airplane Lobby

To build up his "Atlantic Test Flight" campaign at the Conley Theatre, Frankfort, Ind., Chris Chamales borrowed several propellers and mounted them atop his box office and in the lobby. Line on the exhibition was carried in all theatre ads. Another stunt which this showman finds effective on air pictures is tieup with libraries, who recommend books pertaining to aeronautics and use counter displays, in addition to plugging picture at the Conley.

Judge Sentences

In Canton, Benny Schwartz, manager of Warners' Ohio Theatre, put over what is reported to be an excellent campaign on "Boy of the Streets." Highlights were the use of 200 22 by 28 cards mounted on the downtown city light poles, human interest story on the angle of local judge sentencing delinquent boys to see the picture and boy scout benefit ticket sale campaign which went over very well.

Anniversary

Celebrating the 46th anniversary of the opening of the Fox Illinois Theatre, Jacksonville, Ill., Ralph Bartlett published a gala 16-page issue of the "Fox Movietone News," theatre house organ. Front page contained announcement of new modern theatre to be erected shortly on the present site and, to carry out the festive occasion, small cuts of birthday cake with lighted candles were scattered throughout pages. Inside spread contained stories on old time stage attractions and other memorable events back in '92. Merchants' ads helped pay printing cost and, needless to say, Bartlett managed to get in many plugs for his forthcoming attractions and good will for his theatre.

Newspaper Slants

Contests highlighted Ed Pentecost's "Hurricane" campaign at Loew's Grand, Atlanta, first of which was the awarding of guest tickets to those submitting best essays on Tahiti. Secondly a four page cooperative ad layout with stars' names scattered throughout the ads, guest tickets also going to those correctly assembling list, and last, cash prizes were given in a candid camera tieup. As a result of these various contests, "Hurricane" was accorded plenty of extra publicity.

Bus lines distributed special cards to neighboring towns, magazine agency placed cards on all stands, orchestrations were planted with leading bands about city and radio station ran spot announcements week ahead and during run.

Governor Aids

Well executed "Snow White" campaign was turned out by Dewey Mousson assisted by Charles Levy at the Knickerbocker Theatre, Nashville, Tenn., with the showman securing cooperation of Governor Gordon Browning, who participated in a "Snow White" parade, riding from the Capitol to the theatre with "seven dwarfs" and attending special showing for 1,000 underprivileged children.

Board of Education decreed a Disney art study course an immediate part of the curriculum; radio campaigns were extensive, two stations hooking up with the theatre to broadcast the kiddie party, including the Governor's address and various stores cooperated by featuring window displays plugging the date.

"BUCCANEER" DISPLAYS IN LONDON

ALL READY FOR THAT FLIGHT TO HOLLYWOOD?

UNITED AIRLINES TO TRANSPORT WINNERS

Next Week's Judges' Decisions Will Determine Quigley 1937 Grand Awards Winners

The response to last week's announcement that for the third year the Quigley Grand Award ceremonies are again to be held in Hollywood and that the 1937 winners are to be conveyed to the Coast by air indicates that there are a lot of showmen on the qui vive for that Big Week of entertainment in Studioland.

Final arrangements for the journey are now completed. The winning theatremen are to be transported to Hollywood and return by United Air Lines in one of the Mainliners, the last word in comfort and luxury. These new ships are equipped with new type engines making them one of the most powerful land planes in America. The plane carrying the winners will span the country in 16 hours, making only three stops over the famous scenic airway which follows the pioneer trail across the continent.

Pictured above is United's new de luxe ship. Unusual is the seating plan with fourteen seats of the swivel chair, overstuffed variety, placed in a cabin originally designed to accommodate twenty-one passengers. Featured also in the new plane are individual tables for each passenger, movable foot rests, bridge tables, binoculars, magazine library and typewriter.

Owing to the untimely demise of Hal Grady, Palace Theatre, Lubbock, Texas, there are but twenty-three campaigns to be considered this year for the Grand Awards.

The two men selected for the year's Top Prizes will be announced in the issue of March 12th.

And Hollywood will be all set to give the winners the biggest kind of a party. The folks out there sure went to town last year to welcome Lew Chatham and Sid Holland and are waiting to turn over the keys of the city to the 1937 winners.

Your attention is called to the Quigley Awards Information on the right of this page, dealing with the new system for granting these Awards for this year (1938).

"Let's Hear From You!"

Artist Sketches Scenes From "Gold"

Novel exploitation attracted crowds to the New York Strand for the opening of "Gold Is Where You Find It" through use of an artist stationed in front of the theatre week before opening, sketching scenes from the picture and inking in a plug for the film, which created unusual attention. Finished drawings were given to onlookers as a gift from the management.

The Journal-American carried prominent mention of the theatre and playdates in their serialization of the picture and all their newspaper delivery trucks were posted with announcements of the serialization. These trucks served as "travelling" billboards for the engagement. Special treasure hunt contest was run in the classified ad section of the paper with cash prizes and tickets distributed to the winners.

Quigley Awards Information At a Glance

Awards will be made quarterly; that is, your material will be judged on a basis of three-month periods. You "start from scratch" every three months. Quarterly competitions run: WINTER: Jan. 1-March 31; SPRING: April 1-June 30; SUMMER: July 1-Sept. 30; FALL: Oct. 1-Dec. 31.

There are five different classifications under which you are eligible: "A", cities of 250,000 or over; "B", cities of 100,000 to 250,000; "C", cities of 25,000 to 100,000; "D", cities under 25,000; "E", suburban or subsequent runs.

Silver Plaques will be awarded to each entry voted best in the above five classifications. An additional citation will be voted for the best entry selected as best from among these five winners, regardless of classification.

Citation of Merit Sheepskin Certificates will be awarded for the runner-up in each classification. First and Honorable Mention Sheepskins will also be voted entries not awarded plaques of Citations of Merit, but deemed worthy of recognition.

Every contribution from the field to Managers' Round Table that has to do with Advertising, Exploitation or Publicity in the theatre during each three-month period will be considered in determining the Quarterly Awards.

Complete campaigns are not necessary, although they are desirable.

Institutional campaigns such as anniversaries, festivals, new theatre openings, new season drives, kiddies' clubs, civic tie-ups, etc., will also be eligible for recognition.

Selections by the Judging Committee will be based upon an entrant's efforts during the three-month competition and not upon any one single picture campaign, as heretofore.

The Quigley Annual Awards will be continued in 1938, the winners to be chosen from among entrants earning the highest ratings in the year's four quarterly Competitions.

It is important and of vital interest to you that you keep sending material from week to week or such time as you have activities ready, since these Awards are based upon the most consistent efforts of entrants over the entire three-month period. In other words, each man may submit as many campaigns and material of any sort as he cares to during each Quarterly Competition.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk(*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

J. C. JENKINS—HIS COLYUM

Neligh, Nebraska
(The White Spot)

Dear Herald:

This community was very highly entertained at the Moon theatre last night by "Radio City Revels." While we don't pretend to know very much about pictures, it is our belief that if RKO don't get a blue ribbon in the comedy-drama field for this one the judges must have had about three drinks too many. You should see Helen Broderick cuddle up to Bob Burns, and boy, how she can cuddle. It made us wonder what we'd do if she'd try cuddling up to us once. Bob was about as ardent and enthusiastic a lover as a bullfrog, we can beat Bob ourself, but . . .

You can call us fresh, or stewed, or raw
Or even call us crazy,
But we'd like to go to Arkansaw
And see Bob's grandpa Snazy.

Anyhow, when you go to see "Radio City Revels" be sure to have the vest buttons sewed on tight.

It has been our understanding that the League of Nations was organized to prevent war, but, since its organization, war has been going on over pretty much of the world, and the League passed another resolution and adjourned. We have a plan to prevent war which we believe will make the League look like a two spot. Our plan is to get the heads of the nations together, march them down to the arena, put a pair of brass knuckles on each one and say, "now you guys who want to fight get into that ring and go to it." We'll betcha that would put an end to this war talk. What the world needs is a little common drayhorse sense.

We got a letter from Herbert G Ruffner of Westwood, New Jersey, wanting to know how to get a foothold in the movie business. That's a pretty tough question to answer. There are a lot of people who would like to know that also. Herbert impresses us as a very energetic young chap.

Idaho probably produces more wool than any other state in the Union, and if it weren't for Idaho, where would the manufacturers of clothes get the wool to make their cotton clothes out of. A fellow tried to sell us a calfskin coat once for "Tasmanian Bear."

We got a letter from an exhibitor away up in northern Minnesota and he said, "Colonel, I have been reading your Colyum for a long time, etc., etc." Well, well, who'd think a fellow up there among those lakes, where the fishing is so good, would waste his time that way. Some people claim that the world is getting wiser every day, but that's a lot of horseradish.

This "Gateway to the West" is so full of cars on Wednesday and Saturday afternoons that one can hardly get down the streets, and at least 80 per cent of them are bought on the installment plan, and hard times is usually the topic of conversation. We came to Nebraska during the "horse and buggy days" and at that time Ab Stoner and Jake Smith came to town with a team of horses and a wagon load of grain and they took some money back home with them. Today they are enjoying a "more abundant life." Each has an automobile, a tractor, a truck and a radio, and owes for all of them. Prosperity has come around that "corner." Old man Depression has two sons, one named Credit and the other named Installment, and both boys are working overtime, and the best way to beat that old guy is to adopt the rule, "If I can't pay, I won't buy."

Henry Reeve of the Mission theatre at Menard, Texas, writes us a very interesting letter, and, among other things he says, "Best wishes to the grand friend of the movies and the small town exhibitor." But say, Henry, where do you get that "grand" stuff? Henry says he is now a grandpa. Well, well, well, how tempus fugit. We remember visiting at his home once and we had a grand time, and our hope is that we may do so again, for he has a lovely wife and a grand family.

In the corner of his letterhead we noted this, "Presidio de San Luis de las Amarillas," whatever that is. He sends us a picture of his Mission theatre which he has remodeled into a theatre that both he and the state of Texas can well be proud of. Gosh, but we'd like to go down there again; maybe we will some day. Thanks Henry.

The paper says today that one theatre in Lincoln, Neb., is playing two features for a nickel. Doggone it, won't these theatres ever stop soaking the public? By doggies, we are not going to that theatre until they start serving ice cream and cake. Double featuring was started to beat out the small theatres. You have heard of "boomerangs," haven't you?

For those of you who haven't already played "Checkers," our judgment is that the small towns will go for this in a big way. By small towns we mean towns from 15,000 down.

Maybe we have said enough. Maybe we have said too much.

Architectural Harmony and Patron Comfort with American Seating

The Collegian Theatre, Ames, Iowa, seated in August 1937 with American Seating Company chairs of a design and construction that blend perfectly with the interior decorations. An example of how well American can provide seating appropriate to interior decoration and architecture.

MYRON N. BLANK of the Central States Theatre Corporation built a beautiful new theatre—the Collegian at Ames, Iowa. He wanted comfortable, long-life chairs whose design would harmonize perfectly with the modern-styled interior decorations of his theatre. He knew where to find such chairs.

The American Seating Line-O-Lite chair was the answer. Notice how the standard of this seat follows out the vertical decorative motif of the walls. That's showmanship at its best.

Look to American Seating for the ultimate in comfort, long-life and designs that enhance box-office appeal.

This attractive Line-O-Lite Chair invites people back with its restful comfort and correct posture support—helps make a steady patron out of the "once-in-a-while."

NOT a FAD but a FACT

High intensity projection is here to stay.

Three quarters of America's theatre seating capacity is in high intensity equipped houses. More are installing every day. The economy and box office value can no longer be denied.

What it has done for other theatres it can do for you. It will put your theatre in line for successful competition with the big deluxe houses.

Two to three times as much light—snow white light—is necessary to good projection of color pictures. You get this increased illumination and at less cost per unit of light with Simplified High Intensity Projection. With it every picture seems a better picture.

If you are still using old style, low intensity projection because you believe it economical, you may be astonished to learn that you are paying too much for what you are getting.

Now is the time to act! Get full details today. Even though you may feel sure your present projection is satisfactory, you owe it to yourself to get all the facts. Write for interesting catalog and name of your nearest Independent Theatre Equipment Dealer.

YOU CAN NOW SELL YOUR CURRENT OR COMING ATTRACTIONS WITH

Flo-lite

THE WORLD'S FIRST SUCCESSFUL CONTINUOUS 35 MM. MOTION PICTURE PROJECTOR INSTALLED IN YOUR THEATRE ABSOLUTELY FREE

● You "SELL" your coming attractions on your screen... that's fine... but how about selling them also to passers-by who don't get inside of the theatre? Also, wouldn't it be an advantage to run trailers of your playing attractions to attract passers-by into your theatre?

You can do this now with... FLO-LITE, a new 35 mm. sound or silent continuous projector, which will run up to 1,000 feet of any 35 mm. film, color or black and white. Flo-Lite occupies less than 2 feet of space. All mechanism and screen complete in one portable unit. It is entirely automatic... needs no operator... no rethreading... no oiling or adjusting—but runs continuously as long as you want it to.

INSTALLED ABSOLUTELY FREE

We will place a new Flo-Lite projector in your theatre or theatres, render all service and maintenance, including replacement of bulbs and tubes, ABSOLUTELY FREE. All we ask is your permission to splice at the end of your trailers a short, subtle promotional film, 100 to 300 feet, of a national sponsor... not bold advertising... on subjects of public interest... such as home-making... styles... news events...

sports... with the name of the sponsor and product very subtly presented. Perhaps a short dramatization may be used, but in each case the film will be of public interest and not straight advertising.

Since Flo-Lite holds up to 1,000 feet of film, you are at liberty to use trailers not only on your future attractions but on any special contests or promotional events you may be conducting. You may also use it to convey to your patrons the comfort and air-conditioning of your theatre, parking facilities and other features and conveniences which your theatre provides.

Flo-Lite is sold nationally at $450 for the silent unit and $650 for the sound. To a limited number of theatres we offer it ABSOLUTELY FREE along with this program. Remember, Flo-Lite is offered to you on a strictly trial basis with no definite agreement until you are convinced of its desirability.

Since only a limited number will be distributed on this basis we urge that you write immediately for complete details. Our 14 page color booklet on Flo-Lite is just off the press. Write for it on your letterhead.

A Design for a Luminous Theatre Front

by

S. CHARLES LEE

■ In this drawing, S. Charles Lee, Los Angeles theatre architect, offers suggestions in the treatment of a façade and vestibule emphatically in keeping with the modern idea that a theatre front and entrance should be dedicated to salesmanship. He has used glass blocks in large areas to point up contours and lines of his masses, and these blocks would be illuminated from behind. With the marquee integrally a part of the entire façade, its soffit becomes the ceiling of the vestibule, and set deeply behind it, is a corner elevation of the main structure, providing large panels for illuminated attraction advertising, and a lofty position for theatre name signs. . . . Incidentally, Mr. Lee makes still another contribution to this issue on page 11.

Seek More Natural Color With Light Screen Area

IN THE BELIEF that the colors of color films are exaggerated by the blackness of the area around the screen, Oscar Deutsch, head of the British Odeon circuit, has begun to experiment with new backgrounds and frames for color films and in the general lighting of theatres.

On the suggestion of A. Jympson Harman, film critic of the London Evening News, who has been studying the subject for some time, Deutsch has tried out in the Odeon Leicester Square, latest of London's "luxury cinemas," various color frameworks for Technicolor screenings. He is experimenting with various combinations of colors, and has even tried running films at relatively high auditorium illumination levels.

It is Harman's contention, backed up now by Deutsch and the engineers of British Thomson Houston, that a black frame and setting, and a dark auditorium make color on the screen exaggeratedly brilliant. The experiments with brighter screen surroundings and auditoriums have, they state, made the colors appear more natural.

Their official conclusion is: Light, preferably of a neutral shade like gray, spread round the picture, definitely softens the tones, makes them more realistic without taking away any of the color, and actually lends a partial stereoscopic effect.

Alexander Korda, whose "Divorce of Lady X" was used for one test, offers the criticism that a lighted auditorium makes concentration difficult, but agrees that the principle is sound.

British Thomson Houston engineers, supported by Deutsch, are now going ahead with experiments, and it is expected that a more fully developed scheme will be given a trial at the Leicester Square Odeon in London.

New Projector Shown In Nation-Wide Exhibits

SIMULTANEOUSLY with similar exhibits and demonstrations in the 28 branches of the National Theatre Supply Company, the new Simplex E-7 projector was displayed at the Hotel Lincoln in New York from February 21 to 25. Nearly 1,000 theatre owners and executives, and projectionists were reported to have attended.

Special platforms had been arranged for mechanisms in various conditions of disassembly to show mechanical details, and twenty-minute talks in explanation of the new features were given eight times each day. The New York exhibit was in charge of James Frank, Jr., of the National Theatre Supply Company home office.

Survey Said to Show Design Standards Need

A PRELIMINARY analysis of data on conditions in existing motion picture theatres throughout the United States, compiled by the Projection Practice Committee of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, indicates that the committee will find theatre structure design to be much in need of recommended standards. Reporting to the committee at its February meeting in New York, Ben Schlanger, New York theatre architect and chairman of the subcommittee on theatre structures which has charge of the survey, said that the data so far compiled shows "only 16% of the theatres surveyed to have tolerable conditions with respect to six basic design factors."

Mr. Schlanger said that not only did the lack of proper standards in theatre design in the past make for poor viewing conditions, but that considerable inefficiency in use of cubic physical structure was also evident. The survey, which has been to assist in the preparation of SMPE standards for theatre design, included theatres ranging from 200 to 4,000 in seating capacity, and representing each section of the United States. Some of the basic considerations of theatre design being investigated are:

1. The relationship of the screen size to the viewing distance.
2. The proportion of the length and width of the seating area.
3. The vertical position of the screen and the projection angle.
4. The light energy in relation to the screen and auditorium size.

The findings of the survey have revealed variations in design on these factors which spread to an extent of at least three times that which Mr. Schlanger said may be considered as tolerable limits. He stated as an example that the relationship of the maximum viewing distance to the width of the screen was found to range from $2\frac{1}{2}$ to one, to 8 to one, whereas a tolerable range, he said, should be nearer that from $4\frac{3}{4}$ to one, to $5\frac{3}{4}$ to one.

A complete report of the survey made to date will be given at the convention of the SMPE in Washington, D. C., in April.

1938 Remodeling Seen Maintaining 1937 Pace

MOTION PICTURE theatre modernization in 1938 will at least approximate the relatively high figure reached in 1937, it is indicated by reports representing the United States as a whole. As may be expected, the opinions of architects and theatre executives are now being importantly conditioned by the current recession in business generally; however, with the upturn expected this spring, remodeling—if not construction of new theatres—is regarded as certain to swing into the full stride of 1937, since there still remain many hundreds of obsolete theatre structures which can be salvaged.

In this connection, it is pointed out that the obsolete theatre in 1938 is in a competitive position still more precarious than last year because of the modernization and new construction already completed.

While some sections of the country will

American Interests Adding To Theatre Holdings Abroad

With Warner Brothers now constructing their first theatre in England, MGM adding several houses to its foreign group, and Paramount having opened yet another British cinema, American film companies are substantially extending their theatre holdings in other countries. The lower view at right, and that at the left above are of the new Paramount in Birmingham. The other auditorium shown, in an architect's sketch, is that of Metro in Sao Paulo, Brazil. Among other new Metro theatres already opened are those in Durban, South Africa; Brisbane and Sydney, Australia; two more houses are under construction in India and Puerto Rico.

Such general estimates as may be obtained while economic conditions are uncertain, are of course based upon mere observation, but the observations are those of theatre executives, supply dealers, and architects who are constantly in close touch with both theatre operators and contractors. Given in response to inquiries submitted with the privilege of having names unpublished, so that no personal or business associations would prevent candid reply, these observations point to a general continuance of the national remodeling program, with the small cities taking up any slack in the larger places, where a large amount of remodeling has been going on for two years.

Crops Main Factor in Midwest

One prominent theatre architect, referring to prospects in several Midwestern states, reports that circuit contacts he has recently had have indicated that the need of much more remodeling is recognized, but will depend upon crops. Considerable modernization, and quite a little new construction, was carried on last year despite continuance of dust storms and prolonged dry spells; this year, theatre operators apparently intend "to look before they leap."

The Fox Midwest Agency expects to confine its construction to alterations during 1938.

From the Fox Wisconsin Agency, however, comes the statement that in Wisconsin and Upper Michigan, there are signs "of a busy year in theatre remodeling and new building projects. In our opinion, there will be as much activity as in 1937, particularly in the smaller towns."

This statement continues, "Owners are making inquiries of costs from the various vendors, and plans are now being prepared by a number of architects for new theatres. . . . Labor conditions are apparently more stable than they were at this time last year, therefore creating a feeling of security for those who desire to make an expenditure which will require amortization for a period of time."

A similar reference to the smaller towns is made in a response from the Southwest, which points out, "The acquisition of theatres by chain operators, of smaller groups or individually owned theatres is occasioning considerable remodeling to bring these theatres up to the large chain standards."

Modernization Believed "Just Beginning"

From the Northwest comes the reply that while not very much new construction is expected during 1938, considerable remodeling and refurbishing is anticipated. The opinion is given that the remodeling program has just begun and that both 1938 and 1939 will continue to bring great improvement in the exhibition plant.

In the other northern corner of the country, New England, both remodeling and new construction plans are being held in abeyance pending the economic developments of the next few months.

A prominent Los Angeles architect states it as his belief that new construction on the West Coast in 1938 will be limited to very small theatres built to a low budget.

"The major circuits," he replies, "have covered their remodeling program in a general way, but there is quite a need for extensive modernization in the northwest. Theatres are older in that area, and if competition widened, I believe major construction would be forthcoming."

Remodeling to Change the Decorative Style of a Theatre

● Which method is better to effect a modern treatment—adding surface ornamentation, or emphasizing structural form? An architect here shows why he thinks the latter method preferable

By BEN SCHLANGER

OF ALL THE problems the exhibitor has to deal with, architectural decoration of the motion picture theatre is probably the one which is the most often misunderstood. Two major considerations are, first, the type or style of decoration to resort to; and second, the amount of decoration necessary. An analysis is set forth here which discusses the type of decoration advisable for various practical reasons, the amount necessary, and in which parts of the motion picture theatre building decoration is least or most needed. A difference is made here between superficial surface decoration, and decorative quality obtained by means of the basic structure and functional forms.

In general, the approach to the problem of determining the type of theatre structure which would be most effective has been more or less haphazard. Too often the theatre structure decoratively will be patterned after another one which is the fashion at the time, or will reflect the whims of the owner whose sense of possession tempts him to have the walls of his theatre express his own artistic notions. The architect, of course, may be largely to blame for poor examples of theatre design, since he either encourages fads in design, or to please his client and meet his dictates, creates the poor designs.

Basic Defects Often Unobserved

Evaluating the typical motion picture theatre being remodeled or constructed to date, it will be found that it has poor or just slightly better than poor, visual conditions, acoustics, lighting and general comfort conditions. The seriousness of these shortcomings are all too often unobserved by the exhibitor; he is wont to feel that his is a suitable theatre if it has the superficial decorations that the current fashion dictates. While it is true that his theatre, poorly designed as it may be from a functional standpoint, would be still more unsuitable did it have a 1920 decorative scheme, his theatre may be nevertheless a long way from what fundamentally good planning could have made it.

Influence of Form On Decorative Effect

THE USE OF superficial decoration, a good deal of which has merely replaced the older plaster devices, is occasionally imposed upon a designer by the problem at hand—economically and otherwise—but certainly such ornamentation should not be deliberately adopted as a preferred substitute for pleasing forms based on the very function demands of the structure.

To begin with, a poorly planned theatre needs superficial decoration to detract from its basic faults. For example, in Figure 1 are shown two schematic longitudinal sections, and two plans of motion picture theatre auditoriums, the seating capacity of each being the same. Theatre B needs far less (if any at all) superficial decorations than Theatre A. This is so because in Theatre B the very break-up of the space expanse by means of the elevated seating portion and the small lounge space adds far more intimate quality than any amount of surface decoration could achieve.

In Theatre B the extra cost of the raised seating level is more than offset by the resultant efficiency in reducing the building size and the saving in not having to resort to expensive surface decorations. Theatre B is shorter because the promenade space is also utilized for upper seating, which would occur directly over it. This is only one example of many possible ways in which a feature of good planning becomes the decorative value of the theatre.

Architecture treatment of the motion picture theatre should be considered as having two distinctly different decorative values. The first decorative value applies to treatment of the facade, the outer lobby, foyers, lounges, etc., where superficial decoration is advisable. For these portions of the theatre, modern embellishment, or a conservative traditional architectural treatment especially adapted to a given locale, may be in order. In reference to the exterior, this decorative value serves to attract attention in some instances on a busy thoroughfare, or to establish an environment which will blend the structure in with its surroundings or have a desired emotional appeal to patrons. All expenditures made for surface decorations should be confined, as much as possible, according to this method, to the facade and other auxiliary spaces mentioned.

Function in Auditorium Design

The second problem of theatre decoration, that which must be employed for the auditorium, or theatre proper, is really not decoration, or rather, it is not a surface decoration problem. It is decorative quality obtained by making the functional forms of the theatre structure itself create, in broad simple masses, a pleasing and purposeful atmosphere. The functional forms of the motion picture theatre are:

1. The physical shape of the structure designed to create efficient and effective seating areas and efficient traffic circulation.

2. The physical shapes created to contain the ventilating ducts, lighting elements, etc.

3. The physical shapes formed to respond properly to light and sound coming from the screen. In this function, not only is the basic shape important, but also the type of surface treatment becomes important.

These aforementioned functional forms become the sole source of inspiration for the decorative scheme of the auditorium—and this source is so rich that it is safe to say that it is entirely unnecessary to ever again employ any unrelated surface decorations, traditional or modern, for the auditorium.

Illumination Factors In Auditorium Treatment

DESPITE THE long establishment of practices representing a contrary point of view, decoration which is apparent as decoration in the auditorium is not desirable, in my opinion, because as such it is either unseen in the darkened room, in which case it is of no effect, or

Or, What Happened to the Pallywalsy Theatre?

Almost a Tragedy about Remodeling in three Acts and one Brawl

By S. CHARLES LEE

Scene is Architect Lee's office, Los Angeles, California. Mr. Lee, a man of small stature, sits in the center of an office about 40 feet square, at a desk with four sides, six telephones, stacks of papers and plans, higher than the top of his head, on two sides of the desk; one side is full of samples of glass, pipe, marble, nails and a rat trap; the fourth side is littered with papers not piled so high. Enter Miss Merrill, Mr. Lee's secretary, with paper in hand.

SECRETARY: Mr. Lee, here's a letter from another one of those magazines that would like to have some information on the cost of theatre remodelings.

LEE: File it in the wastebasket with the rest of the requests.

SECRETARY: But, Mr. Lee, think of your public!

LEE: Tush! What does the public think of me?

SECRETARY (under her breath): That you are heinous.

LEE: What did you say, Miss Merrill?

SECRETARY: That you're a genius.

LEE: Of course, of course. On second thought, I believe I'd better prepare this article. Remove these papers from in front of me so that I will have room to write. (Space is prepared. He leans back in chair; assumes pose of thinking. Takes up telephone. Dials number.) Hello! Mr. Luckhaus? We would like to have a photograph of a horrible example of a theatre. No, not one that we have designed. One that someone else has designed. Where is one? Well, there is one right around the corner. Go take a picture of it. I need it this afternoon to accompany an article on remodeling.

PHOTOGRAPHER: Here is the picture of the theatre you asked for. Took a shot of the Pallywalsy, just around the corner. Was built about 20 years ago. Shows you what a good photographer I am. It doesn't look bad in the picture, but it sure is a mess.

(Lee grumbles thanks, takes photograph and pushes buttons on the top of his desk. Instantly three draftsmen appear through the door dressed in flowing smocks; pencil lead smears on their faces.)

THREE DRAFTSMEN IN CHORUS: Yes, Mr. Lee.

LEE: You see this theatre?

HEAD DRAFTSMAN: Yes; nice, isn't it?

LEE: Nice? It's terrible!

HEAD DRAFTSMAN: Oh, sure. Very bad.

(All three draftsmen look very sad and shake their heads, mumbling, "Very bad, very bad.")

LEE: I want to design a new front for it. I need it for tomorrow with a breakdown of the items necessary for its reconstruction.

DRAFTSMEN: Yessir. (The three men back out of the office, two backing directly through the door, one hitting the casing. He apologizes and disappears through the door.)

(Curtain drops and rises, indicating next day. Lee, sitting at desk, papers all over the floor, telephone in each hand. He is talking to contractors.)

LEE: Plaster on metal lath, $1.10 a yard. Plaster on wood lath, 60¢ a yard. Steel, $110 a ton. Terrazzo, $1.50 a foot. (Etc., etc., etc. Leans back in chair with sigh.) That's that. (Goes to lay paper on part of desk where samples are located and the rat trap closes on finger. Curtain lowers amid various curses.)

ACT 2

Six weeks later. The scene is a theatre manager's office. Theatre manager seated at desk wearing wing collar and threadbare Tuxedo, slouched in chair, causing bulge in stiff shirt front. Standing at attention by the door is an usher with West Point uniform obviously made for previous appointee of taller stature. Seated at other side of desk is our hero, Architect Lee. Theatre manager bellowing so as to impress usher, and is holding up opened copy of BETTER THEATRES before Lee, showing article with picture of a theatre.

THEATRE MANAGER MARLIN: So, you're the guy that made our theatre a horrible example of theatre architecture in this mag.

LEE: Oh, no. I merely had it photographed and used it in an article. The original designer made it a horrible example.

MARLIN: Well, you're the guy that billed it all over the country and I don't like it.

LEE: I don't think anybody likes it. It's a mess.

CASHIER: Mr. Marlin, here's a ticket for you.

MARLIN: What the hell are you giving me a ticket for? Don't you think the doorman knows who I am?

CASHIER: Oh, yes, but this is a ticket for parking your car in front of the fire-plug.

MARLIN: Well, call up our insurance agent and tell him to fix it. We carry an all-risk policy.

CASHIER: Okey-dokey, Mr. Marlin.

MARLIN: Mr. Lee, this is my partner, Mr. Slinker.

LEE: Glad to meet you, Mr. Stinker.

SLINKER: SLINKER, you fool! Not Stinker.

LEE: Excuse me. All exhibitors are alike.

SLINKER: Is this the guy? (Marlin nods yes.) He's small enough to punch in the nose. How about it?

MARLIN: No, I've got a better idea. Mr. Lee, we're calling your bluff.

LEE: What bluff?

MARLIN: In this magazine you said you could alter this theatre for $7,500.00. Now, let's see you do it.

SLINKER: I'd rather punch him in the nose.

MARLIN: Not now, but if he does a bum job, we'll run him out of circulation.

SLINKER: How much do you charge?

LEE: Ten per cent.

SLINKER: I wish we could get MGM product for ten per cent.

LEE: Yeh? But if I had Will Hays working for me, I'd charge sixty per cent.

SLINKER: You probably get it anyhow, only we don't know it.

MARLIN: Put a checker in his box office.

SLINKER (to Marlin): Well, I'm surprised. You know how easy it is to beat that game. Remember the time—(Marlin stops Slinker with a wild stare).

SLINKER (to Lee): We don't dicker, do we, Marlin?

MARLIN: Nope. We're not the dickering kind.

SLINKER: See, I told you we don't dicker. Tell you what we will do: we'll give you five per cent.

LEE: Sorry, gentlemen, but I can't see my way clear on that figure. (Rises to leave.)

SLINKER and MARLIN (together): Just a minute. Let's talk this thing over.

MARLIN: Look at the advertising you will get from this job.

SLINKER: Yes. Everyone on Film Row will be after you if you do our work. You'll be famous. I'll tell you what we'll do.

(Curtain slowly drops with Marlin and Slinker both shaking fingers in Lee's face, as they raise percentage, saying together, "Six per cent, seven per cent, 7½ per cent," etc., etc.)

ACT 3

Scene is Lee's office, as in Act 1. Marlin and Slinker are seated at Lee's desk. Slinker has two dachshund dogs on a single leash, each trying to pull in opposite directions; he is smoking a curved pipe that just matches the dogs. Marlin, wearing a beret, is leaning forward.

MARLIN: You claim to be so smart and a little simple thing like that you don't work out.

LEE: But, Mr. Marlin, I told you it's impossible to build an auditorium that will hold six hundred during the week and twelve hundred on Saturday and Sunday.

SLINKER: All right; if you can't, you can't; but explain why, when you haul away so much dirt from our property, we don't get a credit. Lots of people want to buy dirt for filling rat holes or making mud pies. It has lots of uses. (Slinker turns quickly, grabs one dog, knocks over bottle of ink on desk. Addresses dog.) No, no, Otto, you naughty dog. (To Lee) That's funny. He's house-broke at home. (Lee winces.)

MARLIN: Why don't you see the Mayor? Tell him we are improving the city and maybe he'll let us put the box office on the curb. Look how much easier for people to buy tickets from their automobiles. I'm just doing it for the public, you know. I don't have to buy a ticket.

SLINKER: Sure, it's for the public. We get passes.

LEE: But, gentlemen, I told you it's public property and we can't build on it.

SLINKER: I've got an idea. Let's buy it from the public. How much can three-by-five feet of property cost, mostly curbing, too?

LEE: Sorry, but I don't think you can do that, either.

SLINKER: I've never seen such lack of co-operation. Tell me, Mr. Lee, what can we do?

LEE (reading from diary): On February 1st I told you that for $900 you could take out the obstructing columns in front and you said to take them out. On February 2nd Mr. Marlin 'phoned not to take them out. On February 3rd you 'phoned to take them out. On February 4th you put them back—on the 5th, out; 6th, in; 7th, out; 8th, in; 9th, out; 10th, in. And today, the 11th, I've got you both here together. So shall the columns be left in or taken out?

SLINKER: Take them out.

MARLIN: Nothing doing, leave them in.

(Curtain lowers with Marlin and Slinker shaking their fists at one another, one saying, "Out"; the other, "In." Again it's too late to catch the dog. Lee tears remaining hairs out of his head.)

Three months later the following letter is received by BETTER THEATRES:

Gentlemen:

We have just finished making alteration to our Pallywalsy theatre, in which we think your readers will be interested. It has been made almost like new. The old columns have been removed; the new box office moved forward to the property line; the old tile changed to terrazzo of attractive pattern; the poster cases have been modernized; the front trim is of green glass; the old signs have been cleverly rebuilt to fit our new scheme, and the public has responded beautifully to the improvement. The entire job cost us only $6,500, which was under the original budget. My partner and I worked the whole thing out with just a little help from an architect, whom my partner punched in the nose.

Yours truly,

Z. MARLIN.

... and this is by way of being a curtain call for the author, S. Charles Lee, designer of many a cinema demonstrating that with him, only on some such special occasion as this one is "the play the thing."

Mr. Hurley Steps in on the Future of Tucumcari

- Describing the modernization scheme of a small town theatre that is linked to a great government project through the energy and vision of its owner

TO TELL OF the remodeling of the Princess theatre in Tucumcari, New Mexico, is to present an unusual architectural plan, to describe a striking modern design for a town of 5,000, and to tell something about a man, a community and a great flood-control project.

The project is the Conchas Dam, a $12,500,000 Federal government development for farm irrigation and water supply, and future electrical power, located across the South Canadian River in northeast New Mexico, about 31 miles as the crow flies from Tucumcari.

It was in 1922, when he had been a motion picture theatre operator in Tucumcari for nine years, that Arch Hurley became interested in the efforts of citizens of the Texas Panhandle country to control the flood waters of the South Canadian river

Financing had always been the obstacle. With the backing of fellow Tucumcarians, Arch Hurley became the leader in these hopes, and from then to 1936, when the Federal government finally authorized the Conchas Dam, he made its realization something of a life's work.

Watering the Roots of Business

A dam to control the flood waters on the South Canadian River will mean much to business in this town of only 5,000 for several reasons. In the first place, when there are heavy rains in the mountains and on the plains, many homes in surrounding areas are in danger of destruction, while important highways to the towns are inundated. The Conchas project is authorized only for flood control purposes thus far, but it is expected that its completion will also provide water for the irrigation of at least 60,000 acres of farm land.

Already, Tucumcari is regarded as on the threshold of a boom (though avowedly no place, as yet, for the small investor), and Arch Hurley, gratified at the first fruits of his labors to bring about Conchas Dam (he made 34 trips to Washington, travelled over 200,000 miles in behalf of this development), has revised his Princess

THE JOINT CAREER OF A SHOWMAN AND HIS TOWN

■ Tucumcari, N. Mex., now a town of 5,000 on the Rock Island and Southern Pacific railroads, was founded in 1902. The railroads and grazing country brought it into existence; today it receives most of its support from the cattle business, for which it is a shipping point. Some farming has been developed, however, and the new Conchas Dam project on the Canadian river may result in the reclamation of a considerable portion of the surrounding semi-arid lands for crops.

Arch Hurley came to Tucumcari in 1913 from Eastern Oklahoma, where he had operated an "opery house" playing small-time stock companies, and also an Air-dome; however, he took over the management of Tucumcari's opera house for motion pictures.

It did not prove suitable for films, and in 1915 he remodeled an old store building into a picture house seating 250, operating it for three years. Then he built the Princess theatre.

Meanwhile, Tucumcari was slowly adding to its population, and the Princess theatre prospered. Through these years Arch Hurley heard a great deal of talk about what a dam over the Canadian river would do for Tucumcari, preventing floods and providing water to irrigate farm land. He decided to make it more than just talk. And on July 29, 1935, his efforts were rewarded with the authorization by President Roosevelt of Conchas Dam as a government project.

In 1937, Mr. Hurley built another theatre, the Odeon, giving him, with the remodeled Princess, two modern playhouses to serve not only the present, but the brighter future of Tucumcari. The theatres are under the direct management of his son, Milas L. Hurley.

The New Plan and Decorative Scheme

THE PLAN as well as the front and interior treatments represents general revision of the former structure. The vestibule leads into a T-shaped foyer which includes sunken lounge areas on either side. The vestibule and the fore part of the foyer lie between stores, behind which are the lounges, one for women at the left, the other for men, each adjoined by a toilet room cut into the store space.

Traffic proceeds through doors flush with the rear of the box office, on each side, and continues on either side of a phone booth and a staircase, and between the sunken lounges, to the rear of the auditorium, where it is turned to either side by a free partition and thus into the aisles of a three-bank, two-aisle seating plan.

The second level is over the lounges, foyer and stores. The forward foyer stairs give access to the balcony seats, to an office at either side, and to the projection room, which is located between the stair well and the central bank of a three-bank seating plan. Other stairs lead to each balcony aisle at the front, from a point on either side of the foyer just before it opens into the auditorium. Total seating capacity is approximately 800. The building is 50x142 feet, over-all.

Front and Interior Treatment

The front is finished in ivory-tinted stucco above the store fronts, and elsewhere in ivory and blue Carrara glass (see photograph on page 13). The marquee, which has porcelain-enamel finish, is an Artkraft prefabricated unit structure with porcelain enamel finish with splayed sides carrying silhouette-letter attraction boards and designed in combination with an overhead horizontal name sign, the pattern of which links it with the marquee through a flasher-lamped arrow motif directing the eye toward the box office. Neon is used for marquee trim and name sign letters, while the marquee soffit is lighted by reflector lamps.

Walls and ceilings, except in the auditorium, are finished in hard plaster. The foyer and lounge walls are painted buff in bands varying in width from 2 feet to 8 inches, and graded in buff tones from a deep shade near the floor to a light shade at the ceiling. The lounges, which lie in excavated areas, have concrete floors painted gray with a 1-foot black border, and are furnished with Royalchrome metal chairs and sofas. All other floors of the interior, except beneath seating, are covered in Crestwood Velvet carpeting in a modern pattern executed principally in blue, tan and gray.

The auditorium color scheme is blue, the walls being treated as a light blue ground for simple stencil patterns in dark blue. Chairs (by American) are upholstered in solid blue imitation leather. The auditorium ceiling, however, is finished in 1-inch U. S. Gypsum acoustic tiles laid in 36-inch squares and left undecorated.

All interior illumination is by bracket fixtures, which were made by R. J. Smith of Hurley Theatres' art department, who also supervised decoration of the Princess. They are of glashed glass mounted on wood painted aluminum (to give the effect of a metal base). In the auditorium, each fixture is on three color circuits.

The Princess has been equipped with a blower system (Sirocco) with air-washing equipment, for auditorium and foyer-lounge air supply. Heating throughout the building is by direct radiation.

The projection room is 9 feet deep and almost 16 feet wide. The equipment, which is new, includes Simplex projectors with Peerless Magnarc lamps supplied by a General Electric copper oxide rectifier.

Modern Materials to the Rescue:

● Never perhaps has the vast change in theatre styles, and how remodeling can effectively deal with it, been better illustrated by a single structure than in the transformation of the late-French Renaissance Garrick in Madison, Wis., into the emphatically modern Madison. These before-and-after pictures well show how an obsolete theatre can be saved.

FRONT: The Madison, which is owned and operated by Asher Levy of the Ashley Theatre Company, occupies a building originally erected as a vaudeville theatre, called the Orpheum, which became the Garrick with the adoption of a straight picture policy. In the revision of the facade, the original architecture was retained at the upper part. The first story, however, was completely recast, with facing in Vitrolite structural glass, an inner panel effect of solid blue having a border of a blue-toned agate. A sidewalk box office was added, its unglazed areas finished in stainless steel. A modern marquee with neon trim, Adler program letters, and radially lamped soffit; and sodium-mercury flood lamps were also installed.

FOYER: Originally overladen with plaster ornamentation, the foyer walls and ceiling were refinished with smooth plaster surfaces, left undecorated except for stenciled panels. New means of illumination were provided in Solar indirect fixtures. Carpet is Crestwood Velvet.

Salvaging an Obsolete Structure

AUDITORIUM: The two left - hand pictures show the auditorium that has been fashioned from that pictured immediately below. Walls above the dado, as well as the ceiling and the balcony soffit, have been finished in Graylite building board, $\frac{3}{4}$ -inch thick, and this has been painted with Texolite, a paint which may be applied without reducing the sound-absorbing characteristics of a material. Side wall stripings are cardinal red and white, the colors of the University of Wisconsin; proscenium stripings are black and gold; the remainder of the auditorium is done in deep brown and cream. Illumination is by proscenium coves and indirect bracket fixtures, wired for three colors. Capacity is 925.

LOUNGE: General view of the lounge area off which are located lounge and toilet facilities for men and for women. Walls and ceilings have smooth plaster finish, either with simple bandings or delicate stenciling. . . . The Madison has been equipped (by Trane) for air-conditioning, with city water for cooling.

For Box Office Build-Up— NEW L·O·F FRONTS OF METAL AND GLASS

These new, complete L·O·F Storefronts and Building Facings have the sparkling, colorful glamour of a Hollywood premiere. They are the latest release from Libbey·Owens·Ford, long noted for achievements in modern-day glass, and now in storefront metal as well.

Included in the ensembles of glass and metal which comprise these modern fronts, are such indispensable L·O·F creations as:

Extrudalite—the new, decorative extruded metal, based upon an entirely new principle, which includes a patented, pressure-controlling, shock-absorbing metal sash. Vitrolux

—the exclusive L·O·F color-fused, tempered plate glass that introduces luminous color into storefront design. Vitrolite—colorful structural glass. Its use is now definitely broadened by almost unlimited combinations with Vitrolux and Extrudalite.

You Must Protect Their Eyes!

Why, Mr. Exhibitor? Because that's protecting the very thing you have for sale—entertainment, relaxation.

Eyestrain caused by an unsteady, flickering picture is the enemy of enjoyment. And enjoyment of today's screen attraction is the thing you are depending upon to bring patrons back to your theatre tomorrow.

That's why we say it will pay you to investigate Motiograph projection for your theatre. It offers eye protection features you will find in no other equipment.

The dissolving action of Motiograph's patented cylindrical shutter eliminates all trace of flicker. The design and precision of the time-tested movement give perfect steadiness to the picture.

These are just two of the features. Let your Motiograph dealer show you more. Let him show you how the honestly built mechanism... with its hardened and ground parts... maintains these high standards of performance year in and year out.

And finally let him show you how your theatre can have Motiograph projection for as little as $15 a week under the Deferred Payment Plan.

● The State theatre in Milwaukee, which has a front treated in porcelain enamel (installed by Porcelain Fronts, Inc.), with Electrolite marquee in same finish and carrying four-line Adler attraction boards. The box office is also of porcelain enamel metal, with chrome trim.

● An example of front modernization largely achieved by the installation of a marquee in one of the newer patterns. The marquee is an Artkraft unit type structure combining a curved vertical sign, with illumination in both lamps and neon.

of Old Theatres into New

● A striking transformation of an antiquated theatre, the former Harlem Grand in New York, the front and auditorium of which are shown before and after remodeling, which was planned by William I. Hohauser. The auditorium is finished in common plaster, except for murals on white velour hung over rock wool and flanked by damask. The color scheme is essentially buff, gold, red, coral and silver. The front was revised with porcelain enamel finish and a marquee having its soffit extending to entrance doors, with neon and reflector lamps. Program letters are Wagner silhouette.

● The front of the Downer theatre in Milwaukee, as recently remodeled. The entire front up to the level of the marquee was refinished in porcelain enamel, interrupted by display cases 15 feet wide and 4 feet high set flush. Theatre name signs on either end of the marquee have three strokes of neon. The marquee has splayed sides carrying Adler silhouette type attraction boards and trimmed in neon. Its soffit consists in mirrors with lamps set on 6-inch centers.

PLANNING THE THEATRE

A SERVICE DEPARTMENT DEALING WITH ARCHITECTURAL DESIGN AND MATERIALS, DECORATION AND FURNISHINGS

THE QUESTION:

WE ARE contemplating decorating our theatre and of course it will have to be done with acoustic material. The building is brick and tile, and the inside walls are plaster; ceiling is metal. However, we have acoustic felt and plaster on part of the interior, and this has become obsolete as far as decoration is concerned.

Our theatre is not ornate and serves a town of 2,000.

Is a floor built on the hyperbolic curve better than a straight slanted floor in a theatre 32 feet wide and 90 feet long from edge of stage to last row of seats? Length including stage is 120 feet.—S. M. A.

THE ANSWER:

THE TWO LEAST expensive methods of redecorating a theatre with acoustical materials is to use sound-absorbing tiles or boards, or to use a dyed wall fabric. If the walls are perfectly dry, these tiles or boards may be applied directly to wall surface with adhesive cement.

To make an interesting design, it may be well to use a pilaster effect, or a horizontal panel pattern in the various colors in which such materials may be obtained. With the use of a V-shaped plane, grooves may be cut so as to form an interesting pattern. Material of this class does not require decorating, hence the low cost. I advise you to leave a plaster wainscoting about 4' high.

The other method is to strip the walls with 1x3-inch beveled strips horizontally in 42-inch panels above wainscoting, place rockwool between the strips and cover them with an inexpensive fabric, such as waffle cloth. Cover tacks with narrow wood strips, which should be painted. Dye each panel in a different shade. The ceiling could be covered with decorative tiles or veneers on furring strips.

If you mean by a "hyperbolic curved" floor, one that has a graduated slope, the answer is yes. An auditorium floor is sloped to provide vision from each row as unobstructed as possible, and the floor should have a greater rate of incline at the rear than at the middle, while the extreme front portion (with a floor sloping in one direction only) should be level. This varying curve of the floor is determined by the sightlines of each row.

THE QUESTION:

I HAVE A lot 100x40 and wish to erect a small theatre with a store front. The cost of bare building when com-

ANSWERS TO INQUIRIES: One of the principal functions of this department is to answer queries pertaining to preliminary consideration in the planning of a new theatre or the remodeling of an existing one. All questions receive the personal attention of Peter M. Hulsken, A.I.A., contributing editor of this department and a practicing architect who long has specialized in theatre design. He will be glad to offer advice, suggestions and criticisms. Working plans, however, cannot be supplied. pleted must not exceed $6,000. It is a rural house and does not have to have the city house trimmings. The following things are what I need advice on.

Floor space needed from screen to back wall, to seat, as close as possible, 300 on main floor.

Give me a general idea of screen size, heights of ceiling, roof angle, main floor and balcony angle.

What kind of material should be used above the wainscoting and on the ceiling.—J. H. T.

THE ANSWER:

IN THE FIRST place, it will be impossible to build a theatre of your requirements for $6,000. Your sketch shows the location of the balcony to be above the projection room, which is very bad. This would make the auditorium ceiling entirely too high, and the vision from balcony to screen very poor. Why not place the projection room in the rear of the balcony.

The location of the toilet rooms is also very undesirable. Why not place them in back of store room? You did not mention the depth required for store room, but it seems to me that there will be more room for seats than necessary.

For space between screen and rear wall, figure from 3½ to 4'. The ceiling above the balcony will be at least 22' above the high point of the main floor.

The total slope of auditorium floor should be about 3'. For the balcony, it is better to step up each row of seats about 7 or 8", provided it is not located above projection room. The slope of the roof should be from ¼- to ½-inch per running foot.

The size of the screen depends on the width of the auditorium, and also the distance between the screen and last row. A screen width of about 14 feet would probably prove correct in your case.

I am afraid you would experience quite some trouble with acoustics if the balcony is glazed in. Also, both vision and sound volume would be adversely affected, making balcony seats highly undesirable.

The least expensive material for ceiling and wall treatment in your case would be tiles or veneers having a certain amount of sound-absorbing value as decorative effect. The ceiling tiles should be applied to a base of plasterboard.

THE QUESTION:

I INTEND to remodel my two stores into a theatre and I am confronted with several problems, as I have to do everything as cheaply as possible. The two stores have a brick wall between them which supports a dance floor and the roof. The roof is supported by posts. The ceilings are plastered with a tin ceiling over it. I intend to remove the tin ceilings. The ceiling is 14 feet high. There are full basements under the stores about 7 feet deep. The inside dimensions of the two stores will be 42 feet by 97 feet.

I want a small store in the front which, will leave me a 16-foot entrance to the theatre, and the lobby and foyer would be 23 feet long. I might omit the foyer, as this will be built in a town of 3,000. After I install my I-beams and remove my wall between the two stores, my ceiling will be too low. How can I gain any height in the auditorium? Would it be satisfactory to slope the floor in the foyer downward, or would it be better to make a few steps from the foyer to the lobby to gain some height?

I have been informed that a Carnegie beam is not as wide as an ordinary beam, and would you make a recommendation to use it? What would be the width of the I-beam? How many I-beams would you recommend for a distance of 74 feet, which will be the length of the auditorium?

The ceiling will have to be insulated so the noise from the dance hall could not be heard.

What size of a screen would you recommend? Would you recede the steel posts on the side into the wall which will carry the I-beams?—E. M.

THE ANSWER:

I AM AFRAID that you are up against a very expensive proposition. If I understand it correctly, the roof over the second floor is supported by columns resting on the brick wall, separating the two stores on the first floor. It seems to me that your problem is to remove the brick wall between the store rooms, then you will have to provide cross-beams supporting lateral beams, which will carry the floor joists of the dance hall, also the posts supporting the roof. It can be done, but it will be a costly operation, and I sincerely believe that it would be just as economical to remove the second floor joists and roof and reconstruct them as you would do in a new building. Furthermore, I doubt if the State authorities would allow a dance hall over a theatre which is of non-fireproof construction.

It may be well for you to give my suggestion serious consideration, since even if you are allowed to keep the dance hall on the second floor, you will have several beams in the ceiling, and furring the ceiling down to the bottom of the I-beams will make it entirely too low. As all the upper structure will have to be temporarily supported, which requires quite a large amount of lumber, and if the present joists are in good condition and may be reused again, I think you will save money by reconstructing the floors.

I am unable to give you information relative to the I-beams, since I do not know the exact loads which these beams are to carry.

If the present floor joists span the distance between walls in store rooms, the distance between the new beams in the auditorium will be about the same as the length of the present joists, provided you intend to use them again; however, the closer you can place these I-beams, the less depth they will require. For new floor construction with a depth of 74 feet, you will require three I-beams.

It will be far better to slope the floor in the foyer downward than to use steps, as at this point steps may be a source of damage suits. Find out if this slope is permissible. Make the foyer or crossover behind last row of seats at least 5-feet wide.

The distance from the low part of the auditorium floor, to the floor of the stage or screen platform, should be from 3 feet, 4 inches to 3½ feet. The floor slope should be 4 feet, minimum. If the old floor is of hardwood and in good condition, and also of suitable thickness, it can be retained.

The best seating arrangement for you is as follows: A center bank of twelve seats with aisle on each side, and two wall banks, each with four seats. The maximum seating capacity will be 420 seats.

It would be very difficult to insulate the dance floor so that no sound would penetrate from it to the auditorium. The joists should rest on spring clips, and the space between the joists should be filled with sound deadening materials. Acoustical plaster, while having good acoustical qualities, would not deaden sufficiently the noise and vibration from the dance floor.

A color scheme is a matter of taste as long as it does not interfere with vision of the picture. Your ceiling could be in ivory, and the wall in a buff with darker wainscoting. If acoustical plaster is used for ceiling and insulation of rear wall, it probably will not be necessary to treat side walls acoustically.

In place of steel posts to support I-beams, it may be just as well to cut 6x18-inch slots in the side walls, and build in reinforced concrete piers projecting about 6 feet beyond wall surface, because if steel is used, and it is recessed in the wall, concrete will have to be used anyway as a filler.

Your problem is really complex and it is absolutely essential that you engage the services of a competent architect.

The size of your screen will depend on the width of the auditorium and the distance from the screen to the last row of seats (that is, if you must have a certain number of rows). The distance between the screen and the first row is also a factor. The screen image should not be much more than the distance to the first row, and really not more than six times the distance to the last row.

Suggestions for Remodeling On the Small Theatre Budget

By PETER M. HULSKEN

MODERNIZING or replanning the interior of a small theatre so that it meets with some adequacy standards of theatre design prevalent today, has given the theatre architect a real problem. Fully 90% of the inquiries received by this department from theatre operators read along the following lines:

"I want to remodel my theatre. I want a very nice and modern auditorium, but as my financial resources are very limited, I want it as inexpensive as possible."

So the matter is squarely put up to the Architect to do almost the impossible. It obliges him to scan the market to find materials which are inexpensive and which require the least amount of skilled labor to be installed. But still these materials must be peculiarly suitable to theatres, durable, perhaps possess acoustical characteristics, and require the least amount of maintenance. There still remains this fact to be considered: There is such a thing as false economy. While in theatre parlance, the show is the thing, that does not mean that the theatre itself should be only four plain walls and a ceiling.

One other thing must be borne in mind, that a modern theatre does not have to be modernistic. I interpret "modernistic" as a conglomeration of various angles, shiny surfaces, metallic and otherwise, and a confusion of curves which are anything but restful to the eye. So at least the modernistic treatment often is in many classes of buildings. Unfortunately, the life of an interior design is short, in the case of a motion picture theatre more than in any other type of building. Let us consider, for instance, the last ten years. In the beginning of that period, the majority of theatres were designed in French, Italian and Spanish, and other styles belonging to the Renaissance period—even some of them in Gothic, confusing a house of entertainment with a house of worship. Then, all of a sudden, the "atmospheric" type of interior came into vogue—Blue skies, flickering stars, artificial birds, flowers, trees, statuary, lighted windows, etc., in fact, everything to compete with the performance on the screen.

Then came the Depression, and period and "atmospheric" styles quickly became obsolete. The theatre operator had to economize; modern forms, and the new materials, reduced the cost of finishing off a theatre in an interesting way. In the past it had not mattered how much he spent so long as his new theatre outdid prior ones.

The upkeep too was terrific. So he brought the problem to architect. The design had to be simpler. All unnecessary decorative motives had to be eliminated; and new materials, relatively inexpensive and requiring the least amount of upkeep, had to be discovered.

Significance of the New Materials

Fortunately, manufacturers were at that time experimenting with new materials of many kinds and purposes. The result was that materials such as acoustic tiles, sound-absorbing boards, wood-grained wall boards and wood veneers, architectural glass, phenolics, and many other materials were placed on the market. Many of these did not require plastered walls. Such developments have of course helped the operator of the small theatre, in neighborhoods and small towns, in his efforts to provide an attractive theatre at low cost.

Suggestions for the Small Theatre Budget

AS A BASIS for estimating the cost of such a theatre, we are really not justified in taking a figure less than $60 per seat, exclusive of equipment. The majority of small theatres having a seating capacity of from 400 to 700 seats, are generally one-floor houses, requiring no balcony. The majority of State building codes do not require that such buildings be of fire-proof construction; however, my advice is to make them fireproof. The increased cost is slight, and if upkeep and insurance rates are taken into consideration, this increase will be negligible. The foundation walls and auditorium floor should be concrete. The walls could be built out of cinder blocks, with an outside facing of hard-burned brick, hollow tile, or monolithic concrete, with light face brick for the front and returns.

Expensive materials and unnecessary ornamentation must be avoided in the small theatre auditorium. As the average width of small theatres is generally from 40 to 50', clerespan joists may be used for roof construction, eliminating structural steel for trusses or girders and reducing the cubical contents of the building. The roof slab can be made out of 3-inch concrete poured-on expanded metal lath, and the ceiling can be suspended metal lath and, say, acoustical plaster.

It is important to use good insulation for roof slab.

When sound-absorbing tiles are used for the ceiling finish, it is advisable to install them with adhesive cement to a base coat of plaster or plaster boards. Acoustical plaster may be procured in different color tones and does not require further decorative treatment. Different-colored shades of the plaster may be used to form a decorative design, as, for example, by the step-up method with either transverse or longitudinal planes, and a different shade for each plane. Do not use electric light fix-

Treating Auditorium Walls

The auditorium wall treatment should be so that all dominant lines are directed toward the proscenium arch. It is usually better for a small auditorium to use soothing soft colors that express quiet refinement and home-like leisure.

There are of course a number of distinctly different methods of treating the auditorium walls pleasingly without going beyond the small theatre budget. One method is the use of fabric. The fabric ordinarily should be backed with sound-absorbing material, like rock wool. If an unpatterned fabric is used, one may obtain a simple decorative scheme by dyeing it and dividing the wall area above the wainscoting in horizontal layers of alternate shades.

A pleasing effect may be obtained also by making the intermediate layers in half-widths. The plain fabric should be dyed in different shades, starting with the darkest shades immediately above the wainscoting and shading off to the lightest color near the ceiling. The intermediate, or smaller, layers may be in a figured fabric, like a brocade.

Walls of Tiles or Boards

Another suitable wall treatment may be obtained by using sound-absorbing tiles or boards. This kind of treatment is rather inexpensive since it not only saves plastering of walls, but eliminates decorating as well. A wainscoting should be plastered up to about 4 feet above the floor, or out built of cinder blocks properly laid up. A plaster wainscoting should be painted a dark color. If a standee railing is to be used, the same treatment of walls may be carried out in the foyer.

Interesting indirect light effects inexpensive enough for small theatres may be obtained by the use of cut-out wall panels. Special care must be taken, of course, in the selection of carpets, drapes and seat coverings, so that the entire ensemble will be harmonious. And in this connection it might be well to remember that no longer is it necessary to resort to all the colors of the rainbow to achieve a definitely theatrical effect. A judicious selection of three colors can give the best results.

The Lobby and Front

The lobby is essentially a place of passage, though occasionally a place where patrons wait until seats are available. But in general, its treatment is indicated by its function as a means of ingress, and egress, and by its value as a location for advertising. Therefore provide along side walls and over doors, shadow boxes that are brilliantly lighted. As there is very little wall space left, the lower part of these walls may be faced with structural glass, Formica, macotta, marlite, or some other hard-surfaced material. Because of the small amount of wall area to be covered, the cost of such interestingly decorative materials will be negligible. Be sure to recess any radiator in the lobby.

For the lobby ceiling, indirect lighting fixtures are recommended so as not to conflict with the shadow boxes. A practical treatment of the lobby floor is to use rubber matting laid in recessed panels, with tile or terrazo borders. These mats are easily cleaned, and aid in keeping the theatre carpeting clean.

At the front of the theatre, the marquee is the most important feature. It should harmonize as much as possible with the entire facade of the building. Provide as many illuminated poster cabinets as possible. There are many new kinds of all-aluminum frames on the market, and these I recommend because the life of a wood poster cabinet placed outdoors is not very long. The design of these frames should be very simple so as not to compete with the posters.

The walls of the theatre front, and under the marquee may be finished very attractively as well as economically in structural glass, Formica, macotta, marlite or porcelain enamel; these are all materials which require the minimum of upkeep.

Above all, it should be remembered that a theatre front needs light, good light, and plenty of it. Do not economize on this under any circumstances. Have as much light (ordinarily lamps are preferable here) as possible at the soffit of the marquee, and use highly legible changeable letters for the attraction boards.

This material can be installed over any firm surface, such as plaster, by using a

Snappy Doors AND LOBBY WALL COVERING

The architects who specialize on theatres know that some highly modern and theatrical doors are possible in Formica, just as subdued and inconspicuous effects may also be obtained.

The material has been extremely popular for theatre doors and for lobby wall covering in theatres, and several of the leading chains are using it nearly everywhere they modernize. The widest range of colors with inlays in one color over another, or in metal, make striking effects possible.

And Formica stands the gaff. It takes hard wear and is so inert chemically that it has a stout resistance to staining or discoloration of any kind. Get the facts before you specify doors or wall covering for public places.

POLYTECT PAINT

POLYTECT is a specialty paint for simple or ornamental wall decoration in textured or plain finishes, either dull or glossy. Polytect processes feature various methods of metallizing either highlights of textured patterns, or entire surfaces.

Polytect is a white powder which is mixed with water and dry colors and may be applied with a brush or spray gun, and textured with simple tools. One coat application, usually without priming, produces a strong surface which dries and hardens without sharp teeth in from five to ten hours. It adheres to most any solid base, such as plaster, cement, wood, metal and wall boards. The thickness is from 1/64 to 1/32-inch.

Besides being applicable to the walls of theatre vestibules, foyers and lounges, and also to some areas of the auditorium (the areas and manner of treatment being selected with consideration of light reflection), Polytect paint can also be used to finish display frames and mouldings.

This material is manufactured by the American Polytect Corporation.

Acoustic Treatment as a Function Of Auditorium Design and Decoration

● Offering practical suggestions for effecting those necessary adjustments of good sound and good appearance in designing and restyling auditoriums

By C. C. POTWIN

TODAY MUCH emphasis is being placed on function in its relationship to architecture. Functionalism means, essentially, that each element of a design shall serve a utilitarian purpose, which purpose will ultimately be expressed in the forms of the building. Function does not suggest purely ornamental architecture. Its typically simple, yet individualistic style, enhanced by new materials as well as by new and unique methods of lighting and decoration, speaks broadly of purpose and achievement in the smallest detail of an architectural form.

Functionalism, as applied to the design of the motion picture theatre, is basically a technique of "building around" the engineering requirements—not the obsolete practice of attempting to fit these requirements into a predetermined plan. Through the efforts of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers and this publication, a much closer coordination has been achieved between the engineering requirements for correct vision, effective projection, and the original design. However, an outstanding lack of such coordination between the original design and acoustics, continues to predominate in the theatre field. Every exhibitor and architect will agree that good hearing conditions are of equal importance with vision and projection. Consequently, acoustics cannot be given only secondary consideration; it must take its place with the other essential parts of a truly functional plan.

If a design is to be acoustically functional, the size of the theatre, its proportions, and the relationship of wall and ceiling surfaces to the source of sound—all principles which have been discussed at some length in earlier articles—must be considered and controlled, as far as possible, in the original planning. Even today a quite common practice is to overlook these important factors in their relationship to acoustics, and to establish the final design and decorative scheme with the intention of relying solely on sound absorbing materials to correct specific acoustic faults. This procedure does not make for functional, economical, nor practical acoustic planning.

Sound Control in Design and Decoration

IN APPROACHING the problem of efficient sound control in design and decoration, the exhibitor and architect must bear in mind that:

(1) As the size or volume per seat of the auditorium proper is increased, in a given design, so must the quantity of acoustical material be increased to correctly reduce the reverberation time;

(2) As the proportions of the auditorium and the shape of surfaces deviate from the best acoustic principles of design, so must the efficiency and often the quantity of acoustic material be increased to offset objectionable sound reflections and other types of interference resulting from these defects; and

(3) As the requisites of a predetermined decorative scheme depart from the finishes and surface textures inherent in acoustic materials, so will the adaptation of these materials to the theatre interior become more and more difficult.

If the fundamental principles of sound control are embodied correctly in the original design, the theatre may be planned for excellent hearing conditions in such a manner that acoustic materials may be eliminated in some cases or, in other cases, confined to a very small portion of the total surface of the auditorium. When this is accomplished in the true sense of functional planning, it assures the architect or the decorator practically unlimited freedom in establishing the final decoration.

Now the questions arise, "How is this highly desirable result to be achieved successfully in the design of a new theatre?" and, "How shall acoustics be most effectively combined with decoration in theatre modernization?"

Design Factors in Sound Control

First, and fundamentally in a new design, we must maintain the minimum practical volume per seat; or in other words, provide for as many seats on a well-proportioned floor plan as local fire regulations and other determining limitations will permit. Early consideration should be given to the acoustic efficiency of the seats, because they must furnish the major part of the "fixed" absorption in the auditorium.

Second, we must establish the ceiling height in its most practical and best acoustical ratio, relative to the dimensions of the floor plan, with full consideration given to the best sight lines and most effective angles of projection. Excessive ceiling heights are not uncommon in present-day designs and frequently contribute to a large volume per seat, and, ultimately, to a long time of reverberation in the auditorium. This fact should not be misconstrued as meaning that ceiling heights can be lowered at will or without discrimination, because a ceiling height which is too low in its relation to the dimensions of the floor plan is also undesirable and is often detrimental to the best distribution of sound energy. Adherence, insofar as practicable, to the best ratio of proportions [These were discussed in the article by Mr. Potwin in the May 29, 1937 issue of BETTER THEATRES—THE EDITOR.] will usually assure a fundamental outline and a size limitation which meets the first requirement for controlling the time of reverberation and the distribution of sound energy in an auditorium.

The shape of wall and ceiling surfaces in their relation to the source of sound and to the floor plan, is the next important element to be considered in basic design. This phase of functional acoustic planning is, in effect, the process of designing and arranging surface contours so as to control the destination of sound reflections. Correctly applied, it promotes the efficient control of sound in the auditorium without the need for excessive quantities of sound-absorbing materials to accomplish the same result.

Architecturally, some very interesting and altogether unique effects are to be derived from shaping and arranging wall and ceiling surfaces to make a new design acoustically functional. Surfaces may not only be of angled or broken contour, to diffuse the sound, but they may also be tilted or splayed to direct sound reflections into absorbent areas. Angular contours or segmental tilts, designed acoustically and used in conjunction with indirect or variable intensity lighting, offer a style of architectural treatment which (a) denotes function, and (b) lends to the interior that aesthetic quality so necessary in the more intimate design.

This is one vital phase of theatre acoustics to which, in the author's opinion, greater thought and consideration should be given in future planning. Certainly it is one of the basic elements of economical and practical sound control, and if it is handled successfully, the question of decoration will, for the most part, take care of itself.

Adjusting Acoustics and Decoration in Remodeling

WHERE IT IS necessary to rely principally upon acoustic materials to overcome reverberation and sound reflections (and this is certainly true in the renovation of existing theatres where the basic design features are not within the limits of control), the textures and surface finishes of acoustic materials must be carefully studied in planning the decoration for wall and ceiling surfaces.

In other words, let us not conceive a decorative scheme in which a certain portion of the wall or ceiling surfaces is arbitrarily allotted to acoustic material. Rather, let us first select a material which meets the acoustic requirements and then blend it into a pleasing decorative scheme. If this is to be done with complete success, the exhibitor and the architect will agree that acoustics must form a definite part of their original decision on surface decoration. Nothing is quite so objectionable in a well-conceived interior as areas of acoustic material which in no way harmonize with or preserve the continuity of the decorative scheme.

Making acoustics and decoration coordinate to the fullest possible extent is not an entirely simple process. It requires creative thought and planning and, above all else, a knowledge of materials and of their sound-absorbing efficiency, their limitations with respect to surface decoration and maintenance, and architectural experience in applying them successfully.

Considerations in Selecting Materials

First, we must determine the quantity of sound absorption required as well as the co-efficients needed in the materials to be used for treatment of specific wall or ceiling areas in the auditorium.

Second, we must (a) select the particular materials which fulfill these requirements, (b) study the color, texture, form, and other characteristics of each of these materials, and how they may be used to the best advantage architecturally, and (c) fix the decorative scheme only after we have arrived at a plan which is the most pleasing and most practical from all standpoints. Only in this way will we arrive at truly functional planning in theatre decoration.

As long as the more common practice of "fitting an acoustic material to a predetermined plan" persists, just that long will there be a possibility of conflict between acoustics and decoration. Needless to say, such a conflict frequently leads to major compromises, and these compromises may ultimately result in sacrifices both in sound quality and in appearance.

One fact regarding the cost of acoustic materials should be emphasized; namely, that we usually get no more sound absorption than we pay for in materials. It so happens that most of the efficient materials are more costly, either in themselves or in their method of application, than those materials having only moderate sound absorption values. In the remodeling of theatres, the more expensive materials are often needed in order to reduce excessive reverberation and objectionable sound reflections. In new design, however, where the elements of size and shape can be controlled, it is axiomatic that major savings can be realized through the reductions effected in the quantity and the efficiency of acoustic materials required.

Today every exhibitor wants the best possible hearing conditions in his theatre. At the same time, he wants sound efficiency to blend with the other factors that lend a pleasing sense of intimacy to a well-conceived interior. The most practical and economical solution to this problem lies in making acoustics a function of design and decoration. Every experienced acoustician recognizes the present need for close collaboration in working out these problems and is anxious to cooperate with the exhibitor and the architect to achieve the highly successful result which inevitably follows functional acoustic planning.

The author of this article, G. C. Potwin, has been associated with theatre acoustics engineering since the introduction of sound and is a member of the staff of the acoustic consulting department of Erpi. He discussed modern theatre acoustics problems comprehensively in a series in Better Theatres last year.

From a Candle-Flame to the High-Intensity Arcs of Today

● Increased pictorial values, the new significance of the small theatre, color—these have laid fresh stress upon the importance of the projection light source, and have made timely this brief history

THE ILLUSION of the motion picture performance may be so effective at last that even theatre people themselves forget that it is, after all, sheer light. One may include the music and voice, too, since the sound is put on and taken off the film as light. It is in the projected light, however, that the motion picture, as a medium of dramatic action, has its only real physical substance.

In projected light, of course, the cinema had its origin—and what an humble one it was! But first let us peer beyond those interesting, if crude, beginnings to those still more distant days when the stereopticon-projected picture was the only screen image, and its light source was the flame of a wax candle. With highly transparent slides having a mask almost 4 inches square, a lens of wide diameter and short focal length, and a perfectly dark room, a clear, well defined image was obtainable. Yet what an advance was thought to have come with the invention of a kerosene lamp having four wide wicks, each independently adjustable! This contrivance is illustrated in an accompanying drawing (Figure 1), in which attention is called to the "lamphouse."

Following this, further efforts to increase projection light brilliance came in fairly rapid succession. A few that attained some results in practical work are represented in Figure 2, in which A is a welsback mantel lamp, B the same type with mantel inverted, and C the double-jet acetylene lamp with a concave mirror. However, it was not until what was known as the "limelight" appeared that any real brilliance was attained.

This form of light is interesting. Its base was a mixture of oxygen and hydrogen gas, which might be purchased from dealers therein, or manufactured by the "operator" on the spot, apparatus for such manufacture being available. In Figure 3 are shown, first, an apparatus for making the gas, with the lamp above; then the mixing nozzle; and next the lamp itself. Hydrogen passed through H, and oxygen through O, into the mixing chamber. At the right, N is the nozzle (usually somewhat curved rather than as shown), L the lime holder, and S the knob by means of which the lime might be rotated, raised or lowered.

and lighted, then the hydrogen was released and the mixture adjusted until the spot upon the lime, which the flame impacted, was brought to a maximum brilliance. But there were many objections to this light source. It was troublesome to make the gas and very expensive to procure it in tanks, especially for use in outlying sections. Also, limes would crack or break off. After a short space of operation, a "pit" was burned in the lime, whereupon the lime would have to be rotated until the flame contacted a new spot. This of course kept the temper of the "operator" almost as high as that of the light spot on the lime.

Light Sources for The Motion Picture

AND NOW we come to the advent of the motion picture, which, because of its relatively small aperture and the required rotating shutter, each of which took heavy toll of light available to the stereopticon screen, demanded the newly invented electric arc as its light source. But in that day the arc light had been employed almost exclusively for street lighting, in which hard and soft spots, sputtering, poor light tone, etc., made little difference.

Old-time projectionists will remember the heart-breaking struggles endured in attempting to induce carbons and lamps of those days to deliver at least some semblance of decent screen illumination. Impurities, hard and soft spots in the carbons, with sections of the carbon core A.W.O.L., and weak, crude lamps with very poor insulation were a few of the troubles. (Oh, it was a merry life, as can be personally testified by the writer, whose first attempt at "operating" was in the fall of 1904). Carbon manufacturers were still skeptical as to the performance of the motion picture as a popular form of amusement, hence not at all eager to embark upon expensive experimentation in an endeavor to eradicate the faults or to improve the "harsh" light tone. Once started, however, the carbon manufacturer soon worked wonders increasing the amount of research devoted to the new art.

Up to about 1911 few theatres ventured to use above 25 amperes d.c., or 40 amperes a.c. for motion picture projection, most of them fearing to increase fire hazard.

Difficulties with the Early Arc

In the earlier days, "operators" almost invariably used cored carbons $\frac{5}{8}$ -inch in diameter for both upper and lower when using a.c., usually substituting a solid carbon of somewhat less diameter below for d.c. Theatre screens ranged between 10 and 18 feet in width, the latter being considered maximum. Carbon manufacturers very soon found the diameter of the negative carbon for d.c. well deserving of expert attention. With positive and negative of equal, or even close to equal, diameter, it was found impossible to hold the arc continuously to one spot in the crater floor.

The early lamps were extremely crude and very weak. Their insulation was very poor. In one Edison lamp along about 1904-5, carbon feed was accomplished by moving a metal handle, which was not even equipped with an insulating knob at its end, up and down the same as the handle of an old-fashioned water pump. One of the first attempts to overcome the trouble, enabling projectionists to hold the arc in place, came in 1915, with the introduction of a negative carbon having a long, tapered end. This improved matters, but did not wholly meet the situation. A further study developed the fact that a metal coating applied to a carbon of very small diameter gave desired steadiness to the d.c. arc. This carbon was marketed as the "Silver Tip" negative carbon, a National Carbon Company product that gave excellent results until later superseded by the "Orotip." We may credit these two carbons as having made marked improvement in the d.c. projection arcs then in use.

An Improved A.C. Arc

Concurrently, work was being carried forward in carbon manufacture looking to improvement in a.c. projection light sources. Current requirements were increasing, and with carbons then available for a.c., the arc was not at all satisfactory. It was unsteady and noisy; the quality of light produced was unsatisfactory. Experimentation finally disclosed that the addition of certain substances classed as "rare earth elements" into the carbon core not only tended to steady the arc, but also to eliminate its noise. In addition to bringing about those highly desirable improvements, these materials added color and luminosity to the arc, with the result that the light emitted was pure white in color. This improvement was introduced in 1917, the carbons appearing under the name of "National White Flame A.C.," and being available in capacities up to 100 amperes.

The White-Light, High-Intensity Arc

THE DEVELOPMENTS cited above applied to the old-time straight arcs and met the demand quite well for a time, but motion picture technology generally continued to advance. From 1918 to 1925 there were very great improvements in production. Moreover, many new, much larger theatres were built. The "deluxe" theatre came into being. Screen dimensions increased, which created demand for more powerful light sources, approaching, indeed, the light-producing capacity of the searchlight. It was then that the high intensity arc, using relatively small-diameter positive carbons, and small-diameter negatives, was made available for the projection of motion pictures, thus meeting the requirements of theatres using large screens. This powerful light source is still widely used today.

But better quality of light as well as sufficient intensity remained the goal, and presently the motion picture projection arc was given the High-Intensity White Flame Positive Carbon, in which a wholly new principle was applied. It had a flame-supporting element embedded in its core which affected the quality of light emitted, while it operated at current density from three to four times that used by earlier, low-intensity carbons. Carbons of this type burn with a deep, cup-like crater, instead of with the wide, shallow crater of low-intensity carbons, which characteristic produces the "high-intensity" effect. This effect may be considered as in part due to a somewhat higher crater temperature, but the major effect is produced by particles of light-giving rare earth materials contained in the deep crater, the light emanating from the core materials. (While this explanation is not precisely in accord with physical facts, it aids one in visualizing the reasons for high-intensity brilliance.) Unquestionably the whole development process of the high-intensity arc served to reduce carbon diameters, both positive and negative; greatly improved methods of operation, and helped to keep arc mechanisms from being enlarged to impracticable size.

The Problem of the Small Theatre

But one thing leads to another. Improved screen lighting brought about by high-intensity in the larger theatres emphasized the need for better illumination of screens in smaller theatres. In fact, during 1924 and 1925, many small theatres

ANY theatre can now have high intensity projection and picture quality on the screen equal to that of the big de luxe houses. In fact, 4,000 theatres have installed high intensity in the past three years... and more are doing so every day. Don't believe the cost of high intensity projection is prohibitive for Peerless Magnarc Lamps produce 200 to 300 per cent more light at the same current cost of low intensity lamps.

Another powerful factor in the progress of high intensity projection is the need of intense, snow-white light for natural color pictures.

Peerless Magnarc Lamps solve the problem of modern, economical, high intensity projection for any theatre. Low current cost, high light output, low cost of operation, plus advanced design which will not be superseded for years to come — these are the reasons why the Peerless Magnarc Lamp outsells all other makes two to one. "It's the finest arc lamp ever built."

New Model Projector Stressing Safety and Easy Maintenance

- An examination, largely pictorial, of the new Simplex E-7 projection mechanism which has just been introduced to the trade

Figure 1. Interlocked front and rear shutters operate simultaneously, each acting on its own half of the light beam. Those periods of partial screen illumination during which light is either being admitted or being cut off, are thus shortened, increasing the total illumination and enhancing the clarity of the image.

Figure 2. A, free-falling disc fire shutter. B, automatic fire shutter trip, operated by piled-up film. C, C, vanes drawing a powerful current of air from the front of the projection room, past the aperture, which thus remains cool to the touch at all times. D, reservoir of automatic oiling system. E, pump lever of automatic oiling system, depression of which provides forced lubrication to all bearings. F, exceptionally long pressure pad and intermittent sprocket shoe combination increases steadiness of image. G, G, thumb-screws, removal of which permits gate to be drawn out of the mechanism for cleaning or adjustments. H, H, machine screws, removal of which permits film trap to be drawn out of mechanism for cleaning or adjustment. I, framing lamp, illuminating interior of mechanism. J, adjusting and locking screws by which pressure pad tension can be changed during operation to compensate for worn or oily film or sections of film. (See Fig. 6.) K, K, K, K, strippers ride on sprocket hubs and extend to top and bottom of mechanism frame, are proof against lifting or "wrap-around."

Figure 3. Framing light in spot sight box is automatically lit and lowered behind the aperture by operation of the fire shutter lift lever. The direct illumination provided makes accurate framing possible with all prints, however dark, at the time the film is threaded.

Figure 6. A,A,A, oil tubing of automatic lubricating system. B, oil metering and filtering unit of automatic lubricating system supplying oil to a bearing. The filter in this unit receives only lubricant that has passed through the main filter in the reservoir, designated as D in Fig 2. C, automatic lubricating system distributing unit. D,D, oversize main and intermediate gears turn on stationary studs, placing the pressure of operation at the gear itself, eliminating wear and need for ultimate rebushing at the main frame casting. E,E, oblique drive shaft. F, intermittent flywheel. G,G, intermittent flywheel clamping screws, facilitating replacement of the intermittent movement which can be done without taking off any other gear and without taking off flywheel or any other part of any sound head. H, housing in which shutter synchronizing spring is located, at a point where its tension will compensate for wear in the synchronizing device and prevent development of travel ghost after long use. I, framing lamp switch.

Figure 7. Gate tension is set to suit individual requirements by A, locked by B. Gate wobble and consequent picture unsteadiness, resulting from long wear, are eliminated by these facilities and by the flat-sided construction of the gate guide bar upon which they act.

Figure 8. A, Oil hole in side of cam, out of which oil is forced under pressure by the intermittent action, forming a cushion of lubricant between cam and star. This cushion minimizes the shock of intermittent action, permits closer tolerances between the parts, provides smoother operation and longer life. B,C, air vent and shaft. When the oil level within the movement casing reaches the bottom. C, an air-lock prevents over-oiling.

COMMENT ON PROJECTION AFFAIRS and answers to inquiries . . .

By F. H. RICHARDSON

THE INADEQUACY OF OUR PROJECTION LICENSE LAWS

SOME MAY question my right to advise law makers, but when lack of intelligent action by them does serious damage to projection of motion pictures, I don't care Adam who questions—I just get out my "adviser" and put it to work.

During the early years through which the motion picture was being developed, the performance was short, hence faults in the screen image did not serious damage to the eyesight of theatre patrons. Human eyes may endure abuse for a short space of time without danger of permanent injury. Today, however, shows last from two and a half hours to three hours or even longer. During such a period of time the eyes of patrons are fixed upon the screen image, often with glare spots of light outside the screen intruding, which makes for eye strain; often with screen illumination too low or too high, which permits no ease of vision; often with slight travel ghost, which strains the eyes; and often with imperfect definition, which is extremely hard on the eyes. Most of these faults can be avoided by skill and conscientiousness in projection.

In the early days admission to motion picture theatres was almost universally 5c or a dime. Not a great deal was expected by the patrons. Equipment was relatively crude. The projectionist able to keep some sort of a picture on the screen continuously was regarded as sufficiently competent. However, as the years rolled by disastrous film fires were traced to lack of competence on the part of the projectionist in charge, which served to focus public attention on dangers in projection and compelled law makers to take action. As a consequence, many cities and a few states enacted laws requiring that projectionists be examined, and if found competent, be licensed. That seemed very fine, but the fly in that plate of butter was the fact that in all cases early laws based "competence" wholly upon ability either to prevent film fires, or to keep them from being disastrous. In some cases, competence is still legally measured only by considerations of fire hazard.

In the great State of New York, for example, the law stipulates that all cities of the first class shall subject projectionists to a "practical" examination, and license only those found competent. Now just what shall be considered a "practical" examination? There is no stipulation as to the competence of the examiner himself. He may understand projection and be able to give an examination of value. He may, with entire legality, be merely some local politician. His "practical" may have value; it may not, and in very many cases, where some political higher-up has requested "leniency" for some constituent, it has amounted to nothing at all.

But aside from all this it might be asked: If it be unsafe for an incompetent man to project motion pictures in a first class city, by just what line of reasoning is it not equally unsafe for an incompetent man to project them in a second-class city, a town or a village?

If legislatures wish to license projectionists, if they deem such a protection to the public advisable or necessary, why not first look carefully into the matter, learn what protection is needed and apply that protection to all citizens of the state. And why confine protection to that against fire? The fact is, there are two major elements of danger, fire and eye strain, with death from a projection room fire extremely unlikely, whereas unnecessary eye strain is with us always unless the projectionist be truly competent.

First of all, examinations should be in direct charge of some person well acquainted with projection equipment and practice—merely being an electrician is wholly insufficient. Also, as some of the states, and I believe all Canadian provinces, have done, change the title from "License to Operate Motion Picture Apparatus" to "License to Project Motion Pictures," which includes the whole function of the projectionist. The law should also stipulate that the examination cover current electricity, magnetic action, optics, mechanics, acoustics and safety in suitable detail.

THE MODERN WAY OF PRINTING POSITIVES

RECENTLY the East Coast Section of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers visited the laboratories of the Consolidated Film Industries, Inc., at Fort Lee, N. J. There were about 100 members, conducted through the huge

A new English projection room—that of the State theatre in London, owned and operated by Gaumont British, and one of the largest, if not the largest, theatre in Europe, with a seating capacity of 4,000. The projectors are of Gaumont British manufacture, equipped with Brenkert high-intensity lamps. The projection room also has one Brenograph effect projector.

plant in groups of fifteen. The plant receives negatives from West Coast studios and other places, as well as from foreign countries, for printing. There are approximately 150 printers.

The laboratories also make a vast number of still prints, both plain and colored, for window and lobby display posters. We were shown one still printer than can produce 20,000 prints 8x10 inches in size every eight hours.

But it is the process of printing motion picture positives that, in its modern form, is really marvelous, especially when you consider that continuously, through the 24 hours of each day, film passes into the developer and out of the dryer to be wound upon a reel as a finished print. Day after day film runs through and, unless something goes wrong, it does so with never a stop.

A roll of printed positive stock is placed in position and attached to the tail end of the one being developed. Just ahead of this reel the film runs up and down over rollers, perhaps ten times. On a horizontal bar overhead is a row of rollers. Some 8 feet below is another. It requires perhaps 100 feet of film to thread this contrivance. This upper bar is held up by a counterbalancing element against the tension of which it may move down. The film on this contrivance is called "slack film." When the roll of film under process is finished, its end is seized, and the pull of the film causes the upper bar to lower, thus supplying about 100 feet of film to the developing tank while a splice is being made, upon completion of which the film is released, whereupon up goes the bar, restoring the full quota of slack film to enable making the next splice.

At the end of the slack frame, the film is led into a developing tank where it is, by suitable deeply flanged rollers, led up and down approximately 80 times (40 up, 40 down) through the tank, which is 8 feet deep. The strength of the developer is constantly under test, with replenishment calculated to maintain constant strength.

From the developing tank the film is run through an opening in the wall into a second room and there into hypo tanks, through which it is made to pass approximately 60 times in the manner before described. Then through another wall opening it goes to the washroom and its tanks, where it passes through water about 100 times. The drying room comes next, from which the film emerges sufficiently devoid of moisture to be wound upon a reel as a finished positive print.

NOTING SOME FEATURES OF A NEW PROJECTOR

A BASIS FOR BETTER PROJECTION

No matter how modern your projection room is, no matter how costly the equipment it contains, the picture the audience sees on the screen is no better than the projection lens it must pass through.

That is why so many projectionists recommend Super-Cinephor projection lenses and why so many managers insist upon them. They are the first anastigmatic projection lenses. They offer the maximum in reserve covering power, critical definition, flatness of field, color correction and increased brilliance.

The increased box-office revenue they bring make Super-Cinephors far from costly—"One new patron a day will pay for a Super-Cinephor in a year."

announcement of new equipment developed by Mr. Hines' organization, in particular, a new model Simplex projector, called the "E-7." Luncheon over, the assemblage repaired to the International Projector Corporation factory (led by our old friend P. A. McGuire), Herbert Griffin, vice president and head of engineering, explained the new mechanism. And right here I cannot refrain from citing two features on which I have been insisting for years. Not only are the tension pads made much longer, but tension adjustment is provided. The lengthening of shoe contact with the film will, of course, serve to reduce required tension pressure per unit area of shoe contacting the film; this in turn reducing liability of emulsion deposits upon the shoe face. My readers will recall how long I have belloved for some such provisions in projector mechanism.

The fire shutter governor has been changed so that users of the older Simplex will need an introduction to it. It is of the gyroscopic type, consisting of a heavy steel ring about $2\frac{1}{2}$ inches in diameter, which, when not in operation, lays in an oblique position with relation to the rotating shutter shaft upon which it is mounted. As speed increases, gyroscopic action causes this ring to take position at right angles to the shutter shaft, which action, through a linking unit, raises the fire shutter. Incidentally, the shutter does not ride in tracks as heretofore, but is free in all directions as to preclude "sticking."

By means of a new synchronizing yoke eliminating all end play or possibility of back-lash between the shutter driving gear and its driving member, the rotating shutter is held constantly in retard so as to prevent creation of intermittent travel ghost when parts become slightly worn. This retard action is aided by action of the air upon ventilating vanes attached to the rear shutter.

There are a number of other features with which I am especially pleased because I think they represent an attempt to get rid of, or at least check, operating conditions which I have long pointed to as menaces to good projection. For example, the lubrication provisions directly attack the problem of oil on film. However, it is not my intention to describe the new Simplex E-7, since it is comprehensively pictured and described elsewhere in this issue.

COPPER-RING GLASS REFLECTORS EXAMINED

RESPONDING to an invitation, I recently headed my gasoline cart over to Brooklyn to inspect copper-ring glass reflectors now being marketed by Glass Laboratories of that borough. I found Mr. Abraham Sholop, manager, a most courteous gentleman, who was very proud to place these reflectors before us for inspection.

These reflectors are of unground pressed type fully tested for accuracy of curvature before silvering. They are made in diameters applicable to all existing projection lamps, up to 14 inches.

of improved design were constructed. These theatres, while not as pretentious as the "deluxe" houses, nevertheless desired to provide visual and acoustic entertainment in no way inferior to that supplied by the larger theatres. For them a new type of low-intensity d.c. arc, known as the "Reflector Arc," was developed. Instead of the small-diameter condenser lens, these lamps either did away with the condenser, collecting and converging the light by means of a concave mirror located just behind the arc; or they used such a reflector in conjunction with a large-diameter, thin, converging lens some distance in front of it. Special types of cored and solid carbons were developed for such lamps, the current range being from as low as 10 to a maximum of 42 amperes.

From 1926 to 1928, as sound pictures became established, elevating the motion picture yet further as a means of dramatic expression and accordingly affecting production technique, with denser films being one consequence, theatres generally demanded still brighter screen illumination. High-intensity arcs were able to take care of the larger theatres within limits of operating expense they were able to bear. But high-intensity was too expensive for the medium-sized and small houses, which situation brought about development of a type of lamp in which the high-intensity arc of lower amperage requirements and the reflector were combined. This provided a light source that was sufficiently powerful for medium-sized and small theatres and within limits of their expense budget, while at the same time providing a white light. This arc was the "hi-lo."

The introduction of colored pictures helped to bring the next advance, but also encouraging experimentation was the growth in the number of neighborhood and small town theatres. Existing high-intensity arcs filled the bill for the large houses, but they required amperages too high for the smaller theatres. A simplified type of arc approaching high-intensity in the production of white light was seen to be needed.

The Low-Voltage H.I. Arc Arrives

The development proceeding from this need is not, strictly speaking, the latest, but it unquestionably is the newest advance in the projection light source broadly affecting the art of the motion picture. Introduced in 1933, the copper-coated carbon with a core of rare-earth elements was first regarded particularly as a means of producing a white projection light of suitable intensity with alternating current. All of this is, of course, of too recent date to warrant recounting here. It led to the application of copper-coated, rare-earth carbons, with non-rotating positive, to a projection arc employing direct current, and burning the same type of crater as that of regular high-intensity, but at a much lower voltage relative to amperage, thereby achieving white-light high-intensity illumination at reduced current cost.

Early in 1936 a so-called "super-high-intensity" arc became available through the introduction of a 13.6-mm. National carbon having a capacity up to 180 amperes, with uniform distribution of brilliancy over the entire face of the crater, meeting today's illumination demands.

But it is the low-voltage high-intensity projection arc—commonly referred to by the coined name "suprex" given it upon its introduction—which has supplied the occasion for this brief history, and which brings these reminiscences, beginning with a candle flame, most significantly to a close. For the motion picture, having attained a high position among the theatre arts in large "downtown deluxe" theatres of metropolitan centers, maintains that position today in the smaller theatres which have brought "deluxe" exhibition facilities to the neighborhood and little town. Be the theatre large or small, the motion picture today is properly projected only with white, high-intensity light.—F. H. Richardson.

[Grateful acknowledgement is hereby made of data in this article which has been supplied by the National Carbon Company through Mr. E. R. Geib, manager of that firm's arc department.—F. H. R.]

Thorough Planning: The Basis Of Economical Theatre Remodeling

● Not only be sure you're right before going ahead, but allow for potential job conditions. Here are important considerations in such a policy

REMODELING IS one of those words frequently used to explain or describe most any changes done in a theatre from a repaint job to almost complete reconstruction. The word itself is vague, and its use is still more vague. Correctly, the word means to reconstruct, so in a proper sense, a job of remodeling is a reconstruction job.

The accompanying pictures illustrate what has been regarded as a very satisfactory remodeling job. They represent the conversion or reconstruction of an old three-storey store building into a modern-style theatre. This job presented problems of engineering and of architectural design created by a limited budget. I point this out because some might think that costs had not been a serious consideration. The cost of remodeling is always a most important consideration, since remodeling costs are generally considered a capital investment.

Undoubtedly the most important phase of remodeling is planning. It usually takes equally as much thought to lay out a remodeling job as it does to design a new structure. The work of making the drawings and details are more laborious because they must at many points tie into old construction, which may present conditions difficult to meet.

Careful Planning Saves Money

When plans are not carefully prepared and all drawings made as clear and accurate as possible so that the least amount of job conditions confront the contractor, the theatre owner pays a substantial premium, because the contractor cannot afford to take the chance of uncovering conditions which will run his costs above his estimates and thereby lose money on the job.

Theatre men seem to make too many decisions based upon an architect's renderings indicating the finished job. Such drawings in color, neatly mounted, are very attractive and impressive, but they seldom if ever convey a really true picture of the final result. No inference is intended here that such deception is intended by the architect, because I am very sure that such intent does not exist. It is just that so few men really can visualize the finished job from architectural plan drawings that the architect is forced to resort to sketches to convey his ideas.

Allowance for Contingencies

Many times I have talked to theatre men who have done very satisfactory remodeling and who have not used a general contractor

The front of the Rex theater in Pensacola, Fla. (right), referred to by Mr. Knight in the accompanying article. The old commercial building in which it was built is pictured above. The new front is finished in J-M Flexboard with Vitrolite and porcelain enamel trim, and louvred sheet metal panels over the existing windows. The color scheme is red and white, which is carried out also in the marquee, built by Textile with sides entirely consisting in attraction boards.

Interior views of the Rex theatre, in Pensacola, Fla. The lobby has walls of cream wallboard and plaster ceiling with neon trough. The auditorium is finished entirely in Temloc wood fibre board, largely in rose. Illumination is by neon troughs in fascias of ceiling steppings. The "discs" in the ceiling are Anemostat air diffusers, providing downward distribution of automatically conditioned air.

or got an upset price bid on the job. Frequently these men have done fine jobs at very reasonable costs. I think this is because they were able to profit by the unknown job conditions as they turned up during the progress of the work, whereas if a contractor must make a guaranteed price for a job, he must include a substantial amount for contingencies which are likely to come to light in the course of the work. However, such jobs, handled by the theatre owner, seldom have the finished appearance, or the professional touch, that the jobs have when handled under the supervision of an architect. So in the final analysis the job that is planned, laid out and detailed by an architect, is in the long run the most satisfactory job.

Don't handicap the architect by making him guess what the job conditions are. Allow him to spend some money during the course of the preparation of plans to find out how deep footings go into the ground, to tear out a portion of wall or ceiling to determine as best he can what he must tie his new construction into. If you make the architect guess, then the contractor must guess, and as a result the theatre owner will pay plenty for the job. The owner who will admit that he is willing to pay a fair price and take the gambles will generally profit from the standpoint of job costs.

Architect Usually Best Fitted

Few architects really relish a remodeling job. The last six or seven years have been so hard on the architectural profession that many have had to do remodeling—and like it! Most architects want to do a satisfactory remodeling job because every owner who remodels is a potential new builder. However, the architect has a hard row to hoe. He is faced with all kinds of really unfair competition. Frequently a contractor will suggest that he make the plans so that the owner can save the architect's fee. Even the sign man will offer to layout a whole new front. On one occasion in my experience, a seat man submitted sketches and proposed that he supply the ideas and plans for remodeling.

The general theatre supply man is a great one on suggesting that he make the layout for the remodeling. The writer has never inspected such a job that has been entirely satisfactory, or that at least could not have been done better by an architect. We don't go to a tent maker or an upholsterer or drapery man to have him make our clothes. I can't see why theatre owners don't go to architects when they are planning the remodeling of a theatre.

A good architect must know the new materials that have been flooding the market, he must know how to use them, and he must know their use in combination with other materials. The architect must be able to interpret what we may call the rhythm of the theatre in color, line, proportion, lights and furnishings. These are things that even good showmen cannot al-

CONTROL AIR CONDITIONING... Make It Earn Money For You

TODAY Air Conditioning is grown-up. It's no longer a novelty. Theatre patrons expect it — and because it's grown-up, they demand perfect air conditioning. They demand constant comfort no matter where they sit. They turn down houses with poor air conditioning, where air is muggy, too cool, or stagnant.

WHEN you can control your Air Conditioning, you increase its earning power because then you can create a zone of comfort around every seat in your house — then you're almost certain every seat will be filled — that's controlled air conditioning, the kind that makes money for you.

USAIRCO, pioneer and developer of Air Conditioning for the modern theatre — with thousands of successful installations — invites you to a consideration of 1938 plants. New, improved and bettered, with positive controls, low operation — trouble free engineering, USAIRCO offers Air Conditioning with earning power. Write today for the first news of 1938 values. There's no obligation.

THERE ARE 2 SIDES TO AIR CONDITIONING

Consider this for 1938 profits. Air Conditioning, particularly in the theatre, has two sides. First, you must condition the air. Second, you must control the distribution of that air so that every seat in your house has a comfort zone all its own. Every seat can earn a profit every show — that's air conditioning with earning power. Write today. Get this detailed explanation of the two sides of air conditioning.

IMPROVE THE AIR CONDITIONING YOU HAVE ... PUT IT UNDER Control!

If your present air conditioning falls short of your needs — if it isn't earning money for you — isn't delivering comfort to every seat — find out how to correct it. There is every possibility that USAIRCO engineers, can bring your present equipment up to date — give your investment 1938 value. Pick up the lag in your air conditioning. Write for details.

sist on injecting into theatre design the motifs, the color and the layout that they personally believe the theatre should have. This attitude of reformation of the motion picture theatre on the part of the architect handling a remodeling job is very short-sighted. In a conversation with an architect, whom I was considering engaging, he made this statement:

"You know, clients don't know anything about architecture, so I listen to them and then do it the way I want it."

Of course, that statement removed him from a nice little $30,000 remodeling job, just as quick as that.

I believe, however, that such a point of view is the exception and not the rule. Most architects try to interpret their clients' wishes, improving upon them only with their special training, study and knowledge of construction and materials.—J. T. K.

The Selection and Mounting of Sign Flashers

FLASHERS connected into an electrical circuit or circuits for the purpose of intermittently interrupting the flow of electrical energy through the circuit or circuits, to gain a particular effect of motion for the purpose of attracting attention, are used enough for theatre signs and marquees for most theatre people to be familiar with their function, but there are aspects of both their specific application and operation that they should be better acquainted with than they are.

Most flasher manufacturers make a line of standard flasher units, but they are always glad to be consulted and to devise an assembly of standard units to create any desired effect.

Units Mounted in Multiple

The great majority of large theatre installations require various types of flashing effect. Usually these are standard units in multiples, mounted, if necessary, on one panel with all circuits synchronized. On many smaller theatre jobs the standard small units are sufficient. If the flashing effect is at all complicated or unusual, the whole scheme should be submitted to a flasher manufacturer, and complete reliance should not necessarily be placed on the sign man's judgment.

Running border types have been used on many theatre marquees and vertical signs and on many large spectacular displays. In such cases the circuits can be broken up easily and thereby eliminate excessively heavy loads on any individual contacts.

It is of course true that any number of contacts on a flasher may be tied together so that they can break any predetermined load within reason; however, when it is at all possible, it is very much more desirable to split up the load so that there are but 7 to 10 amperes on each circuit. This last arrangement will increase the life of the flasher and at the same time will reduce maintenance costs.

With some flashing effects, the load is broken at a speed of 200 times a minute. It is easy to imagine under such circumstances the terrific wear and tear on the contacts between circuit loads of from 10 amperes to 40 amperes. Therefore, keeping the circuit loads not more than 10 amperes is much the best practice.

General Types of Flashers

There are three principal types of flashers, as follows:

1. The older style drum type, which was in almost universal use about ten years ago. This type did a very good job, but the maintenance cost was high. Frequent replacement of the metal finger contacts and the segments of the drum caused constant annoyance.

2. The mercury contact flashers. This type made and broke the contact by tipping a tube with a ball of mercury in it. This type proved especially effective for running borders, the speller, and the on-and-off effect. Maintenance on this type is substantially less than on the first type above.

3. The induction disc motor development has provided a newer type of flasher that seems to be superior to the other types. This flasher is noiseless in operation and, to my knowledge, has given trouble-free service for several years. It is relatively simple and strong in construction and can be used on almost any type of display from the simple to the intricate.

In the past, theatre managers have frequently been annoyed because the operation of the theatre flashers has caused radio interference in the surrounding neighborhood. Most flasher manufacturers are prepared to provide radio interference eliminators to correct such trouble.

When the theatre manager has any flasher problems that seem complicated, he should remember that the flasher manufacturers are interested, and if he sends the details of those problems to them, they will give him really reliable advice, without charge, according to my experience.—J. T. K.

New Tube Rectifier Designed to Supply Suprex-Carbon Arc

A NEW rectifying unit developed primarily for use with low-voltage high-intensity projection lamps, has been developed by The Garver Electric Company of Union City, Ind.

Designed for three-phase operation, it consists of a set of ample-sized transformers in conjunction with four 15-ampere rectifying tubes. Primary and secondary windings are tapped to permit a wide range of operation. Cores are made from silicon steel.

The complete unit is enclosed in a heavy steel case finished in black baked enamel.

Rectifier Designed For Permanent or Portable Service

A NEW projection rectifier, characterized by distinctive refinements over previous models of the same design, and capable of supplying up to 30 amperes, has been brought out by the Kneisley Electric Company of Chicago.

A feature of the device is its physical construction, which promotes accessibility in the theatre and portability for road work. Transformer, tubes and meter are housed in a ventilated case of cast aluminum alloy, which opens like a suitcase, exposing all parts and wiring for inspection, adjustments or tube replacement. When closed, the rectifier may be carried like hand luggage, the weight of the 30-ampere model being only 60 pounds.

Hubbell twist-lock receptacles are provided for portable use; asbestos-covered input and output leads for permanent installations.

moulding the transformer laminations in a pliable rubber composition, which is applied under high temperature and high pressure, and eliminates transformer hum. Efficiency, as well as silence, is promoted by this form of construction.

Standard Tungar bulbs are used as rectifiers. Thirty-ampere models are available for either 110- or 220-volt a.c. lines. Both are adapted to wide variations in line voltage. The 110-volt unit has a range of from 95 to 130 line volts; the 220-volt unit will operate satisfactorily between 190 and 260 volts. In each case the d.c. output to open circuit is 75 volts; with load, 50 volts.

Attraction board lines can be continued around the corner in this new marquee on Publix Great Lakes' Madison theatre in Peoria, Ill. Marquee and vertical sign are unified in design, with incandescent and neon lighting combined in blue, white and ruby red color scheme. Separate flashers, built by the Sangamo Electric Company, operate the sign and the marquee. A total of 3,200 electric bulbs are used, and 2,400 feet of neon tubing. Attraction boards are of stainless steel with flashed white opal glass, and use 12-inch Adler silhouette letters. The marquee was designed and built by the Boy Hansen Metal Products Company of Davenport, Ia.

News Notes on the • THEATRE EQUIPMENT MARKET •

• Price reductions applying to Motiograph projectors have been announced by Joseph B. Kleckner, president of Motiograph, Inc. Model K projectors, complete with magazines and bases, but less lamps and sound equipment, will now cost exhibitors $1,695 per pair, a downward revision of $775. The new prices are both list and net, in line with the company's policy of encouraging stabilization of price structure in the theatre equipment field.

• Theatre and public address sound systems, with soundheads, amplifiers, microphones, loudspeakers and sound accessories, such as tubes and parts, are listed in a new 1938 catalog issued by the Wholesale Radio Service Company of New York.

• Carrier Engineering Corporation has issued a new 16-page catalog on its air-conditioning equipment, detailing characteristics of the various types of units and components of more elaborate systems. The booklet is profusely illustrated.

• Consolidated Theatre Supply Corporation has brought out a new 48-page catalog listing theatre equipment for auditorium, projection room and stage.

• The General Electric Company's Incandescent Lamp Department, Nela Park,

Cleveland, has placed a price of 50c on its Theatre Lighting Bulletin, recently issued as a practical manual on theatre illumination methods.

• The Adler Sign Letter Company of Chicago, manufacturers of silhouette changeable attraction board letters, has removed to larger quarters at 2909 Indiana Avenue as a result of an increasing demand for this type of changeable attraction board, requiring more manufacturing and shipping facilities.

• The Schine Circuit, Inc., of Gloversville, N. Y., has contracted with the Altec Service Corporation for its 85 theatres in New York, Ohio and Kentucky. Essaness Theatres of Chicago, has also contracted for Altec sound servicing.

• Air-conditioning charts and data on air-conditioning equipment operation, are included in a new 40-page air conditioning catalog just issued by the National Theatre Supply Company. Detailed information on specific items of equipment and accessories, illustrated with photographs and blueprints, is also included. Capacity tables and charts are based on the standard test code for centrifugal fans adopted jointly by the National Association of Fan Manufacturers and the American Society of Heating and Ventilating Engineers.

it creates a mood itself which is almost always at variance with the emotional character of the performance. The desired decorative quality must be neutral in effect. A description of what may be termed a successful auditorium for effective presentation of a motion picture play would emphasize this contention. Such an auditorium would be one which no patron would find conflicting either with his own individual taste or with the mood of the show. If such requirements as the following are met, the absence of whimsical surface decorations will not be felt—(a) desirable viewing positions, (b) unobstructed sight lines, (c) comfortable chairs, (d) comfortable atmospheric conditions, and (e) all wall and ceiling surfaces which come into the range of vision of the spectator, while viewing the picture, evenly illuminated with the proper intensity of light gauged to the lighting of the screen proper.

This latter factor probably supplies the key to the decorative scheme and also determines just which decorations become objectionable. Illumination of surfaces refers to the light coming from direct secondary sources of illumination as well as light being reflected from surfaces receiving light from the screen and reflecting this screen light into the eyes of the spectator. Even illumination of a surface means an equal intensity of light from all portions of a major surface area, or evenly graded intensity of light that is graded in one direction only.

There is a practical purpose in keeping all surfaces as light as possible. When this is done, lighting of the auditorium can be largely achieved by depending upon the light from the screen.

It is possible to take full advantage of screen light for auditorium illumination by so designing the texture of the surfaces that they re-direct the light to the side, and in back, of the heads of the spectators, and also downward from the ceiling to the tops of the heads of the audience, in no case allowing the re-reflected light to shine into the spectators' eyes.

Comparative Illustration of Methods

To illustrate above references to competing secondary sources of light on side walls, and portions of reflective wall surfaces while other portions of the surfaces are dark and non-reflective, a hypothetical auditorium design has been sketched (Figure 2). Illustrated also in this sketch are surface decorations which are not needed in a motion picture theatre auditorium, and they are shown projected in a manner to indicate lack of consideration of possible screen light re-reflections.

Another accompanying sketch (Figure 3) shows a motion picture theatre auditorium devoid of all functionless surface ornamentation. It might be assumed that such an auditorium as this may appear cold in feeling during the illuminated periods between, before and after performances; however, the attempt here is to indicate a method of illuminating these simple surfaces in a way that provides warmth and richness by the creation of broad, simple masses in a texture, fluting or corrugation designed to accomplish two purposes: to reflect screen light away from the viewer's eyes during the performance, and to catch a two-color flood lighting effect obtained by projecting one color from either extreme end of the auditorium for lighting during intermissions or other non-performance periods.

When side walls and ceiling surfaces subtend an angle to the screen of from approximately zero to 75°, and from approximately 105° to 180°, the surfaces do not need any special angular break-up of fluting or corrugations to avoid objectionable reflections from the screen. However, when side walls and ceilings subtend an angle of from approximately 75° to 105°, care must be taken to introduce angularities in surface break-up to control objectionable screen reflections.

The ANEMOSTAT is an accepted scientific achievement. It has solved major problems of the Air Conditioning Industry by reducing the speed of air flow to such an extent that it is no longer perceptible as a draft. The ANEMOSTAT mixes room air with conditioned air within the device. Thus the predetermined room temperature is established considerably above the breathing level. The ANEMOSTAT permits greater temperature differentials, smaller ducts, smaller plants, lower installation and operation costs. The ANEMOSTAT can be applied to existing systems as well as to new installations.

The installation in the Trans-Lux Theatre at 85th St. and Madison Ave. provides for a draftless air distribution through five ANEMOSTATS located in the center of the ceiling and above and below the balcony. It is a testimonial to the efficiency and value of this installation that similar units were installed in the latest Trans-Lux Theatre at 52nd Street and Lexington Ave.

20th Climaxes Its Greatest Season With Its Greatest Hits!

Like a champion, 20th Century-Fox really hits its stride in the last half of the race. Just look at these outstanding attractions still coming to you this season:

REBECCA OF
the tops of all Shirley Temple pictures, fully described elsewhere in this issue.

KIDNAPPED, Robert Louis Stevenson's immortal classic, with Warner Baxter, Freddie Bartholomew, Arleen Whelan... epic in every way.

FOUR MEN
AND A PRAYER, starring Loretta Young with Richard Greene, sensational new romantic find.

JOSETTE, starring Don Ameche, Simone Simon, Robert Young with Bert Lahr, Joan Davis. Hilarious romantics in naughty New Orleans.

IN OLD CHICAGO, The Great American Motion Picture, your biggest money show of the year, at popular prices.

KENTUCKY
MOONSHINE, starring The Ritz Brothers with Tony Martin, Marjorie Weaver. Twice as riotous as "Life Begins in College."

THREE BLIND MICE, starring Loretta Young, Joel McCrea.

THE LADY IS A LADY, starring Myrna Loy, Warner Baxter.

LITTLE
MISS BROADWAY, starring Shirley Temple with a grand adult cast!

THAT BIRD, AGAIN

THE Blue Eagle of N.R.A. threatens to spread his wings again in flight with the new plumage of the O'Mahoney-Borah bill for the licensing of all corporations engaged in interstate commerce.

The provisions of the bill, despite various modifications that have been applied, put industry substantially under the rule of the Federal Trade Commission. The measure proposes to regulate trade practises in general, terms of employment, and includes, typically of the trend of the day, much that could be made definite only by bureaucratic interpretation.

Because of the preoccupations of the motion picture industry with concerns more immediate, the new licensing bill has had little or no attention. But along with the rest of the industries engaged in national business, the motion picture is very much a party of interest.

A FEW years ago such a proposal as the O'Mahoney-Borah bill would have aroused both surprise and indignation by its extraordinary presumptions. Today the surprise quality, by reason of the multiplicity of such efforts, does not obtain, but the presumptions and bureaucratic purposes persist. It is another contribution to the current state of "recovery."

The O'Mahoney-Borah bill belongs to that class of legislative effort of the day which assumes that it is the business of the national government to attend to everything.

Significant remarks were passed when Mr. M. B. Griffith of the New York Board of Trade appeared before the Senate judiciary committee last week. Mr. Griffith did not object to the objectives of the bill in terms of progress in industrial relations but rather to the methods proposed.

To that Senator Borah responded:

"You come in here and you say a measure won't do. But you give us nothing in lieu of it. I think something will be done on this measure, and if we don't get your views you may find when it is passed that you don't like it."

That is language of threat—a very broad threat.

Up to the year 1938 a considerable progress seems to have been made without such a national dictation to industry.

It is just possible that quite as many persons were reasonably happy and prosperous before the national government started to tend to everything.

MORE FERTILIZER

FIRST it was Passamaquoddy, where miracle tide mills were to make the ocean enrich the nation. Now we have new Sunday supplement scientific wonders promised in more government hydro-electricity to make super-super-phosphates to fertilize the land for the More Abundant Life.

These are White House inspirations, to be viewed in the large, along with the budget.

There is an old home remedy for such symptoms. When the boy sets to taking the clocks apart or sawing a front leg off the piano it is good policy to buy him a Meccano set.

CODE EFFICIENCY

"FILM SURVEY," a mimeographed periodical plea for a propagandistic policy of motion picture production, comes out in its January-February issue with an endeavour to attack what it calls Motion Picture Herald's attempt to "pass death sentence on the National Board of Review."

The editorial maladroitness of "Film Survey" leads it into the bungling observation: "... In the past the industry was only too pleased to affix the misleading label, 'Passed by the National Board of Review.'"

That precisely admits the case.

"Misleading label," is the answer, meaning everything since "passed" by the National Board of Review meant nothing save that the board had collected a screening fee.

It is, to be sure, of hardly discernable consequence what "Film Survey" says, but its charge that the Herald is guilty of "biased inaccuracy," in its contention of the sufficiency of the industry's own Code Administration, is not well supported. In this connection it is perhaps of interest to observe that two official testimonies, a whole world apart, bear witness to efficiencies of the Production Code. First, a few weeks ago, the report of the Irish censor revealed that American productions imported were held censorable in only one-fifth of the ratio that applied to British pictures. Second, from Canberra, Australia, this month come tidings that "the percentage of eliminations in American films was 15 per cent in 1937, compared to 52 per cent in 1933; the British was 28 per cent compared to 27 per cent."

MEANWHILE Motion Picture Herald has not, as charged, objected to examination and selection of motion picture product by the National Board, or any other organization, for its own following. But objection is made most certainly to the official aura surrounding the Board's findings under a process of exacting subsidy from the industry in screening fees, and, by indirect processes of legislation, now faded, making its imprint a necessity of exhibition. The process and procedure involved have ever been adverse to the larger interests of the industry and the principle of self-regulation.

IT would be like him. When Mr. Joseph P. Kennedy, our new ambassador to Britain, stepped out for his first round of golf over there at Stoke Poges, he teed off for the second hole and made it in one. He has been shooting like that in considerably more complex games ever since he sold Pathe to Mr. David Sarnoff. It is entirely possible that he has a rabbit's foot in his luggage.

The cables quoted Mr. Kennedy as commenting: "Just fancy, I had to come over here to make my first hole-in-one."

We will offer the customary odds of eight to five that he has been utterly misquoted. Just fancy!

This Week

Answering Neely

The Neely Bill (S.153), now before the United States Senate, calling for federal legislation to outlaw block booking and blind buying, would bring bankruptcy and ruination to independent theatre owners, S. R. Kent warned this week.

The 26 members of the MPPDA formally protested to the Senate this week against the manner in which the Neely Bill was reported favorably out of the Interstate Commerce Committee, to the Senate, without public hearings, after the industry had requested that hearings be held.

Abram F. Myers of Allied States called the distributors' warnings "ghosts conjured up to frighten little children," and denied block sales would be barred.

See pages 12, 13, 14.

Trade Agreement

Publication this week of a reciprocal trade agreement between the United States and Czechoslovakia disclosed that motion pictures were not included because of the contentions of the Czech negotiators that films do not come within the same category as other commodities and should be discussed separately. The State Department accepted this viewpoint with "considerable reluctance" after the Czechoslovakian negotiators gave assurance that their government is prepared to negotiate an agreement on motion pictures at the earliest possible date and also that their government "will not adopt any measure which would affect American motion pictures adversely in relation to the treatment which they are now accorded in Czechoslovakia."

Profit and Loss

Loew's, Inc., and Twentieth Century-Fox this week declared dividends, while Sonotone Corporation reported a net profit for 1937 of $205,221, as compared to $66,213 in 1936. The Paramount Broadway Corporation reported a net operating loss of $236,852.33 in 1937, and official Canadian figures showed gross receipts at theatres declined 2.8 per cent in 1937 as compared to the previous calendar year.

These developments and other financial news are reported in detail on page 30.

Quota Filled

Paris offices of American distributors, having discovered this week that the quota allotment of 94 dubbing licenses for the first six months of 1938 was exhausted, found that many of the licenses had been taken by French distributors for outdated American pictures. A similar situation occurred last year but distributors obtained revocation of some of the licenses to make way for important releases.

Columbia's Plans

Columbia will produce substantially the same number of pictures during the 1938-'39 season that have been scheduled for the current season, Jack Cohn, vice-president, said on his arrival in New York Monday with Abe Montague, general sales manager.

For the current season Columbia scheduled 40 features, 22 westerns, four serials and 126 short subjects.

Columbia will complete its plans for producing in England under the new British quota act following the House of Lords action on the measure, Mr. Cohn said. He indicated that at the present time the company favors the sending of its own production units to England, rather than retaining British producers to make the required quota pictures. He said that the company will discontinue production in Canada and Australia immediately as a result of the new Films Act, which does not allow credit against British quota requirements on pictures produced elsewhere in the Empire.

District managers meet Friday on the "Montague Goodwill Campaign."

Anti-ASCAP Bill

New York State, home and chief income source of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, this week became the latest battling ground for anti-ASCAP measures. A bill designed after those enacted in five other states last Fall was introduced into the Assembly and, if it becomes law, it will prohibit ASCAP from operating in the state. The society's arguments against a similar Florida measure were voiced before a three-judge statutory court in New Orleans last week but decision was reserved.

The ASCAP situation is reported in detail on page 18.

Fox Foreign Films

Foreign subsidiaries of Twentieth Century-Fox will release an augmented product schedule in the 1938-'39 season, the number of films being sold for next season exceeding the current program by from 5 to 15, depending on the country.

Selling has been under way for some time, and each subsidiary is offering a definite number of pictures. The Italian company is selling 30 films for next season.

New World Films, the 20th-Fox British subsidiary, headed by Robert T. Kane, and with Monte Banks as director, will produce six features in London this summer for 1938-39. Gracie Fields will star in two, Annabella in two.

Third for "Movies"

Reporting on an investigation made by the Department of Agriculture, on the recreation-spending habits of American families, the United States Government this week disclosed that native-born, American non-relief inhabitants in smaller communities spend between $10 and $16 yearly in admissions to motion picture theatres, representing from 30 to 36 per cent of their total expenditures for amusements.

Highlights of the report appear on page 23.

Pictures, Parents, Teachers

Seeking to establish a central source of information and a "clearing house" on films suitable for use in classrooms, 285 representatives of film libraries voted last week to have the American Council on Education incorporate a new organization, the Educational Film Library Association.

A report of the librarians' meeting and action is on page 29 and on the same page is a story of the activities of a New York City group which recommends weekend program for juveniles.

New Radio Bill

Another in a long series of proposed radio tax measures was introduced in the House of Representatives this week after the Federal Communications Commission forwarded a letter to the House Ways and Means Committee, pointing out objections to a bill now under study by the committee. The latest bill would levy a 10 per cent tax on the gross receipts of broadcasting stations. The measure to which the FCC voiced objections would impose a tax based on the number of watts each station is authorized to use.

Developments in the field of radio are discussed in stories on page 25.

"Political" Censors

Evidently Pennsylvania has not heard the end of its censoring of so-called "political propaganda" films. The Philadelphia Civil Rights Conference this week hit at Governor George Earle's public query: "Would such foreign pictures shown in the midst of an American depression be a danger?"—a question he propounded at the Shrine Club in Philadelphia.

Not only does the Civil Rights Conference deny such imminent "danger," but it says that "inherent qualities and not the place of origin" should determine whether a film is good or bad.

The Pennsylvania fight and other censorship developments of the week are reported on page 26.

Reader Interest

Seeking to determine the features of daily newspapers that are attractive to the greatest number of persons, Dr. George Gallup, director of the Institute of Public Opinion, conducted a study of 100,000 adult readers. The results show that 55 per cent of a paper's women readers study the amusement ads, including those of motion picture theatres, as against 35 per cent six years ago.

Dr. Gallup's study showing these facts and numerous similar facts is the basis of an article and a chart on page 45.

Final Report

The last step in Paramount's reorganization proceedings will be taken in Federal Court, New York, March 18th, when Alfred C. Coxe, judge, receives the reports of the reorganization trustees and acts upon their petition for formal discharge. Requests by Root, Clark, Buckner and Ballantine, trustees' attorneys, for additional fees of $7,500 with $747 expenses for preparing the final report will be heard at the same time. Price, Waterhouse and Company, accountants, also have filed requests for $8,190 in fees and $680 expenses.

Salary Publicity

The House of Representatives, after twice refusing to restore provisions for publicity of corporation salaries in the pending tax bill, this week voted to make public the salaries of persons drawing $75,000 or more a year.

President Roosevelt last week declared he believes that the provision which appears in the existing law should be restored as a matter of public morals. Salaries of $15,000 and over are made public under the law, and in the past newspapers have given considerable space to the reported earnings of motion picture stars and executives.

Latin America

American distributors have nothing to be disturbed about in Latin America despite a wave of native film production and exhibition, Walter J. Hutchinson, head of foreign distribution for Twentieth Century-Fox, said Tuesday when he returned on the Santa Rosa from a seven weeks inspection and sales trip. Hollywood films, he said, because of their superior quality, are serving as a cushion upon which the bulk of Latin American exhibition rests. The American films, he added, will continue to obtain most of the playtime south of the Rio Grande. Mr. Hutchinson said his company's business abroad is running 20 per cent ahead of last year.

Tribute to Depinet

A tribute inaugurated by exhibitors will be paid to Ned E. Depinet, vice-president in charge of distribution for RKO Radio, on his 30th anniversary in motion pictures in the form of a dinner at the Baker hotel, Dallas, Texas, on March 26th, sponsored by Karl Hoblitzelle and R. J. O'Donnell of Interstate Theatres, Texas, where Mr. Depinet began his film career. Leaders of the industry in exhibition, production and distribution as well as statesmen, political figures and those in the general industries will attend. The dinner comes at the height of the "Ned Depinet Drive," RKO Radio's billings contest named in his honor.

Grand Awards

The Quigley Grand Awards for distinguished showmanship were assigned on Tuesday by ballot of a committee of judges representing the combined expert exploitation knowledge and experience of members of the distribution and exhibition branches of the industry. To Ted Kirkmeyer of the Rio theatre in Helena, Mont., went the Annual Silver Plaque for his campaign on the United Artists production, "A Star Is Born." Mr. Kirkmeyer's campaign was planned and conducted in a western community of 12,000 people and, representing the other end of the scale, the Bronze Award was given for a campaign conducted in an eastern city of 2,000,000. Jules Seltzer, publicity director for the Warner theatres in Philadelphia was named the winner for his campaign on "The Life of Emile Zola."

The story of the awards appears on page 15 and on pages 16 and 17 are pictures of the judging and the luncheon.

"Judge" to Produce

Judge, monthly magazine, announces that it will produce one-reel pictures, for monthly release, entitled "The Washington Parade," based on "the human side of the politicians, statesmen, diplomats and students of the Government at the capital."

"There will be no attempt at malicious criticism or at political propaganda," according to John Boyd, assistant to Harry Newman, publisher of Judge.

Production details have not been worked out nor has distribution been arranged, except for the decision to release through one of the large distributors as Time magazine releases its March of Time through RKO. The pictures probably will be available for the start of the new season. Thus "The Washington Parade" becomes the second series of short subjects to be produced under the direct supervision of and with a direct tie-up to a national newsstand magazine.

NEELY BILL SPELLS "RUIN" FOR INDEPENDENTS, SAYS KENT: BLOCK SALES "NECESSITY," SAYS MPPDA

Says Outlawing Block Booking Would Cost Millions by Forcing Individual Selling Which Many Could Not Absorb

Independent theatre owners in this country face bankruptcy and ruination if Congress passes the Neely Bill (Senate 153), prohibiting "block booking" and "blind selling" of motion pictures, Sidney Kent, president of Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation, warned this week.

Charging that exhibitor leader proponents of the bill are either ignorant or false to their followers, and that the bill is a minority measure "worked up with punitive purposes in mind," Mr. Kent, in a formal statement issued on Monday, declared that instead of helping the cause of the independent against the circuit, Senator Matthew Mansfield Neely's Congressional proposal will work directly the opposite.

Mr. Kent, who had been generally acclaimed by virtually all industry factions for his work down through the years in behalf of fair practices for both distribution and exhibition, declared that the origin of the bill was founded with a background of morals behind it, based on the "old false cry of 'let your community chose your product,' and yet, morals in motion pictures are no issue today and every exhibitor and fair-minded member of the community knows it." He cited "Ecstasy" and the so-called "social hygiene pictures" as having been bought singly, and not as part of any block, by thousands of theatres, "so the moral issue of the Neely Bill is a smoke screen."

"There are thousands of independent exhibitors who can never maintain their present position by buying pictures one at a time," as they will "be forced to under this Act," he warned, adding that certain companies cannot survive the Bill if enacted, "because they lack the finances required to double their present inventories, as they will be compelled to under its machinery."

Mr. Kent's statement in full follows:

by S. R. KENT

President, 20th Century-Fox Film Corporation

Independent exhibitors of this country will rue the day the Neely Bill becomes a law.

Setting aside for a moment the question of exhibitor grievances that may be legitimate, let me say that any exhibitor leader who tells his following that this legislation is for their good is either ignorant or false.

An article published this week states "exhibitors can still buy in blocks under the Neely Bill as before."

This is also misleading.

THE NEELY BILL AND ITS COMPANIONS

The Neely Senate Bill, No. 153, companion measure to Congressman Samuel B. Pettengill's bill in the House of Representatives, specifically prevents distributors from so-called "compulsory" block booking and blind buying of their motion pictures in their transactions leasing under copyright, by requiring that a "complete and true" synopsis of each picture be provided when the film is offered for sale, thus precluding the distributors' offering any picture for sale until its completion. If a feature as released is substantially different from the synopsis the exhibitor is entitled to cancel it without liability for breach of contract and he also may recover all damages suffered because of the difference, or he may retain the lease and recover damages as for a breach of warranty.

Allied States Association of exhibitors has been the prime motivator of the Neely Bill's progress in minority ranks, and has been marking time of late in its state legislative attacks against the "majors," which had been undertaken through the state bills forcing divorcement of circuit operations from production and distribution, this in order to concentrate effort on such Congressional measures as the Neely-Pettengill Bill. Only last week the Allied's ranking executives met in closed session in Washington, and although statements of the meeting's business were refused, it was generally believed that it had to do, at least in part, with the anti-block booking and blind selling legislation.

be made a part of each contract. Yes, they could if any producer were stupid enough to try and write an accurate description of the kind called for in this Bill and run the risk of criminal prosecution and of being fined in addition.

Actually the Bill itself will make any sale impossible except the sale of a finished picture after screening.

There isn't a man in the industry today who could take a finished picture, let alone a projected one, for the future, and based on the finished picture write a descriptive analysis that would be safe or stand up—not one that couldn't be picked to pieces technically if someone wanted to—and, in my opinion, no producer would run the risk or could afford to run it.

Where is the future selling to be done? In

26 Members of Association Protest to Senate Against "Railroading" Committee Report Despite Request for Hearings

The organized motion picture industry as represented by the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America formally protested to the United States Senate on Monday against the "railroading" of the Neely anti-block booking and anti-blind selling bill out of the Interstate Commerce Committee, and into the Senate, by Senator Matthew Mansfield Neely, without public hearings despite a request from the industry.

The MPPDA's attack was the fourth shot fired this week at the Neely Bill. S. R. Kent, president of Twentieth Century-Fox, warned that it would ruin independents (see column 1), while the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, in a statement signed by Edward L. Kuykendall, president, said that "we are not in favor of compulsory block booking nor of blind selling," the Neely Bill does not "nearly eliminate" these practices, but would do more actual damage to the small exhibitor than it would "to the big distributing companies, against whom it is ostensibly aimed." The Kuykendall statement added that "the only practical solution" rests in the MPTOA's trade practice proposals. The Independent Theatre Owners of New York voted against the bill and proposed conciliation boards.

Senator Neely (Democrat of West Virginia) abruptly revived his anti-industry legislation on February 16th, when, in a surprise move, his Interstate Commerce Committee reported the bill favorably to the Senate. The non-holding of hearings was defended with the contention that the question was discussed amply during lengthy hearings at the last Congress.

Two years have elapsed since those hearings, the MPPDA membership now holds, during which "there have been progressive changes" in the industry.

Senator Neely declared in the report accompanying his bill as it reached the Senate floor on February 16th, that its primary purpose is "to establish community freedom in the selection of motion picture films."

In their reply this week the MPPDA members pointed out that "exhibitors as points of contact between motion pictures produced and motion pictures shown in theatres cannot make people go to see any particular motion picture. In all but the very smallest places in the United States all of the motion pictures produced are shown among the theatres which serve any given area. The problem of selectivity for different persons in any given community is not entirely by the achievement of an industry which makes available all over the United States expensively produced motion pictures at a low cost which permits their display at all places, and gives the public so many pictures to choose from."

MONOPOLISTIC PRACTICE IS DENIED

The 26 corporate members of the MPPDA each signed the reply to Senator Neely's report. The reply was dispatched to the Senate early on Monday, and copies sent to each of the 96 Senators.

In the Neely report, it was pointed out that "not only are the practices of compulsory block booking and blind selling injurious to the public in forcing the showing of obscene or vicious pictures and in preventing the showing of many that are desirable, but they unfairly burden and oppress the independent exhibitors," adding: "Perhaps the most serious objection to these practices lies in the fact that they tend to monopolize the playing time of the screens of the country and thus discourage independent producers from entering the field. If it were not for such practices exhibitors would be free to buy films wherever they could find them, but in existing circumstances exhibitors must have the best pictures of three or more of the major producers, and, since they must take all in order to get any, they usually have little or no playing time left for independent productions."

The secondary purpose of his bill, then, Senator Neely said, is "to relieve the independent motion picture exhibitors of a burdensome and monopolistic trade practice."

Deny Monopolistic Practice

In their reply, the MPPDA producers and distributors say flatly that there is no monopolistic practice in the motion picture industry, and if there were the bill would not prevent it.

"No distributor has a monopoly of distribution," the reply declares. "There are many in active competition, no one of whom dominates the industry. There are more than 10 large distributing organizations.

"Nor are the present practices oppressive or burdensome. No exhibitor appeared (at the early anti-blocking hearings) who stated that he was put out of business because he bought in groups or in advance of production. No producer appeared who said he could not produce or distribute because the others contracted for groups of pictures."

"It is necessary for the exhibitors to know in advance the commitments they will have to make for motion pictures to keep their theatres open and it has been of distinct advantage to exhibitors to know, for example, that they can contract to be supplied with the motion pictures of companies of long experience and reliability.

"No Compulsion"

"It is true that exhibitors contract in advance for motion pictures before they are made. There is no compulsion on any exhibitor to do so and an exhibitor can at any time change his policy so as to contract for motion pictures only after they are made."

The MPPDA members declared that, at the time the previous report was submitted on an identical bill (S. 3012) in the 74th Congress, "the error of its conclusions seemed apparent to distributors of motion pictures, to exhibitors of motion pictures who opposed the bill and to many interested persons and representatives of public groups that appeared before the Senate subcommittee in opposition to the bill at the hearings before the 74th Congress.

"This group also felt that the hearings before the Senate subcommittee held in March, 1934, had not afforded the fullest opportunity for presentation of the views of the opponents of the legislation since when it came time for the presentation of such views, the attendance of the members of the subcommittee had dwindled until it had reached almost the vanishing point.

Temporary Injunction Obtained by Paramount on North Dakota Law

Paramount and its theatre operating subsidiaries in the North Dakota territory on Monday won an uncontested temporary injunction restraining North Dakota officials from enforcing the state's affiliated theatre "divorcement" law after its effective date, March 22nd.

The Federal statutory court which granted the injunction set June 1st for trial of the Paramount action challenging the constitutionality of the "divorcement law." The injunction remains in effect against the state pending the outcome of the trial.

Attorneys for Paramount, Minnesota and American Amusement companies, the only theatre operating companies affected by the North Dakota statute, submitted their briefs to the court. State officials and Allied States Association, the latter the sponsor of the law, did not oppose the application for the injunction and entered no pleadings. The procedure eliminated all arguments before the court.

Spokesman for Allied declared that the statute litigation is regarded by the organization as a test case and that their desire to have the constitutionality of the law determined explained their failure to oppose the application for a temporary injunction.

The proceedings before the Senate subcommittee not having been printed, they were not available to the entire committee of the 74th Congress. More importantly, they were not available to the members of the present Senate Committee, which has of course changed in its composition from that of the committee of the 74th Congress.

After Two Years

"The present Neely report reproduces a list contained in the previous report of organizations which have announced their favorable support of the bill. Since the bill is identical with the previous bill, it is not improper that the report should do so, but two years have elapsed since the hearings before the former Senate Committee on the bill at which these organizations announced that support. During such time, as might be expected, there have been progressive changes in production of motion pictures, and for all that appears the business conduct of distributors of motion pictures may have been such as not to deserve the strictures imposed. The industry hopes that the many groups and organizations who are attentive to the motion pictures which are annually produced and which have been offered for exhibition in the United States during this period, have carefully observed continued progress and improvement in motion pictures, and perhaps even studied the mechanics of their distribution, a procedure somewhat more complicated than exists in the distribution of goods and commodities in the course of trade. If they have, their continued support to S. 153 under such circumstances should appear doubtful. The opportunity at least to again appear before the Senate Committee as presently composed, to meet with the interested groups to review the motion pictures produced during the intervening period and to examine the method of their distribution to motion picture theatres, and to point out to the committee the erroneous conclusions contained in the prior report of 1936, not being afforded, it is sought to present the relevant facts in this memorandum.

"Exhibitors who have substantial investments in their theatres wish to assure themselves of a constant supply of motion pictures produced at a predictable cost. It is for this reason that they make contracts in advance of production."

The 26 producers and distributors who signed the reply also offered a counter-attack against "the theatre owners in an organization of exhibitors who appeared at the hearings in support of the bill" (presumably Allied States Association). The MPPDA now pointed out that these same theatre owners had tried "to make the members of their association enter into five-year contracts with a distributing company they sponsored, under plans whereby the distributing corporation arranged for the distribution of motion pictures to these exhibitors of all the motion pictures to be produced for a period of five years under a franchise contract, which obligated the exhibitors to take them," the MPPDA reply charged.

Denies Moral Issue

On the question of morals and motion pictures, the reply added:

"It would indeed be a fault if in any community the practice (of block booking) was to force the showing of obscene or vicious pictures and to prevent the showing of many that are desirable. This is the indictment made in the report.

"This is not synonymous with 'community freedom' in any meaning of that term that is apparent. Even should a community or sufficient members of a community to make it profitable, wish to see an obscene or vicious picture, the exhibitor should be restrained from showing it, even if he so desires; and no community, especially a free one, wishes to compel producers of desirable pictures to give them to the owners of the local facilities for their display, at compensation not reasonable and mutually satisfactory.

"Do the companies which distribute motion pictures force any theatre owner to play an obscene or vicious picture? We should first ask, do they make obscene and vicious pictures.

"Those who have been attentive to the moral quality of motion pictures say no.

"No company could force any exhibitor who had contracted to pay it for the exhibition rights to a motion picture, to pay for such picture if it were obscene or immoral or vicious. An exhibitor who honestly believed that a picture was obscene or immoral or vicious would not play it. He could rest secure that no judge or jury would direct him to pay for it. He often finds it a convenient excuse to any protesting person the exchanges I tell you. And what can be sold under this Bill? Nothing but finished product. It will add millions to the inventories of every company in the business, and instead of helping the exhibitor operating one or two theatres against the circuit it will do the opposite.

'PUNITIVE' BILL: KENT

The circuits can and will maintain buyers in every exchange center out of which they are served and will have to. Their added cost will be bad enough. Non-circuit exhibitors will have to do the same thing.

Does anyone think producers can afford to wear out three or four hundred prints shipping them out to be screened before they are purchased to everyone of the thousands of accounts they serve? Certainly not. But how else is it to be done?

Must Provide Synopsis

It has been said that this bill is not as drastic as the English law. In my opinion it is twice as drastic in its results. There you can hold a trade show which serves the purposes of the Act. Under this Bill the producer, to be safe, must screen each picture for every buyer. A trade showing for others will not comply with the law, as I see it, for the exhibitor who hasn't seen the picture. He must be furnished with a synopsis.

A picture might have played in a thousand theatres and yet, under this Bill, you couldn't lease it without screening it for every account that hasn't seen it and still furnish a synopsis. No company can maintain and service its accounts as it is now doing.

Where are all these exhibitors who went or are going broke under block booking?

I can name all the leaders supporting this Bill and most of them have been in their organizations for over twenty years and have more theatres today than they had twenty years ago.

There are major producing and exhibiting companies still in the courts for reorganization, but how many independents are in the courts or went through them during the last three or four years?

A "Punitive" Bill

This company, for which I speak, serves over 10,000 accounts and I know the great and overwhelming majority we sell to prefer to buy our product as they are now buying it. This is a minority Bill, worked up by a minority with punitive purposes in mind. Back of it is the old false cry of "let the community choose your product." Will any exhibitor consult the community before he buys a picture?

The origin of this Bill was founded with a background of morals behind it, yet morals in motion pictures are no issue today and every exhibitor and fair-minded member of the community knows it. This Bill will not prohibit the exhibitor from running any picture he wants to run so the moral issue is a smoke screen.

There were thousands of exhibitors who bought of their own accord the picture "Ecstasy," which did not pass some of the State Censor Boards and couldn't get a seal of approval of the industry; and how about the so-called social hygiene pictures being shown around this country today without the approval of the industry Production Code Administration? All these were bought singly, not part of any block, and have been shown in thousands of theatres.

We have the same old clique with us who want to do anything to destroy the distributor-producers, when, in my opinion, the real destruction will be in the exhibitor ranks if this bill goes through.

There are only a certain few companies, including this one, which can survive this Bill if enacted, but there are certain other companies,

MYERS ANSWERS THE DISTRIBUTORS

The "panicky" effort of the distributors to build up sentiment against the Neely Bill is a "sure indication of the strength the bill has mustered," Abram F. Myers, general counsel of Allied States Association, said Wednesday in Washington.

Mr. Myers declared there is no attempt in the bill to force abandonment of block booking, to censor pictures or "hamstring" producers, but a purpose of giving independent exhibitors "at least some of the advantages which the great chains enjoy under their selective contracts." That the bill would require the selling of pictures singly he called a "ghost . . . conjured up to frighten little children."

in my opinion, that cannot survive because they lack the finances required to double their present inventories, as they will be compelled to under its machinery.

There are thousands of independent exhibitors who can never maintain their present position by buying their pictures one at a time, as I say they will be forced to under this Act. You will find in a year or two that the supply of pictures, which you already complain is insufficient in number, will be much less in number than it is today. Any independent exhibitor who believes that this Bill is a triumph for the independent is writing his own bankruptcy, in my opinion, and I am very careful in expressing any opinion upon any legislation of this or any other kind and am not careless in my statements.

National Decency Legion Classifies 17 Productions

Of 17 pictures reviewed and classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week 13 were approved for general patronage, three were listed as unobjectionable for adults and one was cited as objectionable in part. The pictures and their classification follow.

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "Beloved Brat," "The Call," "Dawn Over Ireland," "Hawaii Calls," "Heart of Arizona," "He Couldn't Say No," "Little Miss Roughneck," "Mad About Music," "Meiseken" (German), "Merrily We Live," "La Paloma" (Spanish), "Sally, Irene and Mary," "When G-Men Step In." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "Accidents Will Happen," "Condemned Women," "Halka" (Polish). Class B, Objectionable in Part: "Love, Honor and Believe."

Producers Call Block Booking Mutual Benefit

to say that having contracted to pay for a picture he could not afford not to play it; he does so with pictures he selects, and wishes to play, and believes to be not subject to the protest made regarding it.

"In the past some years ago some distributor may have told an exhibitor that the exhibitor would have to take all or none of the motion pictures. It is believed that no distributor has done so for many, many years. To make it criminal for a distributor to do so now is altogether unnecessary. At the hearings before the committee no exhibitor appeared to say that any distributor has done so for many years past.

"All or nearly all of the distributors permit a cancellation privilege of 10 per cent if the motion pictures are taken in the groups offered. As to prices for groups, one need only look into one's own experience to realize why distributors offer a more attractive financial proposition if the exhibitor takes the block offered by the distributor and not just a few selected pictures here and there."

In conclusion, the MPPDA reply stated: "What makes exhibitors and distributors alike wish to contract for the showing of motion pictures in advance of their production is not any monopolistic design, but the legitimate desires of each to effect some safeguards in an enterprise of extreme commercial hazards. For years they have done so to their mutual benefit, to the benefit of the American industry, and to the benefit of the public," the MPPDA reply continued.

"The Neely report claims that the bill defines its prohibitions in proper technical language. To the members of the industry the language of the bill seems curiously inept. The Neely report says that there is no sound reason for apprehending that the enactment of the bill will inflict monetary loss on the industry; but it is hard to understand how they can disregard the testimony of those leaders and spokesmen of the foremost companies of the industry who gave it as their opinion that it would inflict severe hardship and monetary losses on the industry. Are the views in such regard, the views of the experienced and trained leaders of the foremost companies in the industry to be rejected? If so, how can the companies and their stockholders, and even the American public interested in the welfare of its industry, be assured otherwise?"

Universal Launching Record Production

Universal studios, the home office reported this week, is launching the most extensive production schedule in years. Nate J. Blumberg, president, is at the studio conferring with Charles R. Rogers, vice-president in charge of production. The company announced last week that it had added a million dollars to the 1937-'38 budget.

A survey of productions contemplated to complete the season's schedule of 40 pictures include "Half Way to Shanghai," for May release; "Suspicion," for June; "The Rage of Paris," for July; "My Letter of Introduction," and the next Deanna Durbin picture for August. The release date of the special "Road to Reno" has been set for early fall. At least seven pictures are expected to start in production before the end of the month.

QUIGLEY GRAND AWARD WINNERS FOR 1937 ARE NAMED BY EXECUTIVES

Ted Kirkmeyer Awarded Silver Plaque, Jules Seltzer Bronze; Both Winners Will Go to Hollywood as Quigley Guests

Exploitation campaigns planned and conducted by showmen the world over were studied, discussed and voted upon by a committee representing the combined showmanship knowledge and appreciation of members of the distribution and exhibition branches of the industry, at the Quigley Grand Awards luncheon Tuesday in the Hotel Astor, New York. From the monthly winners of the Managers' Round Table plaques the judges, after due deliberation, selected two winners of the Grand Awards.

Ted Kirkmeyer of the Rio theatre in Helena, Montana, was awarded the Annual Silver Plaque for his campaign on the United Artists production, "A Star Is Born" which won him the monthly Silver Plaque for July.

Jules Seltzer, publicity director for Warner Brothers theatres in Philadelphia, winner of the monthly Silver Plaque in October, won the Annual Bronze Plaque for his campaign on "The Life of Emile Zola," a Warner Brothers picture. He was assisted in the campaign by Maurice K. Gable.

The winners of the two Grand Awards, with campaigns conducted under widely varying conditions in a middle western community of 12,000 and an eastern city of 2,000,000, typically represented the entries in the Awards competition.

A total of 23 campaigns, winnowed during the year from the hundreds of examples of distinguished showmanship submitted to the Manager's Round Table and awarded the monthly Silver and Bronze Plaques, were studied by the committee. Although two awards are given monthly the entry of the late Hal Grady of the Palace theatre, Lubbock, Texas, winner of the Silver Plaque for January was omitted because of his recent death.

As the committee members arrived in the ballroom of the Hotel Astor they were given ballots and proceeded immediately to the task of selecting their individual choices for winners.

These Judges Voted the Awards After Study of the Campaigns

The Judges in the Quigley Awards, alphabetically listed, and the companies with which they are affiliated are as follows:

E. W. Aaron, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

Al Adams, Republic Pictures

Mort Blumenstock, Warner Bros. Pictures

Lowell Calvert, United Artists

Howard Dietz, M-G-M

W. R. Ferguson, M-G-M

Monroe Greenthal, United Artists

Hal Hode, Columbia Pictures

Morris Kinzler for Harry Arthur

Irving Lesser, Roxy Theatre

Lou Lifton, Monogram Pictures

Charles E. McCarthy, Twentieth Century-Fox

Frank McCarthy, Universal Pictures

Arthur Mayer, Rialto Theatre

Dan Michalove, Twentieth Century-Fox

Lou Pollock, Universal Pictures

Arch Reeve, Twentieth Century-Fox

Leonard Schlesinger, Warner Bros.

Milt Silver, National Screen Service

Albert E. Sindlinger, March of Time

A. W. Smith, Jr., United Artists Corp.

Gordon S. White, Educational Pictures

Al Wilkie, Paramount Pictures

Jack Goldstein, and Gertrude Merriam, associate editor.

Mr. Quigley expressed his appreciation of the work of the committee and pointed out the importance of encouraging better exploitation. In this connection he explained the facilities of the Managers' Round Table department of MOTION PICTURE HERALD and the opportunities it offers for the interchange of exploitation ideas.

Campaigns considered by the Grand Awards Committee for final honors are here listed by month, showman, theatre, city and picture:

JANUARY: Hal Grady (deceased), Palace, Lubbock, Tex., "The Plainsman"; Ray Bell, Loew's Palace, Washington, D. C., "Servant of the People";

FEBRUARY: Rex Williams, Hoosier, Whiting, Ind., "Pennies from Heaven"; C. E. McSwain, Granada, Plainview, Texas, "The Plainsman";

MARCH: Russ Hardwick, Plains, Clovis, New Mexico, "The Plainsman"; J. L. Redmond, Bonham, Fairbury, Neb., "Maid of Salem";

BILL WOULD BAR ASCAP IN ITS OWN HOME STATE

Measure Introduced in New York Assembly Would Prevent Collection of License Fee

With no advance notice of any kind, opponents of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers carried their fight into New York, home state of the society, this week by quietly introducing an Assembly bill which would put the Society out of business in its home state.

The measure, sponsored by Assemblyman R. Foster Piper, of Erie County, is modeled after the Florida law which was contested by ASCAP in an injunction suit before a three-judge statutory court in New Orleans last week. The court reserved decision and ASCAP attorneys immediately started preparations for attacking a similar measure in Tennessee.

Mr. Piper said he is sponsoring the New York bill in behalf of small theatre owners in his district who have been pleading for relief from the "per seat" levy imposed by ASCAP. The Piper bill specifically prevents collection of a license fee "determined by any member, agent or representative of such combinations."

ASCAP is pointblank prohibited from charging "theatres, radio receiving, radio broadcasting and radio re-broadcasting stations, moving picture houses, hotels, restaurants, clubs, dance halls, recreation rooms, pavilions, colleges, universities, churches, or any one who uses music in the conduct of his business" fees for rendition of musical compositions.

The measure was not introduced until after the Assembly speaker had announced formally that the Rules Committee would take over consideration of all pending legislation this Thursday.

Thus, the Piper bill will be printed too late for reference to the Assembly Committee which ordinarily would adjudge it. Instead it will go automatically into the Rules Committee to remain alive throughout the remainder of the session.

"My bill is not only a good one, but it is a just one," Mr. Piper declared. Many of the small exhibitors in New York State cannot afford the per seat impose on copyrighted songs any more than several other classes of people."

After declaring "any such combination" of authors, composers or publishers is "an unlawful monopoly in this state," the Piper bill declares it "illegal and in restraint of trade."

Selling Price to be Specified

Under the terms of the pending legislation, authors, composers or publishers will have to specify on their musical compositions, "in whatever form the same may be published," the selling price arrived at and determined. Once the "purchaser or user" acquires the rights within New York State and pays the selling price, its use in theatres, over the radio, through transcriptions or records "may be so rendered either privately or publicly for profit without further license fees or other exactions." Copyright owner or proprietor, once the piece has been sold "shall be deemed to have received full compensation for the rendition and all uses of such musical compositions."

In the event an ASCAP member failed or refused to set a price, "any person, firm or corporation in this state" who may have purchased and paid for such copyrighted musical composition can use it privately or publicly without fee and shall be "free from any and all liability in any suit" or action to collect damages.

Future contracts or agreements made by any "combination" would be declared void and unenforceable and "in restraint of trade."

Openings for Radio and Theatres

Broadcasting stations are specifically authorized to receive, broadcast and re-broadcast copyrighted vocal compositions "owned or controlled by any such combination declared unlawful" by the bill's enacting clause, without payment.

Theatres, too, are given every opening to use compositions without restraint once the composer has sold his music originally. Out of state tie-ups are handled by a separate section which restricts liability actions on the originating corporation without the state and exempts New York State users from suit.

"Any person, firm or corporation within this state," acting as the representative of any combination shall be deemed an official representative and can be served legally within New York on behalf of the organization employing the agent. Negotiations for fees are similarly set up in consistency with the remainder of the bill.

Penalty clause is set as a misdemeanor, with maximum fines of $5,000 on individuals, or imprisonment for a year, or both, or if a corporation, by a fine not exceeding $20,000.

Florida Court Gets Test Case

Attorneys for ASCAP completed their arguments against the Florida anti-ASCAP measure before a statutory court in New Orleans last week. Seeking an injunction to prevent enforcement of the Florida law, Louis Frolich, New York attorney, denounced the state's law as a clever subterfuge to prevent the composer from obtaining his rights.

Tennessee remains the only one of five states in which ASCAP has yet to attack the legality of anti-ASCAP measures enacted last year. Decisions on arguments against laws in Florida, Montana and Washington are pending. In the fourth state, Nebraska, ASCAP won an injunction restraining the state from enforcing its restrictive statute against the society.

In his battle against the Florida law last week, Mr. Frolich pointed out to the court: "The State of Florida has a statute governing monopolies. It didn't have to create a similar statute."

Tyrus Norwood, assistant state attorney in Florida, told the three jurists that the law was within the state's police powers but Mr. Frolich replied to this by declaring the law had nothing to do with public necessity, health or morals but was directed against the copyright rights of the society's members.

Under the Florida law, copyright holders' associations which license performances for profit and collect royalties are prohibited from forming or operating within the state. The purchaser of sheet music or records, according to the law, is free to use the music for profit either publicly or privately.

Florida attorneys attacked the jurisdiction of the court and insisted the injunction should not be directed against the attorney general of the state since he was only involved in the criminal angle of monopolies.

Mr. Frolich, Herman Finklestein, also counsel for ASCAP, and E. C. Mills, chairman of the society's administrative committee, returned to New York from New Orleans this week and immediately began preparation of legal papers attacking the Tennessee law. The action, it is expected, will be instituted in April.

Exhibitors Set Two Conventions

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Arkansas, Mississippi and Tennessee will hold a convention in Memphis in April, with the definite date yet to be determined, according to R. X. Williams of Oxford, Miss., president. Ed Kuykendall, president, Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, is expected to attend.

Mr. Williams said that Mississippi theatre owners are pressing a fight against the state's excessive amusement tax.

The Independent Theatres Protective Association of Wisconsin have tentatively set April 5th and 6th for its annual convention. The meeting will be held in Milwaukee.

The British Columbia Theatres Association have elected A. Hugo Ray, manager of the Beacon theatre, Vancouver, president; George McEwen, Music Box theatre, Vancouver, vice-president, and Miss Amy Scriven, Stanley theatre, Vancouver, secretary-treasurer. The new directors are: A. C. Blaine, Cranbrook; Ray Castle, Oak Bay; R. W. McCartie, New Westminster; Frank Gow, Vancouver; Hector Quagliotti-Romano, Vancouver, and J. Howard Boothe, the retiring president.

11 Members Attack Bylaw of AFM

Ernest E. L. Hammer, New York supreme court justice, this week reserved decision on the injunction suit brought by 11 members of Local 802, American Federation of Musicians, against the local, to determine the validity of a recently adopted bylaw.

Under the local's new restrictions, members are forbidden to hold more than one job if they earn more than $54 a week. The law, the 11 members charged, was adopted in violation of the union's constitution and, they pointed out, it would result in unfair discrimination.

Witnesses testified that a musician earning $18 for playing the signature on a radio program could hold a number of jobs, while a more competent player, hired to appear three times weekly on the same program, would be limited to one job.

The union contended the bylaw is valid and the classification is reasonable.

Columbian Club Election Held

At the annual election of officers of the Columbian Club, composed of employees of Columbia Pictures, held this week in New York, Lillian Stark was reelected president, while Daniel Heiss and Simon Bell, were elected first and second vice-presidents, respectively. Other officers chosen to fill a second term were Joe Freilberg, treasurer, and Jack Bass, financial secretary. Newly elected officers were: Mimi Levenson, secretary; Elsie McKee, assistant secretary; Shevie Chason, chairman of the board of governors, and Robert Lane, press representative.

VILLAGE FAMILIES SPEND $10 TO $16 YEARLY ON FILMS, U. S. ESTIMATES

One-Third of Outlay for Recreation Goes to Motion Picture Theatres, Department of Agriculture Says

The Government announced at Washington Thursday that between 72 and 85 per cent of native-born American non-relief families in smaller communities make regular expenditures for motion picture attendance, the number varying according to geographical locations, and that each family spends from $10 to $16 yearly in admissions, which represents from 30 to 36 per cent of the family's total annual expenditures for recreations and amusements. Only villages were investigated.

The recreation and amusement-expenditure study was made by the Government as part of a nationwide survey of how much money the average American village family earns and how it is spent—the first survey of its kind ever to be undertaken by a federal agency. The information was collected only from families that contained husband and wife both native-born and that had not received relief from federal or state governments at any time within a year.

Using the Bureau of Home Economics of the Department of Agriculture as the surveying medium, and "A Study of Consumer Purchases," as the title of the investigation, the Government selected 140 so-called "typical" American villages in a cross-section of the United States, in Vermont and Massachusetts, as representative of New England; in Pennsylvania, Ohio, Michigan, Wisconsin, Illinois and Iowa; in Kansas, Colorado, Montana and the Dakotas; in Georgia, Mississippi and the Carolinas; and in California, Oregon and Washington.

"Increasingly Important"

"This family-living study has given illustrative figures to bear out the belief that both the motion picture and the automobile have assumed an increasingly important place in American village life," it was pointed out by Dr. Louise Stanley, chief of the Agriculture Department's Bureau of Home Economics. "Even in villages too small to have a movie, the automobile makes accessible the picture shows of the neighboring towns and cities."

In the 140 villages where investigations were conducted, department representatives secured detailed accounts of amusement expenses for a twelve-month period from 9,407 families, showing how much was spent for paid admissions to film theatres; for games and sports, including equipment, supplies, fees and licenses; for radios and musical instruments; for entertaining and social dues, and for children's toys and family pets. Attendance or expenditure totals on amusements other than films have not yet been disclosed.

Additional Reports

In 14 Vermont and Massachusetts villages, 733 families were interviewed, 80.6 per cent of whom had available money for motion pictures, the average expenditure being $12 per year, or 30.5 per cent of all recreation expenditures.

In Pennsylvania, Ohio, Michigan, Wisconsin, Illinois and Iowa, 46 villages were visited and

(a) Only native born white families are included in all regions except in the Southeast, where native born Negro families were studied separately.

(b) Percentages are based on the total number of families.

(c) Averages are based on the total number of families.

(d) These percentages were computed by dividing the average amount spent for movies by average total recreation expenditures.

3,044 families interviewed; 72.5 per cent had film money available, and the average yearly expenditure was $10, or 29.2 per cent of all recreation expenditures.

Twenty-two villages were visited and 1,101 families interviewed in Kansas, North and South Dakota, Colorado and Montana; 85.4 per cent reported they were able to attend motion picture shows, and the average annual expenditure was $16, or 29.7 per cent.

In California, Oregon and Washington, 85.5 per cent of 1,464 families in 24 villages report expenditures available for theatres, the average expenditure being $15, or 29.1 per cent, and in North and South Carolina, Georgia and Mississippi, 2,092 families were interviewed of which 85.2 per cent had money to spend for motion pictures, the average being $16, or 36 per cent of all amusement spending.

Asks Klan Case Dropped

E. Marvin Underwood, federal judge in Atlanta, Ga., this week took under advisement a motion by Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc., and Vitagraph, Inc., to dismiss a $100,000 damage suit brought against them by Knights of the Ku Klux Klan. The Klan charges the film "Black Legion" identified several characters as Klan members and made certain damaging references to the Klan. The suit was filed last August.

Modernizations of Equipment Are Offered by Motiograph

Motiograph, Inc., will offer a complete line of modernizations for late type theatre sound systems of Western Electric manufacture, according to Leslie R. Abbott, vice-president in charge of sales. These modernizations will be sold through the Motiograph company's national leader organization.

Altec Service will make the installation of the new equipment units. Mr. Abbott pointed out that the company's entry into the modernization field marked no departure from its policy of refusing to sell component parts of its Mirrophonic Sound System, since the necessary equipment for re-vamping obsolescent theatre installations would be sold only on four engineered options or plans. Which one of the four options will apply in individual cases depend entirely upon the type, age and condition of the equipment.

Filmexport Moves Offices

Filmexport, French producers of the Sesue Hayakawa, films and Maurice DeKobra products, have moved their home office to 122 Avenue des Champs-Elysees, Paris.

JOHN O'CONNOR NEW HEAD OF RKO THEATRES

Pandro Berman Is Given a New Contract in Complete Charge of Production

Executive personnel moves effected this week in Radio-Keith-Orpheum included the appointment of John O'Connor, formerly chief film booker, to have complete charge of the corporation's 100 theatres, succeeding Nate Blumberg, who resigned last December to accept the presidency of Universal Pictures; and, the signing of a new contract giving Pandro S. Berman complete charge of production in Hollywood. (Mr. O'Connor's picture is on page 11.)

Continuing its practice of promoting from the ranks, RKO named Fred Meyers, a theatre divisional manager, to succeed Mr. O'Connor as chief film buyer, and promoted Max Fellerman as assistant to Mr. Meyers. He formerly was a booker for the circuit in the east, and now will have charge of all bookings. Bill Howard remains as head of the vaudeville department, and there will be no other circuit realignments.

Three weeks ago the basic points of the new-management program advocated by Irving Trust Company, as trustee, were effected, including the decision of Leo Spitz to continue as RKO president and the election of J. R. McDonough, a former RKO president, to a vice-presidency and membership on the directorate.

Appointment Expected

Mr. O'Connor's appointment as a vice-president and general manager of the RKO theatres was expected daily after Mr. Spitz decided to continue with the company, as the president had announced he favored filling Mr. Blumberg's position "from within the ranks."

For the last three months Mr. O'Connor has been in virtual charge of the department with some additional theatre operation functions being handled by L. E. Thompson, who continues in his post as consultant on labor affairs for the circuit. Mr. O'Connor has not yet appointed his successor as head film booker.

The new theatre executive started his career in the motion picture industry as a film booker for the Peerless Booking Corporation in 1921. That organization did all of the booking for Keith, Proctor and Morse circuits. With the expansion and consolidation of RKO theatre interests, Mr. O'Connor joined the home office staff. He was head booker for the last five years.

Berman's Revised Contract

Under the provisions of Mr. Berman's revised contract, which has slightly more than two years to run, the studio executive will continue to participate in the profits of "A" pictures, which he will continue to produce, and also will receive an increase in salary.

With the conclusion of deliberations on management, Mr. Spitz, Mr. Berman, Mr. McDonough and Jules Levy left New York for production conferences in Hollywood.

The discussions, scheduled to get under way the latter part of this week, may continue for two or three weeks, it was said.

One of the points to be decided upon at the conferences is the number of pictures to be produced by Mr. Berman.

Mr. McDonough will remain at the studio indefinitely in his capacity as financial liaison between the home office and the studio.

Another postponement of the hearing on the RKO reorganization plan will be requested by proponents of the plan in United States district court, New York, Friday.

'Four As' Resolves To Oppose IATSE On Jurisdiction

The international board of the Associated Actors and Artistes of America this week unanimously approved a resolution to maintain its jurisdiction over actors' unions and to combat any efforts which the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees may make to obtain control over any performers' units.

Also joining in the endorsement of the resolution was the American Federation of Actors.

At the same meeting the AF of A was granted jurisdiction over night clubs and presentation house performers, which heretofore was held by Chorus Equity. Under the conditions imposed on the AF of A, with the granting of the disputed jurisdiction, the Federation agrees to interchangeability of Four A's cards within its domain; agrees to submit to the Four A's board for its approval within 90 days its method of classification of chorus groups and the wage and hour schedules which the federation will attempt to set up in the night club and presentation house fields, and agrees to permit a Four A's committee to join in the designation of officers and members of the federation's organizing committee for the new fields.

Autonomy for the Screen Writers' Guild was voted this week by the combined membership of the Authors' League of America. Under an amendment to the league's bylaws, the guild becomes an affiliate, rather than a member unit of the league.

Gustave Gerber, attorney for the Theatrical Managers, Agents and Treasurers' Union in New York, this week announced he expected preliminary discussions will get under way next week with theatre operators on contracts granting recognition and designation of the union as the bargaining agents.

No decision was reached by the cities committee of the New York legislature on reporting the two-man in-a-booth bill.

Legislative Moves In Four States

With the approaching Constitutional Convention in Albany, New York, the state legislature prepared to clear its decks for adjournment late next week (March 18th to 20th probably). Action of an affirmative or negative nature is due early next week on many bills affecting the motion picture business.

Other states where legislative action was reported this week were Massachusetts, Kansas and Virginia. In Toronto, Canada, the attendance of juveniles at midnight shows in film theatres, whether on Sunday or any other night, has been barred under curfew regulations introduced by the Board of Police Commissioners.

The policy in the New York Legislature this session has been to delay action on important and controversial bills, which nearly all are to be shunted into the hands of Constitutional Convention delegates, who convene in Albany April 3rd. It is expected that film taxes, general sales imposts and certain other so-called "theatre reforms" resolutions will be introduced into the Constitutional Convention.

Realizing that there was no immediate likelihood of the New York Assembly accepting his proposal for a five cent tax on films, B. J. Moran of Brooklyn abandoned his intention of pressing for the imposition of the levy.

The House of the Massachusetts Legislature has rejected a measure which would have authorized stage dancing in theatres on Sunday. The removal of 106 billboards in the state was ordered by Commissioner William F. Callahan of the public works department. The action was taken upon the recommendation of the division of outdoor advertising. The signs are used by John Donnelly and Sons Company.

Claudette Colbert, Myrna Loy and Mae West have been invited by Representative Francis X. Coyne of the Massachusetts Legislature to appear at a public hearing within the next three weeks to lend support to the "True Name" bill. The measure would compel screen and stage stars to use their legal names.

In its closing meetings, the special session of the Kansas Legislature turned down a bill which would have given three per cent to those collecting the two per cent sales tax, including exhibitors, to offset the expense of, and loss in, collection. The house committee on assessment and taxation took no action on the bill, which was introduced by Thale Skovgard of Washington County.

The bill introduced in the Virginia Legislature by Delegate H. M. Bandy to prohibit the exhibition of motion pictures and other amusements on Sunday, was rejected at a committee hearing.

American Films, Inc., has been formed in Kansas City with W. L. Norris, president; Paul Humston, secretary, and Eleanor Bell, treasurer. The company, whose personnel formerly made up Consolidated Film Distributors and Monogram Film Company of Kansas City, Inc., will distribute independent product for the Kansas City area. Included in its present lineup are 10 United Artists features being re-released by Artcinema Associates, Inc.

NEW ATTACK ON RADIO IN CONGRESS; WARNER TO GO ON AIR FOR GRUEN

Congressman McFarlane Plans Measure to Place 10 Per Cent Tax on Broadcasters' Gross Receipts

Despite claims of supporters of the Congressional Boylan bill which would levy a federal wattage tax on radio broadcasting stations, the Federal Communications Committee this week declared itself opposed to the measure, terming the proposed tax base neither equitable nor adequate.

The criticism of the measure was filed with the House Ways and Means Committee, which is considering the bill, at the request of the chairman, Robert L. Doughton, representative of North Carolina.

Following release of the FCC letter, W. D. McFarlane, Texas representative, announced his intention of introducing another in the series of radio tax and censorship measures which has been before congressmen during the current session. Under Mr. McFarlane's plan, a 10 per cent tax would be imposed on the gross receipts of broadcasting stations.

The congressman said the receipts tax would meet all the requirements as to a scientific base, which the FCC said was missing in the Boylan bill. Mr. McFarlane estimated the revenue under his bill would amount to about $140,000,000 a year, a greater sum, he said, than the government would derive under the wattage bill.

In his letter to the committee, Frank R. McNinch, chairman of the FCC, emphasized that the commission is not opposed to the principle of "levying a tax upon, or charging a fee for, the exercise of the privilege of broadcasting . . ."

News Material Exemption

Elimination, effective July 1st, of the present tax on the use of radio facilities for news dissemination is provided for in the new revenue revision bill reported to the House of Representatives by the Ways and Means Committee. The new measure provides that the exemption granted in the Revenue Act of 1932 to news material transmitted by wire should be extended to similar material by radio.

"The radio is now being widely used in news dissemination," the committee reported. "All news dissemination should be encouraged and accordingly the amendment extends the exemption to cover payments for services or facilities utilized in the collection of news for radio broadcasting or in the dissemination of news by means of radio broadcasting."

Calls Wattage Basis Unfair

In his discussion of the Boylan bill, introduced by John J. Boylan, New York representative, Mr. McNinch wrote:

"The bill is apparently designed to produce revenue considerably in excess of the cost of administering the provisions of the communications act, which deals with radio broadcast stations.

"The tax base prescribed in the bill, namely, the number of watts of authorized power which a station is licensed to use, does not represent an adequate or equitable basis for such a tax levy; nor is it equitable or proper to classify

RADIO TALK HELD FREE OF LIBEL

Russell Jordan, judge of the district court, Des Moines, this week ruled that the acts complained of in a $100,000 damage suit brought by Harold M. Cooper did not constitute libel because they were not printed or written.

The libel action was against the Iowa Broadcasting Company; Station WMT of Waterloo; Verne Marshall, publisher, and the Gazette Company of Cedar Rapids. The court held that the broadcasting company was merely furnishing a medium by which Mr. Marshall's speech was transmitted to listeners.

The Iowa statute defines libel as the printing or writing of malicious defamation.

stations arbitrarily into three groups—those authorized to use less than 1,000 watts; those authorized to use between 1,000 and 10,000 watts, and those authorized to use more than 10,000 watts—for the purpose of fixing a rate. "There is no consistent or logical justification for basing a tax on radio broadcasting stations solely on wattage, without regard to income, type of service, geographical coverage or other pertinent conditions.

"The commission's objections to this bill should not be taken to be objections on the part of the commission to the principle of levying a tax upon, or charging a fee for, the exercise of the privilege of broadcasting, either for the purpose of reimbursing the government for the expense incident to the regulation or licensing of broadcasting stations or for general revenue purposes.

"If, however, any such tax or fee is to be levied or charged, the commission is of the opinion that there should be some proper relationship between the tax base and the tax rate and the purpose for which it is imposed.

Kleckner Asks RFC Aid for Exhibitors

Adoption of the legislation proposed to extend the Reconstruction Finance Corporation's financial facilities to small business was urged in Washington this week by Joseph B. Kleckner, president of Motiograph, Inc., in testimony before the RFC subcommittee of the Senate Finance Committee.

Mr. Kleckner suggested that the government establish a national system of privately-owned, government-supervised industrial loan banks to provide small businesses with funds for rehabilitation purposes alone. He returned Wednesday to Chicago.

A plan to make Government loans available to small exhibitors will be discussed in Washington next week by Harry Brandt, president of the Independent Theatre Owners Association of New York.

"Acting Academy" Nucleus of New Show; Agency Quotes Exhibitor Approval of M-G-M Program 'Good News of 1938'

Warner Brothers' second venture into the field of radio will be inaugurated Friday, when the studio goes on the air with a half hour program sponsored by the Gruen Watch Company. The studio's initial radio program exploiting its talent was "Your Hollywood Parade" under the sponsorship of the American Tobacco Company. This program goes off the air March 23rd.

While no definite announcement has been made as to whether Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will continue its radio tieup with General Foods Corporation, Benton and Bowles, advertising agency handling the program, this week said it has a collection of exhibitors' newspaper advertisements which indicate many theatre operators are not hostile to the production, "Good News of 1938."

Many exhibitors advertising MGM pictures in their local newspapers have inserted lines calling the public's attention to the fact that the players in the picture are heard in "Good News of 1938."

A 15-week extension of the broadcasting time now occupied by the MGM show, was taken last week by General Foods Corporation for Maxwell House Coffee but the status of the contract with MGM is not scheduled to come up for consideration until next week. The extension gives General Foods the National Broadcasting Company red network Thursdays, 9 to 10 P.M., Eastern Standard Time, up until the end of June.

The new Warner program will utilize unknown players on the Warner Brothers lot, plus appearance of studio "name" talent. It will emanate from the Warner station in Los Angeles, KFVB, going by wire and transcription to 23 others throughout the country, and will consist of tabloid versions of past Warner pictures. The title of the production will be "Encore Theatre, presented by Warner Brothers Studio Academy of Acting."

Under the terms of the 13-week deal with Gruen, which includes options, the studio will have complete control of the program, the point which caused the dispute over "Your Hollywood Parade." The only Gruen participation will be in the commercial announcements.

Other program renewals included the decision of Lever Brothers to continue its Al Jolson program for Lifebuoy under a 52-week contract renewal effective March 22nd. The program originates in Hollywood and is heard Tuesdays on the CBS network.

Jimmy Fidler was signed again to continue his Hollywood gossip programs for Proctor & Gamble for another 12 months. The program is broadcast in behalf of Drene shampoo Tuesdays and Fridays over the NBC red network.

A thrice-weekly Hollywood chatter feature will be inaugurated by Station WRC, NBC outlet in Washington.

A recommendation that radio broadcasts of partisan political speeches, propaganda and commercial programs be barred from the public schools in New York was made this week by a special committee appointed by Dr. Harold G. Campbell, superintendent of schools.

PENNSYLVANIA GROUP HITS 'POLITICAL CENSOR'

Films Should Have Same Freedom as Press, Says Philadelphia Civil Rights Conference

Recent embroilments in Pennsylvania over the censoring of so-called "political propaganda" pictures, such as those dealing with the Spanish civil war, this week brought further repercussions when the Philadelphia Civil Rights Conference attacked George H. Earle, Governor, for publicly posing the question: "Would such foreign pictures shown in the midst of an American depression be a danger?"

The Civil Rights Conference, through its committee on censorship, asserts: "To discriminate against them because of their place of origin is far too dangerous a portent to be countenanced by any person sincerely concerned with the preservation of the democratic traditions of America."

To another question posed by the Governor, "Should freedom of the press be extended to the movies?" the Civil Rights Conference answered with a resounding "Yes."

In an address to the Shrine Club in Philadelphia, two weeks ago, Governor Earle invited opinions regarding the standards of Pennsylvania's state censorship laws and possible extension of them.

The Conference, of which Alfred L. Ellis is executive secretary, is investigating "all phases of motion picture censorship in Pennsylvania," and says it will publish its findings "in the very near future."

"No Monopoly on Propaganda"

In its reply to Governor Earle, as "approved" by Miss Sophia Dulos, Edward S. Mead and Mrs. Arthur Goldsmith, members, the Conference said, "European films have no monopoly on propaganda. Artificial sets manufactured in Hollywood are reputedly more effective than those made elsewhere. The technique of propaganda differs and there is no reason to believe that the effect caused by skillful omission is any the more admirable."

"It seems self-evident that whether a film is good or bad depends on its inherent qualities and not its place of origin," continued the Civil Rights committee, adding: "Worthwhile films contribute to the cultural life of our country."

"In the words of Judge Louis F. Leventhal," it was said, "Censorship under our theory of government is tolerated only as a necessary evil."

"... We certainly do feel that you are embarking on a most dangerous course when you resort to asking such leading questions as you did in this case," the committee told the Governor. "The bill of rights is and must remain the most important part of the constitution, whether we are in a state of prosperity or depression. ..."

"Freedom of speech implies an opinion or attitude, whether it be expressed in terms of the printed word or film image accompanied by the spoken word. There was no stronger editorial against lynching than the pictorial editorial of 'Fury,' and it is doubtful whether there ever was a more effective indictment of prejudice, and injustice, than 'The Life of Emile Zola.' It is well known that the subject matter of those films was once the center of violent controversy and both pictures are based not only on historical facts but also on scripts which fall under the precept of freedom of speech.

There is indeed a definite affinity between the printed word and the visual image of the film—one principle of freedom must apply to both."

Canadian Censors Deny Banning "Political" Film

Denial that a newsreel, entitled "China, 1937," had been barred by the board of censors of British Columbia, as reported from Victoria, was made by John B. Hughes, chief censor.

"I never heard of the picture, and certainly never saw it," he said.

A Victoria despatch quoted Alfred Heathcote, chairman of a Chinese "aid committee," as saying the picture had been banned.

About two weeks ago the British Columbia censors ordered several cuts in a picture, "China Strikes Back," and the action was upheld by the appeal board. As a result, the film was withdrawn by its sponsors.

Political Groups Show Two Films in Cincinnati

"The Spanish Earth" and "China Strikes Back," both so-called "political propaganda films," were shown on a double program at Cincinnati's Emory Auditorium last Saturday under joint sponsorship of the Japanese Boycott Council and the North American Committee to Aid Spanish Democracy.

Boston to Hold Hearings; New Jersey Talks Censorship

Public hearings on the two censorship bills before the Massachusetts legislature will be held by the Committee on State Administration, in Boston, on Friday. One bill would have a commission formed to license films. The other calls for a licensing and censoring bureau formed within the Department of Education. Both bills carry heavy levies on every reel exhibited in Massachusetts.

Republican Assemblyman Kerner on Tuesday introduced a bill in the New Jersey legislature to create a state censor board of two men and one woman.

Censorship Eliminations Drop Off in Ohio

The smallest number of eliminations for any one month in more than two years were ordered by the Ohio censor in February, when 13 cuts were made from a total of 525 reels reviewed. This compares with 451 reels and 24 cuts in January.

New York Censors Grant Appeals Postponement

An eleventh hour request for further time delayed last Saturday's scheduled review of two films by the New York State Board of Regents subcommittee in charge of appeals from censors' rulings. Arthur Garfield Hays, attorney for Arthur T. Mayer and Joseph Burstyn, who hold distributorship rights of "Remous" in New York, asked for a week's postponement. Hearings will be held in New York Saturday.

Charles A. Brind, Jr., director of the Department of Education's Law Division, will submit briefs for the Motion Picture Division, while its director, Irwin Esmond, will explain reasons for rejection of the pictures.

"I Vant To Be Alone," owned by Samjux Corporation of New York, is another subject of appeals.

CUTS IN U. S. FILMS DROP IN AUSTRALIA

The Commonwealth Film Censors' 1937 report shows that the percentage of eliminations in American films was 15 per cent in 1937, compared to 52 per cent in 1933. It also shows that the eliminations in British films was 28 per cent and 27 per cent for corresponding periods. British pictures imported into Australia showed a decline from 27 per cent in 1934 to 20 per cent in 1937.

Film critics commenting on the report declared that the shrinkage of British film importations was attributable to a deterioration of the standard that was attaining the loyalty of Australia, which had done more than any other Dominion to find them a permanent home.

The report remarked also on Australia's backwardness in the use of educational films, which in some states were hardly shown at all. Only six Australian films on the average have been exported annually in the last five years.

National Supply Meets on Coast

Officials of National Theatre Supply Company held a two-day sales conference in Los Angeles last week during the course of which the new Simplex E-7 projector and the new sound system with it were discussed. W. E. Green, president, presided.

Among those who attended were: Earl G. Hines, president of General Theatres Equipment and International Projector Corp.; Herbert Griffin, vice-president, International Projector; George Friedl, Jr., director of sound engineering division of International Projector; E. M. Hartley of General Theatres Equipment, and Oscar S. Oldknow, western and southern district manager of National Theatre Supply.

The following branch managers of National Theatre Supply attended: Jap Morgan, Denver; Count deStafano, Los Angeles; Lee Scott, Salt Lake City; Lloyd Ownbey, San Francisco, and Heaton Randall, Seattle.

James Frank, Jr., executive of National Theatre Supply, said this week that nearly 1,500 exhibitors, theatre managers and projectionists attended the five-day showing of the new Simplex E-7 mechanism at the Lincoln hotel in New York.

Walker to Aid Charity Drive

Frank C. Walker, Comerford circuit executive, has been named as treasurer of the Cardinal's Committee of the Laity for the 1938 Catholic Charities Appeal. The invitation to take the post was extended by Cardinal Hayes of New York. The drive will start in 370 parishes on March 27th and will continue to April 4th. A general public appeal will be conducted by special gift committees of men and women from March 10th to March 26th.

NEW NATIONAL SCHOOL FILM PLAN; 300 THEATRES IN NEW YORK TIEUP

285 Educational Film Libraries Pledged to Support Program of Association Authorized by American Council

Educators' increasing interest in motion pictures was displayed this week when the American Council on Education revealed that representatives of 285 educational film libraries of schools and other institutions of learning have pledged themselves to join a proposed national Educational Film Library Association and to support its five-point program.

Authorization to found and to incorporate the new association was voted the American Council last week when the 285 librarians met in Atlantic City after the National Education Association convention. Dr. George F. Zook is president of the council.

Under present plans the association's aims will be to:

1. Service as a clearing house for information on educational films.
2. Act as liaison between producers and educational film libraries.
3. Establish standards of practice in teaching with the use of films.
4. Promote the wider use of films in schools.
5. Encourage production of pictures on subject matter that schools want.

The Atlantic City meeting was the climax to two regional meetings held by librarians within the last two months. The first session was in New York City two months ago and was attended by representatives of libraries in eastern cities.

One of the chief difficulties in obtaining more widespread use of films in classrooms, it was pointed out at the New York meeting, is that most of the available films are either of an industrial nature or contain advertising. Films of this kind, the librarians agreed, should be eliminated.

A similar attitude was taken by librarians in the West and Middlewest when they met in Chicago.

It was decided at both sessions that a third meeting should be held and, because of the fact the NEA convention was attended by representatives of virtually all films libraries, it was agreed to gather in Atlantic City.

Although the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America was not represented at the Atlantic City meeting, it was understood that one of the tasks to be undertaken by the new association will be to aid in the distribution of the 1,000 non-current theatrical short subjects selected from the vaults of producers last summer by the MPPDA's Advisory Committee on the Use of Motion Pictures in Education. Dr. Mark A. May is chairman.

The American Federation of Actors has been designated to supply the entertainment at the American Federation of Labor Union Label and Industrial Exhibition at the Music Hall in Cincinnati, May 16-21.

PUPILS VIEW 162 FILMS IN 2 MONTHS

Brooklyn high school students viewed 162 Hollywood productions during September and October of 1937, Joseph Mersand, director of the Institute of Adult Education of Boys High School, Brooklyn, reported this week in disclosing the results of a study of the students' preference among films.

The study, he said, was undertaken to determine the influence of films on students outside of the school building. Of the 162 films seen, the pupils indicated the greatest preference for "Dead End" and "Captains Courageous." "Certainly, teachers need not be pessimistic about the tastes of their pupils when the majority prefer such pictures," Mr. Mersand commented.

Other films, in order of preference, were "Varsity Show," "The Road Back," "100 Men and a Girl," "Wee Willie Winkie," "Broadway Melody of 1938," "A Day at the Races," and "Double or Nothing."

Amateurs to Show Films at "Party"

Seven motion pictures, produced by amateurs, will be included on the program March 23rd when Duncan MacD. Little presents his "ninth annual movie party" at the McMillin Academic Theatre, New York, as a part of "Motion Picture Parade," a series conducted by the division of film study of Columbia University.

The seven films were chosen by a "jury" composed of Dan Anderson, feature writer of the New York Sun; Howard Barnes, New York Herald-Tribune film critic; Wladyslaw T. Benda, artist; Eileen Creelman, film critic of the New York Sun; Arthur L. Gale, editor of Movie Makers Magazine; Professor Mack C. Gorham of Columbia University; George P. Mills, director of the 16 mm. department of Pathe News; Frank S. Nugent, film critic of the New York Times, and Professor Russell Potter, of Columbia.

Mr. Little stressed the point that the "movie party" is not a contest. No prizes or other awards are offered.

The films to be shown and the producers are "Eclipse over Peru," Cinecoles; "Way to Victory," Photo Patrons Club of the Newark East Side High School; "Porpoise Oil," Dr. Alexander Leighton; "Voyageur's Trail," Mr. Little; "The Story of the Kentucky Derby, 1937," Lillian McNulty; "West Texas Panther Hunt," Tom D. Park, and "Mystery in the Forest," Khoji Tsukamoto.

Schools' Motion Picture Committee Says Its Selections Influence Theatre Attendance of 70,000 Juveniles in 70 Schools

Founded less than three years ago when the managers of five New York theatres agreed to lend their support, the Schools' Motion Picture Committee now has 300 theatres in the metropolitan area of New York City cooperating in supplying weekend programs for pupils in 70 schools.

Claiming that its selections and recommendations influence the theatre attendance of approximately 70,000 juveniles, the committee emphasizes that it is not a censorship body but a group of parents and teachers undertaking to survey entire programs for juveniles instead of features only.

Short subjects or sequences in newsreels considered objectionable will result in committee refusal to approve a program as quickly as a feature, Mrs. Irving Heyman, of the United Parents Association, and secretary of the committee, explained.

The objectives of the committee, as enumerated by Mrs. Heyman, are:

1. "To have motion picture theatres clean and in safe physical shape in every residential neighborhood in greater New York and to have them show entire weekend programs with shorts, trailers, newsreels, vaudeville acts and feature pictures suitable for junior and senior high school students with no bank nights or chance games during the weekend period.
2. "To have several motion picture houses in easily accessible neighborhoods throughout Greater New York showing Saturday morning or all day Saturday programs for children under 12 years of age. These programs are never to run more than two hours and preferably an hour and a half.
3. "To influence producers to make more short subjects suitable for younger children and to convince the producers there is a large family audience for such pictures.
4. "To promote visual education and classes in motion picture appreciation through faculty groups of teachers from primary, junior and senior high schools, private and public, that are affiliated with the Schools Motion Picture Committee.
5. "To contact all like-minded groups, learn all we can from them, and where possible, to work with them."

"We merely ask for permission to view certain programs so that we may request the manager to delete sections we feel harmful," Mrs. Heyman said. "If the manager leaves them in his program, we merely do not add his theatre to our recommended list."

After reviewing pictures, using the same set of standards employed for the Horace Mann School Bulletin, the committee sends a weekly release to newspapers, listing the theatres in which "appropriate" programs will be shown.

The motion picture editors of all newspapers, except the tabloids and the New York Journal-American, publish the committee's recommended list each Friday. News and dramatic commentators on Station WNYC also mention the decisions.

Last week's approved list contained the names of 66 out of a possible 300 theatres.

Paramount Broadway Corporation Reports Loss; Receipts Decline in Canadian Theatres

Declaration of dividends by Loew's, Inc., and by Twentieth Century-Fox and a report by Sonotone Corporation of a 209 per cent increase in net profit for 1937 over 1936 highlighted this week's financial news. Paramount Broadway Corporation reported a net operating loss of $236,852 for 1937 and gross receipts of theatres in Canada declined 2.8 per cent.

Time, Inc., announced a loss of $19,000 on the operation of "March of Time" during 1937. Western Electric declared a 25 cent dividend on the capital stock, payable March 31st to stockholders of record March 25th.

John D. Hertz, New York director of Paramount, disposed of 1,853 shares of the company's second preferred stock, held by him through Lehman Brothers. This comprised the largest of three January stock trades of film company officers, directors and principal stockholders reported in the semi-monthly summary of the Securities and Exchange Commission. At the close of the month, Mr. Hertz still held 2,700 shares of Paramount second preferred stock through the banking firm.

The only other film stock sales reported involved 100 shares of Grand National common disposed of by Kirk W. Todd, Pittsburgh, director, who held 150 shares at the end of January, and 700 shares of Warner Brothers preferred stock disposed of by Renraw, Inc., which still held 12,800 shares.

Acquisition of seven shares of Loew's Boston Theatres common stock was reported by Loew's, Inc., which held 98,552 shares January 31st.

Reports on the stock holdings of persons becoming officers or directors of corporations included returns from Matthew Fox, Universal, and Leon Fromkess, Monogram, both elected to office in January, neither of whom held any of the equity stocks of his corporation.

The dividend declared by Loew's, Inc., was 50 cents a share on the common stock, payable March 31st to stockholders of record March 12th.

37½ Cent 20th-Fox Dividend

Twentieth Century-Fox directors declared a cash dividend of 37½ cents per share for the first quarter of 1938 on the outstanding preferred stock of the corporation payable March 31st to stockholders of record at the close of business March 24th. The board also voted a cash dividend of 50 cents per share on the outstanding common stock, also payable March 31st to stockholders of record March 24th.

Sonotone, manufacturer of equipment for both private and theatre use of deaf persons, reported a net profit of $205,221, after taxes and other charges, for 1937, compared to a net of $66,213 in 1936. The 1937 net is equal to 25 cents per share on 789,322 shares of common stock, while the previous year's net equalled 7 cents per share.

In addition to the net operating loss reported by the Paramount Broadway Corporation, which operates the Paramount Theatre and office

FOX PAYROLLS TOTAL 6,000

Including studio workers, Twentieth Century-Fox employs more than 6,000 persons weekly, according to figures compiled by J. H. Lang, assistant secretary of the company.

There are 500 employed in the home office, 1,200 in the 37 branches in the United States and Canada, and more than 900 in the 132 offices and agencies abroad.

The New York home office of Movietone News employs about 150; three times that number represent the newsreel in other parts of the world.

building at Times Square in New York, the corporation reported a combined deficit at the end of the year of $449,143.

Income from operations amounted to $1,007,034.76 and expenses totaled $831,449. Loss on sale of capital assets for the period aggregated $17,521, with a balance of $254,374 transferred to the deficit account. The deficit at the end of 1936 was $454,314.28.

Canadian Theatre Statistics

The Canadian statistics showed that Toronto, with 102 theatres, had a total paid attendance of 22,301,324 for the year, the gross receipts being placed at $5,198,000. Montreal's 62 theatres had an aggregate attendance of 22,006,918 for the 12 months and gross receipts totaled $4,797,300. The average admission price in Toronto was 23.3 cents, while that for Montreal was 21.8 cents.

The highest admission price average was in London, Ont., where the figure was 27.6 cents. St. John, N. B., had the lowest average, 19.2 cents.

Aggregate attendance at the 32 theatres in Winnipeg, Canada's third largest city, was 7,205,539, with total gross receipts of $1,592,000. In Vancouver, B. C., attendance totaled 8,950,627 with a gross of $1,850,000 for the year.

The four largest cities of the Dominion, having one-fourth of all theatres in the country, had slightly more than 60 millions paid attendance during 1937, with total gross receipts of approximately $13,420,000.

The Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported the receipts of 66 film exchanges in Canada for 1936 totaled $7,547,700, an increase of 8.2 per cent as compared to 1935. The annual payroll of the exchanges was $1,008,400 and there were 272 women and 378 men employed.

Time, Inc., reported a loss for the calendar year 1937 of $19,000 on the operation of the film series, "March of Time." The reel brought in $1,162,000 in revenue from more than 10,000 theatres throughout the world.

Blank Souvenirs Presented

Wrist watches engraved with a notation of the 25th anniversary dinner to A. H. Blank in Des Moines in November have been presented to the Governors of Nebraska and Iowa, who attended. The presentations were made by Ralph Branton, general manager of Tri-States Theatres, Inc.

Studios Estimate Damage by Storm At Over $300,000

With studio damages estimated at more than $300,000, Hollywood executives and employees of the motion picture industry this week looked back upon the worst storm in Southern California in the last 60 years and began concentrating on getting production schedules back to a normal basis.

The film industry suffered its greatest losses through the halting of shooting. Thousands of workers were marooned in their homes and in automobiles on their way to work Wednesday when the downpour reached its height, cutting off North Hollywood and Burbank where the Universal, Republic and Warner Brothers lots are located.

Val Paul, studio manager at Universal, estimated losses in sets at $75,000. Power failed completely at Republic and much of the studio property was swept away. Warner Brothers continued shooting for some time Tuesday but power line failure caused an early halt, as was the case at Universal. Warner Brothers estimated the loss of sets at $25,000.

Approximately 15 theatres of the Fox West Coast circuit were closed and business in those which remained open was slight.

Selznick International and the Hal Roach studios, in Culver City, sent their workers home early. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, also in Culver City, stopped shooting early and reported $10,000 damages on the lot.

The Scotch village set being used for Twentieth Century-Fox' "Kidnapped," was destroyed and will be rebuilt at an estimated cost of $20,000.

Workers at Paramount were kept busy piling sandbags in studio streets to protect the film vaults. The camera department was flooded but shooting continued.

RKO was forced to rearrange shooting schedules but it reported no property damage. No damage was reported at United Artists nor at Columbia.

Only one death was reported among employees of studios. It was that of Warren Atherton, studio technician, who was drowned in Glendale.

For a time on Thursday it was feared radio programs emanating from the coast would have to be cancelled but, for the most part, this was not necessary.

AMPA Votes Changes In Annual Ad Award

The Associated Motion Picture Advertisers annual advertising awards will be changed this year, it was decided at a membership meeting at the International Casino in New York last Thursday, following a report by Vincent Trotta, chairman of the awards committee.

Mr. Trotta submitted three proposals as a result of the committee's deliberations. These were that the type of awards remain as heretofore, or that a reclassification include awards for the best work done by the advertising departments in various divisions, or to make first, second and third awards to departments for best all around campaigns.

Pickford Reports UA Sale Delayed By Tax Questions

Delays in the negotiations for the purchase by John Hay Whitney and David O. Selznick, with Samuel Goldwyn and Alexander Korda, of the United Artists stock held by Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, Sr., and Charles Chaplin, have been caused by the necessity of ironing out attendant tax problems, Miss Pickford said last week when she arrived in New York from Chicago.

The government, she said, would consider the stock transaction an outright sale, and the taxes to be paid by herself, Mr. Chaplin and Mr. Fairbanks on the transaction would be heavy. While refusing to divulge the amount which would be involved in the deal, Miss Pickford indicated that substantial cash payments would be made.

The price is being negotiated, she said. Mr. Korda and Mr. Goldwyn, a few months ago, carried on negotiations to buy the stock and under that deal they would have paid $6,000,000 for the three-fifths stock interest.

Meanwhile, John R. Sutro, a member of the board of directors of London Films, announced, before sailing for England last week, that nothing conclusive regarding the future of Mr. Korda in United States was decided upon during three weeks' stay in this country. However, Mr. Sutro added, Mr. Korda will continue with United Artists.

Under the pending United Artists deal, Miss Pickford, Mr. Chaplin and Mr. Fairbanks would be given the privilege of a release. Mr. Chaplin plans to continue to produce, Mr. Fairbanks' plans are indefinite and Miss Pickford has no present plans for reentering production.

"Our policy," Miss Pickford said, "has always been to maintain an open door for the best producers who seek a release for product commensurate with United Artists' high standards. I am sure that Goldwyn, Korda and Selznick, fine producers themselves, will continue the same policy."

Miss Pickford also told reporters that she considers double bills as the greatest menace to the motion picture industry. She said she deplores the combination of two large-scale productions on one bill at an admission price of 20 cents.

Miss Pickford spent two weeks with her husband, Buddy Rogers, in Chicago, and plans to remain in New York for six weeks. During her stay in New York she plans to attend to business matters, including the organization of a cosmetics company and the development of a projector device to prevent film fires.

McKay to Resume Private Practice

Willard S. McKay, whose resignation as general counsel for Universal takes effect with the expiration of his contract March 16th, will resume private practice in association with Sol A. Rosenblatt, former NRA film code administrator, and William Jaffe, Mr. McKay, who will continue as special counsel for Universal, will make his headquarters in the International Building, Radio City.

Court Approves 3 Films For Grand National Release

Under a court order filed this week and approved by William P. James, federal court judge in Los Angeles, Phil Goldstone, head of Criterion Pictures, Inc., will produce three "Renfrew of the Royal Mounted" film for distribution through Grand National.

Grand National originally announced four Renfrew pictures, but only one was completed before the company filed a voluntary petition under Section 77B of the bankruptcy law. This week's order authorizing the remaining three Renfrew films was obtained by Edward L. Alperson and Lloyd Wright,

Caravel Ready With Ad Series

"Sponsored" advertising pictures constructed and exploited in the same fashion as theatrical short subjects, including the use of Hollywood "names," studio technicians and talent, and field exploiters, was announced last Friday by Caravel Distributing Corp., Stanley Neal, managing director. The producers even adopted the cocktail party technique of the picture business to make their opening announcement, showing their first under the new policy, a $35,000 three-color Bristol-Myers Ipana Toothpaste cartoon, to some 230 members of national advertisers, advertising agencies, theatre circuit buyers and news and trade press.

The subject itself, entitled "Boy Meets Dog," was animated from Gene Byrnes' "Reg'lar Fellers" comic strip, and contains an entertainment emphasis and a minimum of advertising unique among sponsored reels. Victor McLeod wrote the story, and Rudy Zamora and Frank Tipper were the animators, with backgrounds by Charles Conner and Ray Forkum. The voices of Fred Allen, Joe Penner, Ritz Brothers and Roscoe Ates were used, also lyrics and music by Frank Churchill, who wrote "Three Little Pigs" and "Snow White" for Walt Disney. RKO's and NBC's Nathaniel Shilkert directed the music, and Walter Lantz, responsible for Universal's "Oswald the Rabbit" cartoons, directed.

Claiming a possible gross theatre-audience circulation of some 40,000,000 persons, Mr. Neal said that "Boy Meets Dog" will be the first of a series for various national advertisers, and for which distribution and exploitation plans have been formulating for two years, when the 16-year-old Caravel advertising-film production company first undertook distribution. Opening on April 1st in some 250 first runs along the Atlantic Seaboard the first of the series already has been booked into some 3,500 theatres, according to the company.

The theatre exploiters to be sent on the road will not necessarily concentrate on the sponsored short, but, if the exhibitor so desires, will aid in exploiting his whole program. Mr. Neal said that this will be given first time exploitation attention will be given at the scene of exhibition to an advertising reel. There will be a release monthly, all single reels. All subjects will be in three-color, for the most part in animated cartoons.

A publicity-advertising-exploitation department is now being created at the home office in New York, under direction of Bert Ennis.

Cultural Trends And Music to Be Conference Topic

Leaders in music, radio, the theatre, advertising, education and motion pictures will gather Friday and Saturday at the Lincoln School Auditorium of Teachers College, Columbia University, New York, "to analyze the factors and trends in American recreation and entertainment which influence and shape the culture of the nation."

The conference is sponsored by Junior Programs, Inc., in cooperation with the National Recreation Association, the Radio Committee of the Child Study Association of America and the Association for Arts in Childhood.

Junior Programs, Inc., non-commercial and non-profit organization for selection and production of cultural entertainment for children, was organized four years ago as a women's club project by Mrs. Dorothy L. McFadden.

Among those who will participate in a series of informal discussions, which the general public is invited to attend, will be Lee Pattison, manager of the Metropolitan Opera Company Spring Season; Eddie Dowling, theatrical producer; Julius F. Seebach, director of Program Operations of the Mutual Broadcasting System; Mrs. Olive Sharman of N. W. Ayer and Sons, advertising agency; William P. Montague, Jr., Paramount News; Dr. Sidonie Matsner Gruenberg, Director of the Child Study Association of America; Dr. Rollo G. Reynolds of the Horace Mann School, and approximately 50 other leading representatives of professional, educational and organized audience groups.

Under the general topic of "Audience of Tomorrow," four panel discussions will be held. The first two will be held beginning at 2:00 p. m. on Friday, and the others on Saturday, beginning at 10 o'clock. Mr. Pattison will be discussion leader of the first panel on music; L. Keith Tyler, Ohio State University, will conduct the panel on radio, and Mrs. McFadden will have charge of the discussion of the legitimate theatre.

The speakers who will participate in the fourth panel, "The Motion Pictures and the Audience of Tomorrow," with Dr. Frederic M. Thrasher, technical director of the Metropolitan Motion Picture Council, as discussion leader, are:

V. C. Arnspiger, vice-president of ERPI Classroom Films, Inc.; Mrs. Edmund Cahill, national chairman of motion pictures, Federation of Music Clubs; Eleanor Clarkson, Parents' Magazine; Mrs. Bettina Gunczy, National Board of Review of Motion Pictures; Rita Hochheimer, assistant director, visual instruction, New York City Public Schools; Alice V. Keliher, chairman, Commission on Human Relations; Mrs. Alonzo Klaw, Schools Motion Picture Committee; Mrs. James F. Loomis, chairman, Motion Picture Department, International Federation of Catholic Alumnae; Mrs. Leon A. McIntire, national chairman, Motion Picture Committee, National Society Daughters of the American Revolution; Mr. Montague, Paramount News; Gunther von Fritsch, director, short subjects, and Mitzi Hochstadt, age 15, James Madison High School.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Eight Completed

The violent rainstorm which struck Southern California simultaneously with the advent of March completely submerged all Hollywood production plans, for a short time. Practically every studio was under from one to three feet of water, the Culver City area was isolated and the rampaging Los Angeles river threatened disaster to the Universal, Republic and Warner plants. Thousands of film employees were marooned.

Nevertheless, prior to the flood, four productions had been started and eight finished. Monogram began work on "Female Fugitive," in which Evalyn Venable and Craig Reynolds are featured. This, and the other three films, were delayed during the week; very little work was done on any of them.

As the waters cut large segments of land from the back lot, Universal proceeded with "Lady in the Morgue." Preston Foster, Patricia Ellis and Larry Blake are the principal players.

Handicapped as it was, MGM continued work on "Snug Harbor," in which Dennis O'Keefe, Florence Rice, Ray Bolger, Nat Pendleton and Una Merkel will be seen.

Republic, which had announced two films to start, was able only to get "Thunder in Alaska" under way. This will present Richard Arlen, Beverly Roberts and Lyle Talbot.

Finished Before the Rain

All the completed pictures had been finished before the rain began to fall. Columbia was able to complete "Hidden Trails," in which will be Charles Starrett, Iris Meredith, Ed LeSaint, Edward Cobb, Bob Nolan, Dick Durtis and John Tyrell. Also, for this company's release, Larry Darmour wound up "Stage Coach Trail." The cast includes Jack Luden, Eleanor Stewart, Hal Taliaferro, Harry Woods, Slim Whitaker, Jack Ingraham and Bob Kortman.

Paramount finished "Stolen Heaven." Gene Raymond and Olympe Bradna are the stars. The featured players include Glenda Farrell, Lewis Stone, Porter Hall, Joseph Sawyer, Douglass Dumbrille and Ferdinand Gottschalk. Bert Roach, Esther Dale, Rolfe Sedan, Ferdinand Schumann-Heink and Hooper Atchley are listed among the support.

MGM Completes One

At MGM "Judge Hardy's Children" was finished. It will present Lewis Stone, Mickey Rooney, Cecelia Parker, Fay Holden, Ann Rutherford, Robert Whitney, Jacqueline Laurent, Leonard Penn, Ruth Husses, Janet Beecher and Betty Ross Clarke. Down Washington Boulevard, accessible via watercraft only, Hal Roach finished "Swiss Miss." Stan Laurel, Oliver Hardy, Della Lind, Walter Woolf King and Adia Kusnetzoff are the principal players.

Universal finished "The Last Stand," in

LOEW'S LAUNCHES SCREEN FORECAST

A four page monthly publication Students' Screen Forecast has been launched by the Loew circuit. It is published by the circuit's school department and will be circulated in the junior high schools, high schools and parochial schools in the five boroughs of New York City. The publication is devoted to news of coming films and is designed to appeal to students, teachers and parents.

Oscar A. Doob, advertising and publicity director, is editor, and Ernest Emerling is associate editor. The advisory board includes Mrs. James F. Looram, film chairman of the International Federation of Catholic Alumnae; A. M. Bush, president of the Parent-Teachers' Association of Samuel Tilden High School; A. L. Simon and Raymond Jacobson.

which Bob Baker, Constance Moore, Earl Hodgins, Fuzzy Knight, Glenn Strange and Jack Kirk will be presented.

Monogram completed "The Land of Fighting Men." The cast includes Jack Randall, Colorado Hill Billies, Herman Brix, Louise Stanley, Dickie Jones, Wheeler Oakman, Lane Chandler, Ernie Adams and John Merton.

RKO-Radio, which as far as actual storm damage was concerned was the least effected, wound up shooting "Law of the Underworld." Chester Morris, Anne Shirley, Richard Bond, Walter Abel, Eduardo Cianelli and Lee Patrick occupy the leading roles. Paul Guilfoyle, Eddie Acuff, Frank M. Thomas, Jack Arnold, Jack Carson, George Shelley, Paul Stanton, George Irving, Cecil Kellaway and Florence Lake are supporting players.

Saturday Previews

Previewing pictures to the type of audiences for which they are intended is rapidly becoming the vogue. In practise for some time by the surprise preview method and with representatives of the various services invited to studios to inspect army, navy, aviation and similar features, the idea was extended several months ago by Jed Buell, who chose to preview a series of outdoor action films on Saturday afternoons to audiences composed almost exclusively of youngsters.

Last Saturday morning, Barney Sarecky, producer of the highly imaginative and fantastic serial "Flash Gordon's Trip to Mars," elected to show the first three chapters to three or four hundred newsboys who distribute the Hollywood Citizen-News. The exuberance of the youngsters caused Paul Snell, publicity director for Sol Lesser, to decide to preview "Rawhide" next Saturday. In "Rawhide" baseball player Lou Gehrig and Smith Ballew are featured. Simultaneously with the preview of the picture on the West Coast, Mr. Lesser is planning to show the film to sports writers at the Yankee spring training camp and adjacent training centers.

Sky, Land, Water

Three of Paramount's most important offerings this season will deal with man's conquest of the sky, the field and the stream.

"Men with Wings" covers the whole story of aviation and will do it in color. Down in Texas director James Hogan has a company working on a 10,000 acre ranch shooting authentic backgrounds for "The Texan." The story traces the movement of great herds of cattle north over the Chisholm Trail during the period immediately following the Civil War. Alaskan rivers are the locales of "Spawn of the North." The action revolves around piracy in the salmon fishing waters.

MGM is also in the popular trend with "Test Pilot," an aviation story, and the forthcoming "Northwest Passage," locations for which will be the northern part of the United States and Canada.

Warner Bros., whose "Gold is Where You Find It" is almost entirely an outdoor picture, will proceed soon with the production of "The Valley of the Giants," not ogres, but California's mighty redwood trees.

Songs Purchased

Paramount has purchased 15 songs, all written by Stanley Adams and Hoagy Carmichael. The titles are: "Any Time At All," "After You What Then," "Meanin' Nuttin' Personal," "'S Funny But True," "Just Love Alone," "No More Blues," "I'm Out of Town," "You Got Me Under Your Thumb," "Help, Help This Heart of Mine," "Do Your Ears Ever Burn," "You Hit the 'H' in My Heart," "Button, Button," "And So It Starts," "Tonight Is the Night" and "She's My Darling for All That."

Gladys Swarthout, opera and motion picture star, will leave New York in May for a six weeks tour of South America, after which she will sail from Buenos Aires for a concert tour and vacation in Europe. She will be accompanied by her husband-manager, Frank Chapman. Miss Swarthout's tour will follow an engagement at the Metropolitan Opera House in New York. At present she is in Hollywood completing "Romance in the Dark," for Paramount.

THREE FOR ONE QUOTA PROPOSAL THREATENED ANEW IN PARLIAMENT

Committee Hearings in Upper House Set for March 14th With Reintroduction of Stanley Amendment a Possibility

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

The Films Bill, safely through the shoals of the House of Commons and its second reading in the House of Lords is set for committee consideration in that body on March 14th but it now appears probable that the three for one quota proposal, howled down in the Commons, may be reintroduced before the Lords, perhaps in a modified form.

Such an amendment was discussed at an unofficial meeting of Commons members, called by Colonel Baldwin Webb to enable American renters to appeal to exhibitors on the grounds of their prestige on the British screen. Present were Fayette Allport, Sam Eckman, Francis Harley; Charles Metcalfe, retiring president of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association, and Kenneth Nyman, new executive of that group; John Maxwell, and Robert Morrison, MP.

Mr. Maxwell, who last week pleaded with exhibitors to agree to the three for one proposal, supported the representatives of the American distributors but the exhibitors remained adamant, claiming that even if the triple quota was applicable to exhibitors the renters' circuits would have a monopoly.

Using statistics, Mr. Maxwell argued against the threat of shortage brought up by exhibitors, saying that 90 "quickies" were made annually in the past two years, averaging 300 playdates each of three days. Multiplying the number of playdates by length of run by the number of films, he pointed to the resulting 81,000 "quota days." A British film costing £60,000, he said, would be booked for 1,500 playdates, chiefly for six days each. Thus, he concluded, similar computation would give a £60,000 film 270,000 "quota days."

By April 1st the Bill will in all probability become law, in the form in which it now stands, a strange, bedraggled, and anomalous form, say its critics, affording protection to one rather than all.

The last Commons stage, and the few days which preceded it were nothing if not exciting, with Mr. Stanley's last minute introduction of his three for one quota proposal, the surging explosion of trade revolt, the mass lobbyings and telegraphic torrents—and the ultimate withdrawal of the scheme by a cabinet minister deputising for the invalid president of the Board of Trade. It was a triumph of corporate and immediate action—and rather a shamefaced retreat on the part of the Government.

Three for one, which American renters here believed might give them the opportunity of spending money constructively, and of making films economically and of adequate entertainment value is not necessarily dead, especially in view of John Maxwell's plea for adoption and of the fact that Sir Kingsley Wood, announcing the withdrawal of Mr. Stanley's vexed amendment, suggested that Mr. Stanley might himself decide to revive it in the Lords. . . . But it is a very misleading corpse if it is not.

This Lords stage for all its unlikelihood of

INDUSTRY LEADERS CROWD CEA BANQUET

More than 900 representatives of the British motion picture industry, Government executives and guests attended the annual banquet of the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association at Grosvenor House, London, Tuesday evening. Ernest Brown, minister of labor, was guest of honor and ten members of Parliament were present as well as members of the House of Lords and civic leaders.

Kenneth Nyman, new president of the CEA, recognized Mr. Brown's presence as a formal notice of the Government's satisfaction over the current relations between labor and employers in the trade as well as the acceptable functioning of the conciliation boards. Mr. Nyman paid a tribute to the tact and cordiality of officials of the Board of Trade.

further vital change is nevertheless being watched with either hope or anxiety, according to the watchers' particular prejudices. The producers or those of them represented by the Film Group of the Federation of British industries have already circularized the Upper Chamber, pleading the case for higher quotas and a widening of the purposes of the Films Council to achieve this end.

The proletariat, as represented by the National Association of Theatrical Employees and the Association of Cine Technicians, whose panacea for plebeian and capitalistic ills is an increase of the quota to the Moyne Commission figures, are not above canvassing the aid of the Landed Gentry and their more recently created Peers. Such matters will be raised in the Lords—where abundantly the abiding spirit of party and Governmental loyalty thrives. Exhibitors, whilst now content to let the Bill rest on its allegedly dubious merits, will watch the Lords stages, lynx-like, for any effort to raise the quota percentages, confident that action like unto that with which they beat a three for one retreat, will enable them to conquer again.

Over no proposal, presented either by Stanley, or trade or independent agencies, has there been such a spontaneous and indeed united chorus of resentment and revolt than over the three for one scheme. It is, indeed, not to be wondered at, for, apart from its merits, or demerits, its last minute introduction, after Stanley seemed to have announced rejection of the wider reciprocity scheme embracing it,—his phrasing was loose and in some respects misleading,—without the time or provision for the trade to examine it properly, was bound inevitably to exasperate those affected.

Originally bound up with the alternative quota plans, the three for one scheme was reintroduced by Mr. Stanley after he had announced his rejection of the wider proposal, and, he claimed, represented suggestions made to him by the producers in October. The trade and many parliamentarians neglected to notice that after Mr. Stanley in Committee on February 8th had announced his abandonment of the alternative plan, he stated, on February 10th that he intended to ask the House to accept his three for one principle.

The scheme, briefly, was that for the purposes of renters quota, a film which had been made at a labor cost of £30,000 ($150,000) or over—four times the minimum prescribed in the Bill—might count as three films for its renter.

Whence came the idea? There is one section which alleges wire pulling on the part of American renters. There is another which saw manipulations on the part of renters, not necessarily American, with circuit release. Much more probable is that it was a sincere, and, he thought, constructive effort by Stanley to help production of films which might reach the standards of the American market. Captain Euan Wallace, his Parliamentary secretary, made it clear that it was the Board of Trade's apology that they believed the proposal would encourage the £60,000 ($300,000) film. He understood the renters would welcome the idea but nevertheless he did not believe that all their films would be made under this plan. America and her markets were imperative. Here was a mode of entry.

Exhibitors, however, who had seen in the proposal the likelihood that renters would be content to make all their films under this plan, and thus bring about a critical shortage of product, with the consequent extinction of many smaller exhibitors, had primed members more than generously with telegrams, letters and verbal persuasions, and when the proposal entered the realms of discussion, the chorus of criticism and objection was all but unanimous.

So, with the exhibitors arguments that shortage of product would result, and that with the present cut in Hollywood production figures, the necessary minimum of British quota films would be only thirty three, with some 3,500 odd telegrams arriving at the House, with the press hastily and efficiently called to the exhibitors aid, and Mr. Stanley himself made more unwell than ever, members of the House of Commons talked the three for one formula out of court, where there is every likelihood it will remain.

This penultimate gesture, however, was not the only Stanley somersault to provoke criticism. It should, for instance, be remembered that the Bill's spokesman, after stating emphatically that ten per cent was the highest practicable maximum at which exhibitors could start their new quota obligations, later raised it to twelve and a half per cent!

Despite the unceasing Imperialism of the Mother of Parliaments, the president of the Board of Trade sponsored a proposal to exclude all Canadian, Indian and Australian—and other Imperial—films from the the privileges of renters quota—and his Commons agreed. Empire producers are vexed and the Premier of New South Wales, invoked by a struggling local industry, appealed unavailingly to the Government to hold its hand.

A tighter definition of labor costs, under which the Board will have power to reject any film on which excessive payments to an artist or technician seem unjustified, has been introduced and passed. So, too, has a long overdue narrowing of the terms under which news films are defined, replacing an absurdly worded clause which was consistently used for the rejection of documentaries and interest films frequently of undoubted entertainment and artistic value.

There, for the moment, the situation rests, with the Bill gradually but surely taking the shape its sponsor Oliver Stanley originally outlined, justifying a forecast consistently made in these columns since November last.

IN THE CUTTING ROOM

Three Comrades

(MGM)

Melodramatic Romance

Although certain alterations have been made in the basic story, MGM, with Joseph L. Mankiewicz in charge, is producing "Three Comrades" in such a manner that the release print will embody the full spirit of Erich Remarque's original. The changes were for the purpose of forestalling controversy.

Because of "All Quiet on the Western Front" and "The Road Back," picturizations of Remarque's works are comparatively wellknown to American audiences. It is a post-war story of three young veterans who pledge their friendship to battle life together to rehabilitate themselves. Revolution constantly surrounds them, but their efforts are made easier when a girl, marching along with the trio, marries one and is their inspiration until her death.

Frank Borzage's identification with such films as the original "Seventh Heaven," "Humoresque" and "A Farewell to Arms," reveals in pointed manner the atmosphere and moods of direction.

Cast names give exhibitors much with which to work. Robert Taylor, Franchot Tone and Robert Young are the three comrades. The girl is Margaret Sullavan, absent from the screen for some time but remembered for "Only Yesterday," "Next Time We Love" and "The Moon's Our Home." Other important characters are Henry Hull, Guy Kibbee, Lionel Atwill and Sarah Padden.

Release date: Mid-May, tentatively.

Judge Hardy's Children

(MGM)

Family Narrative

This production will be the third in the "Judge Hardy Family" series. The others were "A Family Affair" and "You're Only Young Once." The members of the family to be seen are Lewis Stone, Mickey Rooney, Cecilia Parker and Fay Holden, again occupying the same roles as in "You're Only Young Once," and Ann Rutherford again appearing as "Polly Benedict." The story is based on the characters created by Aurania Rouverol and it will be directed by George B. Seitz, who was in charge of the earlier numbers of the series.

Newcomers to the series are Robert Whitney, a recruit from the New York stage where he was featured in "The Miracle," "Sister Beatrice" and "Gold Eagle Guy," and Jacqueline Laurent, a French stage actress, both of whom are making their screen debut. Others to be seen include Leonard Penn, who was seen in "The Firefly," Ruth Hussey, another promising newcomer, Janet Beecher, who has played character roles in numerous pictures and Betty Ross Clarke.

In the third chapter of the life-experiences of "Judge Hardy" and his family, which will have its full allotment of comedy and romance, the Judge is thrust into the hurly-burly of Washington politics.

Release date: March 25 (tentative).

Go Chase Yourself

(RKO-Radio)

Comedy

While the completed structure will be decorated with music and dancing, the framework is comedy. Designed as Joe Penner's first starring vehicle, the main plot will be liberally sprinkled with gags in dialogue, situations and characterizations. The film's forte will be wild and woolly comedy.

In theme the picture deals with the hilarious adventures of a goofy bank teller who is kidnapped by bandits robbing the bank.

The story used is adapted from an original by Walter O'Keefe. It was adapted by Paul Yawitz, whose screen credits include "Crashing Hollywood," "Breakfast for Two" and "They Wanted to Marry," and Bert Granet, who did, among others, "Maid's Night Out," "Quick Money," "Meet the Missus" and "High Flyers." The director, Edward Cline, has made four recent RKO-Radio features, "Hawaii Calls," "High Flyers," "On Again, Off Again" and "Forty Naughty Girls." Production comes under the guidance of Robert Sisk.

The film will give Joe Penner his first chance at a starring role, and will also give Lucille Ball her first opportunity at a leading part.

Release date: April 22, 1938.

(20th Century-Fox)

Mystery et Al

Many are familiar with the adventures of the Oriental detective, "Mr. Moto." J. P. Marquand's Saturday Evening Post stories and Peter Lorre's screen creation of the character have served to make a favorite of the tricky sleuth, whose favorite stunt is character changing.

To support Lorre in "Mr. Moto's Gamble," producer Sol M. Wurtzel has rounded up a well balanced cast. Key Luke, who has made a favorable name for himself as "Lee Chan" in the Warner Oland series, will be seen in a similar role of a super-willing but comically ineffective assistant. Romance will be handled by Dick Baldwin, seen in "Love and Hisses," and Jayne Regan, who appeared in the romantic lead in "Thank You, Mr. Moto." A third side of this romantic triangle will present Lynn Bari. Harold Huber, seen in several "Chans" and "A Slight Case of Murder," is another important principal. The supporting cast will include Douglas Fowley, Maxie Rosenbloom, prize fighter remembered for "Nothing Sacred"; John Hamilton, George E. Stone, Ward Bond, Lon Chaney, Jr., and Pierre Watkins.

The story is based on an original screen play by Charles Belden and Jerry Cady, and is being directed by James Tinling, who made "Sing and Be Happy," "Angel's Holiday" and "The Holy Terror."

Release date: April 8, 1938.

Island in the Sky

(20th Century-Fox)

Mystery Melodrama

The locale is New York and the time is the present. Chills, thrills and comedy are the substantiating qualities going into the story. Two young folk who desire very much to be married are caught up in a murder case which threatens to lead to the execution of an innocent man.

Novel in its approach to this standby entertainment formula, in which suspense, danger and excitement are balanced by lively romance and comedy, "Island in the Sky" will feature Gloria Stuart and Michael Whalen, previously teamed in "Professional Soldier," "The Poor Little Rich Girl" and "Change of Heart." The principal supporting cast will feature Paul Kelly, Robert Kellard, a newcomer seen in "Annapolis Salute" and "Walking down Broadway," June Storey, who was prominent in "In Old Chicago," and the dependable comedian, Paul Hurst. Leon Ames, Willard Robertson, George Humbert, Aggie Herring and Charles D. Brown will have character and atmosphere roles.

A Sol M. Wurtzel production, "Island in the Sky" is based upon an original story by Jerry Cady, who collaborated on several "Charlie Chans." The screen play was completed by Francis Hyland and Albert Ray, who together have done several originals and adaptations for Twentieth Century-Fox, among them "Change of Heart" and "City Girl."

The film is being directed by Herbert I. Leeds, a cutting room graduate who also handled "Love on a Budget," a recent number in the "Jones Family" series.

Release date: March 18, 1938, tentatively.

Nurse from Brooklyn

(Universal)

Crime Rears Romance

The story substance is of a type that often has served as a basis for love stories born of the deceptions of crime. Usually such films are highly melodramatic and full of suspense and action, with comparatively little comedy. Such is the formula being followed here by producer Edmund Grainger.

A killer endeavors to make it appear that a police officer is not only the murderer of her brother but also the instigator of many other crimes.

The story is an original by Steve Fisher. The adaptation was by Roy Chanslor, who wrote many screen plays for Warner Bros. The director, S. Sylvan Simon, previously made "A Prescription for Romance" and "A Girl with Ideas," both for Universal.

The principals are Sally Eilers, Paul Kelly and Larry Blake, who is given his first chance at a featured role. Among the supporting players are Maurice Murphy, Morgan Conway, James Blaine, William Royle, Charles Sullivan, David Oliver, Howard Christie and Peggy Bernier.

Story content plus the drawing power of Miss Eilers and Paul Kelly are considered by Mr. Grainger as the most prominent exploitation assets.

Release date: April 8, 1938 (tentative).

SHOWMEN'S REVIEWS

This department deals with new product from the point of view of the exhibitor who is to purvey it to his own public

Jezebel

(Warner Brothers)

American Period Play

Showmen who have been wondering what to do about shouting down the rumors about "Recession" have here a practical solution to their problem.

Unless everybody who is anybody in Hollywood was mistaken when he saw it on Monday evening, "Jezebel" is just about the liveliest set of marquee letters in the library at this writing. Displayed in appropriate proximity to the names of Bette Davis, Henry Fonda, George Brent, Donald Crisp, Fay Bainter and as many more of the cast as space will allow, this title will put the population on notice that a most extraordinary motion picture is to be seen within after the usual wicket formalities.

The press has been diligent in spreading the news about "Jezebel" and will be more so, now that the Coast correspondents have had a look.

Most of the publicity, it will be recalled, has had to do with whether or not Warner Brothers determined to produce "Jezebel" as a means of cashing in on the sustained publicity about "Gone With the Wind" and who's to play whom in it, when and if David O. Selznick ever gets around to producing it. Formal denial of this unseemly charge didn't quench the rumor or allay suspicion. It did keep the pot boiling.

Now that the picture has been seen, it is reasonable to suppose that all this speculation will be revived again, but on a different basis. The picture may or may not be accepted as proof that the motives prompting its production were pure, but it will be accepted as proof that the brothers Warner were not just having fun with a competitor when they started shooting. All this means box office, for both pictures.

"Jezebel" didn't just roll out of a staff typewriter on the Warner lot. It came from the typewriter of Owen Davis and did quite well for itself as a Broadway stage play in 1934. Mr. Davis got his material for it from the records of what happened in New Orleans when yellow fever rode the bayous in 1853. Clements Ripley, Aben Finkel and John Huston adapted the Davis play to the screen, and Warners borrowed William Wyler from Sam Goldwyn to direct it for associate producer Henry Blanke. None of these gentlemen was kidding the competition either.

Bette Davis, Warner Academician extraordinary, was given the title role, as unsympathetic an assignment as ever handed a heroine, and Henry Fonda signed up for the male lead, no bargain either as such things are reckoned among players who treasure their fan mail. George Brent took the third and but slightly more favorable casting, which includes getting killed, and none of the other parts was what the professional describes as "fat." Further, they played them to the nines, subordinating performance to character and giving the story its head.

The story is not pleasant, it is powerful, in the way unpleasant stories often are, and it contrives to achieve a broad, deep sweep without containing word or deed unsuitable for any sector of the age scale. It is big enough to engulf the actors without for a moment discounting them, and strong enough to send a Hollywood preview audience out talking to itself.

Miss Davis plays "Julie," New Orleans belle of 1852, whose whimsical fractures of the lighter social proprieties cause her fiance, "Dillard," to break their engagement. Contrite, she prepares to welcome him home from a trip north and is crushed when he introduces his Yankee bride. "Julie" determines to break up the marriage by any practical means and succeeds in getting "Cantrell," another suitor, killed in a duel. Her friends desert her. Then "Dillard" is stricken with yellow fever and "Julie" persuades his wife to let her go in her stead with him to a leper island where victims are being isolated. The picture ends on this tragic note.

In common with certain other productions of recent date, "Jezebel" gives full scope to the historical background against which the fiction plot is played and draws substance and color therefrom. The New Orleans of 1852-53 reproduced here is as convincing and interesting as the New Orleans recently brought to life by Cecil B. DeMille in "The Buccaneer," without being in any sense reminiscent thereof. The yellow fever epidemic which figures vitally in the story of "Jezebel" is strikingly pictured, an unpretty but immensely effective piece of production.

Previewed at the Warner Hollywood theatre. The audience, which had been professionally unimpressed by advance reports of the picture said to have been inspired by a yen to beat "Gone With the Wind" into distribution, found itself repeatedly applauding as the story progressed.

Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm

(Twentieth Century-Fox)

Study in Box Office

TO THE EDITOR:

Your flooded but faithful California correspondent takes typewriter in lap to suggest that it's high time something be done about this Shirley Temple person. High time, I mean, to take steps with respect to her placement among the MOTION PICTURE HERALD's Money Making Stars of 1938.

If something isn't done, and quickly, she'll finish up there in first position again this year, as in 1935, '36 and '37, and I submit that this is artistic monopoly, not to say monotony, and a static state of affairs crying aloud for adjustment. I have, of course, a plan, and this is it:

In tennis, golf and certain other fields of endeavor where proficiency is determined by process of competitive elimination, cups, ribbons and things like that pass into permanent possession of 3-time winners. This has the altogether agreeable effect of lifting the champion above, if not precisely out of, routine competition—Helen Wills, Bobby Jones, Babe Ruth, Man O' War—and reopening the clogged path of glory to other worthy contenders. I suggest that Miss Temple be given permanent title to the box office championship right about now and so be eliminated, with due notice and distinction, from the 1938 trials. This will give promising youngsters like Clark Gable, Gary Cooper and Sonja Henie a sporting chance of getting to the top of the ladder before they die. I regret to report that everything in and about "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm" indicates plainly that, what with the calendar on Miss Temple's side, they'll never get there otherwise.

You see, the Shirley Temple of 1938 isn't just the sweet little child prodigy of '35, '36 and '37. This 10-year-old is a professional entertainer asking no odds for age and doing her stuff totally without benefit of conditional story, camera tricks, plot manipulation or character breaks. The studio that gave her everything in the story-books to work with in "Heidi" left her strictly "on her own" in this distinctly unglorified setup and she proved, if anybody had doubted it, that she's got everything. There isn't the slightest reason for thinking she'll drop out of that top spot in the next ten or fifteen years, and that would be less than fair to the ten or fifteen sterling players who can't hope for better than second place if we don't set up a separate classification for triple winners (there might even be another one, some time).

I don't ask you to reconcile all this excitement with your recollections of "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," either as Kate Douglas Wiggin wrote it or Mary Pickford and all those other Rebeccas played it. There is no similarity between any of those versions and Miss Temple's picture of the same name. They were tenderly sentimental works aimed at the cardiac and lachrymal reflexes. This is a type of product pointed at eye, ear and, in a sense, intellect. Rhythm and its uses, humor unrooted in precocity and, most of all, sheer professional ability to perform entertainingly, comprise the stuff with which this expert young lady demonstrates that she doesn't need curls, tears and Jean Hersholt—or anybody else—to put her over.

After they threw the book away, Karl Tunberg and Don Ettlinger pieced out a sort of story about a youngster named "Rebecca" whose step-father, "Henry Kipper," turns her over to her "Aunt Miranda" when he believes she has failed in an audition for a breakfast food radio program. Later on he finds out she didn't fail and gets her back, hoping to share her earnings, but she pretends to lose her voice and he loses interest, whereupon everything comes out right for "Rebecca" and a lot of other persons who have got more or less tangled up in the proceedings. This could have been a tearful little eye-fel, of course, but it never gets serious at any point and the plot never threatens the musical numbers nor interferes with goings on in the comedy department.

Probably you'd never identify the picture as a Raymond Griffith production, either, his being slickish, glib and glossy products in the main, nor would you guess that Allan Dwan, who used to direct them the old way when "Rebecca" was a Wiggin character, directed this quite as offhandedly as though he'd never heard of the book. Mr. Dwan by no means has lost step with the procession.

Others involved are engaged in more familiar pursuits. Bill Robinson, for instance, dances in union with Miss Temple, once quite briefly, early in the picture, and again, at the close, for what seems seven or eight matchless minutes during which the camera never takes its eye off the pair and the pair never blow a tap or gesture—the all time high for these inseparably paired virtuosi.

Randolph Scott plays the straight man whom Gloria Stuart ultimately marries, Phyllis Brooks the songful and presumably sinful gal he gets away from. Helen Westley plays the stern aunt, who relaxes under slight pressure, and Slim Summerville the fellow who applies it. J. Edward Bromberg, Dixie Dunbar and Alan Dinehart are also present, and Jack Haley does as well as could be expected with a thankless role, Franklin Pangborn better with a silly one.

"Toy Trumpet," a trick tune by the evidently infallible Raymond Scott, whose Quintette plays it, is the best musical item, although possibly a little too far off the beaten track to take top popularity. Lyrics for this are by Lou Pollock and Sidney D. Mitchell, who toss three songs of their own into the proceedings, while Mack Gordon and Harry Revel, and Sam Pokrass and Jack Yellen, supply one each.

In addition to these numbers, Miss Temple, stepping out of character—if she may be said ever to get into any save her own—sits at a piano and sings bits of songs she sang in earlier pictures that made her famous and vice versa. This wholly informal departure from "Rebecca" registers with terrific impact.

I guess that's about all there is to tell you about "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm." In a word, it is proof enough for me that Miss Temple has the 1938 box office championship clinched right now and possesses what it takes to hold it right on through the gawky years into whatever young womanhood brings, which, with all that talent aboard, needn't be beauty, although it probably will. Let's give her a permanent box office championship and have it over with.

Oh yes—the picture was previewed at Grauman's Chinese, Hollywood, and wowed 'em.—W. R. W.

The "Crime" of Dr. Hallet

(Universal)

Melodrama

Here is no ordinary entertainment and it should not be exploited as such. While comparisons with "Arrowsmith," produced on much grander scale and with great names in 1931 by Samuel Goldwyn, will be made because of slight similarity of theme, showmen might use to good advantage modifications of campaigns for the Goldwyn picture with perhaps more beneficial box office results than producers of this had expected in setting its budget.

The picture tells the story of a scientist seeking an antitoxin for "red fever" in the Sumatran jungle and his devotion to duty to mankind even though he jeopardizes his freedom through committing a crime which is justified by results. The obvious weight of the plot is lifted by telling injection of restrained comedy into the adaptation of the original story of Carl Dreher. Cole, veteran writer, and Brown Holmes wrote the screenplay. This marks the first screen story credit of Dreher, who has deserted the ranks of Hollywood's top sound and patents men to take up writing. S. Sylvan Simon directed, with Edmund Grainger producing.

The cast is composed of Ralph Bellamy, Josephine Hutchinson, William Gargan, Barbara Read, John King, Charles Stevens and Nella Walker.

"Dr. Hallet," with "Jack Murray," assistant, seeking an antitoxin for red fever in their jungle laboratory in Sumatra, is sent young "Dr. Saunders" to succeed another aide killed by the fever. "Hallet" assigns menial tasks to "Saunders," who, undaunted, conducts experiments on his own. Thinking of the fame which might come to the group and himself and with an eye to pleasing his wife, whom he left in New York, "Saunders" inoculates himself with the bacteria and, as "Hallet's" remedy fails, mumbles to "Hallet" to use "Saunders'" notes to cure him. "Hallet" thinks the youth is in delirium and the lad dies. After packing to leave, "Hallet" discovers the youth has found a cure and determines to carry on the experiments in order that "Saunders" might have posthumous credit. "Hallet" assumes "Saunders'" identity and forges his traveler's checks to carry on the work. "Mary Reynolds," research physician sent to the jungle camp on "Murray's" call, complicates the situation because the men were unaware that the new assistant would be a woman. Further complications arise when "Mrs. Saunders" unexpectedly arrives and "Hallet's" ruse is exposed to "Mary Reynolds," with whom he has fallen in love. "Mrs. Saunders," stricken with the fever, is saved by the cure her late husband has prepared. Still determined to prosecute, "Mrs. Saunders" is won over by a trick of "Murray."

Strong Stuff

Up to the moment of writing, exhibition of this imported European film has been none too enthusiastic or successful. Screened for official inspection, the production has received condemnatory treatment from both the New York State Board of Censors and the Board of Regents, governing body of education in the Empire State from whose ruling appeal was made after the picture had been officially rejected by Irwin Esmond, director of the Division of Motion Pictures, New York State's official motion picture censorship board. According to Mr. Esmond's words as reported in MOTION PICTURE HERALD of February 5, the work was rejected on the grounds that "at best, the play is a sordid story of wifely infidelity," with strong objection being made to setting several of the scenes in an immoral house.

Considering the thematic immoral implications and some suggestive scenes detailing the professional pursuits of those feminine workers euphemistically labeled "ladies of pleasure," screening of the film as far as the general audience field is concerned is definitely closed. "Advanced" movie-goers, who claim to be interested in the artistic rather than the moral or sensational aspects of a film, will be the element to derive from a study of the production entertainment values for their "liberalized" esthetic appreciations.

Despite several structural defects in plot building, the work as a whole has been given careful and competent care. Gustav Machaty, whose previous directorial importation, "Ecstasy," met with controversial consideration from censorial bodies throughout the country, has fashioned the story into a stark, vigorous and potent piece of screen craftsmanship. A cast of proficient players, and particularly the principals, produce performances that are effective. Noteworthy are the appealing acting of an attractive child actor, Donata Ray, and the striking camera manipulation of an unidentified photographer. Several scenes, including the sequence wherein the deserted father contemplates committing suicide with his child, the footage devoted to the parent's plight as a sign carrier for a saloon and the portions devoted to picturing the tiny son singing a nursery tune to his sleeping father, are arresting moments.

The story begins with the desertion by the mother, Maria, who runs off with a man who she believes will be able to give her the luxury her pleasure loving nature demands. The husband, Karl, tries to drink his way out from under the weight of his grief. The young girl, Mia, is introduced as having come to live in a house of ill repute with the notion that the place was a respectable domicile. When the establishment is raided, the girl flees for safety to Karl's apartment on the floor above, and escapes arrest by posing as the ailing child's mother. In the meantime, by distracting excursions, it is learned that Maria's affair has ended tragically. The lover turns out to be a scheming adventurer

Women in Prison

(Columbia)

Melodrama

A melodrama concocted of elements of life in a women's prison and in gangster movements, with the story shifting between the two and eventually merging as one, this picture is exciting in spots. It is designed to interest audiences who like melodrama and those who derive satisfaction from the presentation, if somewhat remotely, of social problems.

While there is a social problem in the screen play by Saul Elkins, who adapted from the story by Mortimer Baus, the picture is essentially melodrama. The cast is headed by Wyn Cahoon, Scott Colton, Arthur Loft, Mayo Methot, Ann Doran and Sarah Padden.

"Daisy" (Mayo Methot), a hardboiled gangster "moll" and a second offender, is sent to prison for complicity in a bank robbery. By way of double crossing the gang, "Daisy" hid the quarter of a million stolen from the bank and then gave herself up to escape the gang's vengeance. "Barney" (Arthur Loft), head of the gang, has "Ann" (Wyn Cahoon) daughter of Warden "Martha Wilson" (Sarah Padden) framed and sent to prison in order to make a deal with the warden for "Daisy's" freedom.

The warden refuses, "Daisy," knowing she is responsible for "Ann's" incarceration, effects an escape and takes "Ann" with her. "Daisy" is discovered and shot down by "Barney's" henchmen. "Ann" indirectly contacts the district attorney and a trap is set for "Barney." He discovers the plant and forces "Ann" to reveal the hiding place of the money as told to her by "Daisy." At the hiding place "Barney" is about to kill "Ann" when the police arrive.

Night Spot

(RKO Radio)

Melodrama and Romance

Although name value is not high and story follows familiar pattern, intelligent directing technique and good characterizations establish "Night Spot" as acceptable entertainment.

Told against a background of criminal underworld activities, the melodrama is balanced with romance, and the meager comedy, delivered mainly by Parkyakarkus, is effectively included. Similarly, action and suspense have been made a part of the semi-mystery treatment given the story.

Arrested as a murder suspect, "Marty David," crooked night club owner, proves an alibi through Marge Dexter, who is given a job as an entertainer as her reward. The police spot rookie officers Pete Cooper and Riley in the dance band to watch the suspect. Romance, with numerous complications, develops between "Marge" and "Cooper." With "Gashouse's" comedy enlivening matters, "Davis" and his gang plan to execute several robberies. Cooper, discharged for neglect of duty, convinces Inspector Wayland that through association with the girl he has the key to "Davis' doings. The story builds to an action climax as the police set a trap for "Davis' mob. In a thrill finale, "Cooper" captures "Davis." Though he is revealed as an officer, "Marge" is not greatly disappointed when he is promoted and given two weeks' vacation for their honeymoon.

While complicated in spots, the film moves speedily, and no great emphasis is placed upon either imagination or credulity.

Names being of no great importance, the most effective showmanship should be found in the production detail which illustrates the modern methods whereby police use dictographs to obtain information on criminals.

Prison Nurse

(Republic)

Melodrama

With floods creating newspaper headlines, radio news broadcasts, and with stories emanating daily from the stricken areas of prisons inundated and prisoners commandeered to assist the citizenry in bolstering weakened levees, this has an unusually timely theme. Out of a situation of such topical ingredients this melodrama has been fashioned.

A flood is the motivating force that upsets the prison's routine, what with an epidemic of typhoid, the arrival of three nurses to aid the prison's doctor and the taking over of the medical situation by a prisoner, a discredited doctor, when the prison doctor succumbs to typhoid. From there the story develops into a prison break with the discredited doctor and a nurse the central figures.

Henry Wilcoxon portrays the doctor sentenced to 10 years for a mercy death and Marian Marsh is the nurse who clears him of conspiracy in the prison break. Supporting players include Bernadene Hayes, Ben Welden, Ray Mayer, Addison Richards and Frank Reicher.

As the killer who engineers the prison break Ben Welden is a convincing and ominous figure throughout the picture. With the aid of "Jackpot" (Ray Mayer), who helps in the hospital, the killer has himself confined there, whence he breaks for freedom, forcing "Dale" (Wilcoxon) to accompany him.

The killer and his hireling "Jackpot" are both killed and when "Dale" is caught he is accused of the murder of a guard and is indicted. In a rather weak concluding sequence for a melodrama of this sort "Judy" (Marian Marsh) discovers a diary kept by "Jackpot" which convinces authorities of "Dale's" innocence. He is paroled.

The First Hundred Years

(MGM)

Marital Difficulties

Lots of persons may consider "The First One Hundred Years" unimportant despite the presence of Robert Montgomery, Virginia Bruce, Warren William, Binnie Barnes, Alan Dinehart and several other familiar capable players in the cast. However, where light and well turned semi-sophisticated comedy romance is understood and appreciated, the show should win popular favor. As accepted by the preview audience, the chances are more than favorable that it will prove a surprise attraction.

The story is a combination of clever dialogue, engaging situations and amusing incidents. Gay and airy in all detail, there being no tendency to indulge in any breast beating or hand wringing, it is a tale of domestic discord that foundered on the rocks of husband and wife misunderstanding of their respective family duties and financial responsibilities.

The wife, played by Miss Bruce, a successful theatrical agent, prefers to be family bread winner and keep her husband, Montgomery, as a pet. Above all she does not want to leave New York for New Bedford, where he has landed a job and where he wants her to be just a wife. One squabble leads to others, and all culminate in a separate maintenance action in which, through bombastic blundering of her attorney she is ordered to provide her husband's support. An uncle's peace making intentions get nowhere until a thunder storm convinces the wife she needs a husbandly shoulder on which to rest. Legal shenanigans complicate the reconciliation matters momentarily. But when she learns she is to have a baby, which news is shortly discovered by her husband, both are happy to go to New Bedford.

Under Richard Thorpe's capable direction, easily adaptable showmanship sticks out all over the picture. But for general purposes, in addition to accentuating the importance of names, campaigns that assure audiences that they will get plenty of laughs should be devised to stir up the patronage to which the show is entitled.

Condemned Women

(RKO-Radio)

Melodrama

Grim but strong even in romantic chapters, this realistically told story of women in prison is composed of elements that should excite comment and discussion. Although some sequences are prolonged unnecessarily and the film depends upon sharply drawn characterizations to drive home its punch, "Condemned Women" may be accepted as above average adult entertainment.

Seriously toned throughout, comedy being entirely absent, the production gives Sally Eilers the best opportunity for forceful portrayal she has had in a long time, and enables Lee Patrick and Anne Shirley to deliver outstanding performances.

Similar in manner of presentation to other prison shows, this differs in that the women are presented as desperate, dangerous, caged creatures, enemies of society, who live only for vengeance. Romance is brought in in uncommon fashion, as the love interest involves convict Eilers with prison doctor Louis Hayward.

Prison routine, discipline, and the various caste systems being vividly illustrated, and romance permitted to flower under dangerous circumstances, the love affair is brought to the attention of the Warden and admitted by both. Determined to break it up, he appeals to her to demonstrate to her sweetheart that she is not a worthy woman. Sacrificing one love to a greater, she is involved in a prison escape in which "Millie" (Anne Shirley) is killed and as a result of which "Big Annie" (Lee Patrick) dies. Tried, "Linda" (Miss Eilers) is on the verge of conviction when "Philip" (Hayward) interferes to demonstrate that all the damning testimony is perjury and that she was not the ringleader. Mitigating circumstances reduce her sentence and there is promise that "Philip" will be waiting upon its completion.

Essentially an adult attraction, the film is wide open for the spectacular exploitation which has made previous prison films matters of wide interest. The woman angle should not be overlooked.

Bulldog Drummond's Peril

(Paramount)

Prime Melodrama

Crammed full of repartee, the production has action and melodrama in sufficient quantities to satisfy the already established "Drummond" fans and perhaps win new ones. This new episode in Paramount's versions of the H. C. (Sapper) McNeile story series again has John Barrymore, John Howard, Louise Campbell, Reginald Denny, E. E. Clive and Nydia Westman in the same roles they portrayed in "Drummond's Revenge" and "Drummond's Comeback," the first two on this season's program. The support includes Porter Hall and Halliwell Hobbes.

The formula fun feud between "Neilson" and "Drummond" forms the basis of the new offering, but this picture differs from the previous ones in that it offers more action.

James Hogan directed the adaptation by Stuart Palmer.

Stuart Walker draws credit as associate producer.

This time "Drummond" runs afoul of a diamond merchant who is after a formula of a scientist who makes diamonds by a synthetic method. "Neilson" as usual attempts to dissuade "Drummond," but the young Englishman barges into and out of trouble with the thieves and murderer and the plot comes to a successful conclusion with the aid of regular characters, as usual leaving "Drummond's" long planned and long foiled marriage to "Phyllis Clavering" about to be arranged anew at the final fadeout.

Maid's Night Out

(RKO)

Comedy

Residents of Inglewood, Cal., venturing out in the wake of the receding waters in quest of whatever relaxation might be discovered beneath the uninformative banner, "Major Studio Feature Preview Tonight," found a lot to laugh at in this adroitly fabricated, faultlessly timed comedy of errors.

Inglewood is such a town as "Life" might have selected for its American community, a broad sampling of the great middle class to the whim of which the motion picture and just about every other successful thing is of necessity patterned. This would seem to argue that showmen dependent upon this staple type of client for principal support can count on taking a bow as the customers file out after the show. Getting them in is, of course, the trick.

Getting them in is likely to prove a somewhat more arduous chore than most showmen have been in the habit of rolling up their sleeves for in this season of name-studded farces, burlesques and absurdities. The top name in the formal billing is Joan Fontaine, identified chiefly as the girl who played opposite Fred Astaire in "Damsel in Distress," and the male lead is one Allan Lane, relatively unknown heretofore but likely to be talked about as a runner-up for Cary Grant after the public gets a chance to see him toss off this gay assignment.

But when the showman looks further down the list he will find such dependable players as Billy Gilbert, Hedda Hopper, Solly Ward, Eddie Gribbon, George Irving, Mary Vaughn and Cecil Kellaway, and, as he and his public well know in advance, accountable for much of the solid entertainment that this and many another good comedy of the year have fattened on. No showman worthy of the name lacks ways and means of getting the public in to see that cast at play.

The story is about a young fellow, who sets out to work a month as a driver for his wealthy father's dairy, and a young socialite whom he mistakes for a domestic.

Incidents preceding the inevitable disclosure of identities and clinch include a roller coaster episode, a brawl at a charity ball, certain piscatorial passages, a seeming abduction and a breakneck flight from pursuing police. All hands carry the ball alternately, for consistent gains through tackle and around end during all this, although Solly Ward's line, "I'm Helping a Son of the Rich," is distinctly offside.

The production bears in composition, pacing and ensemble the unmistakable imprint of Robert Sisk, producer. Ben Holmes' direction reflects a genuine sense of comedy values and timing. Bert Granet's screen play, from a story by Willoughby Speyers, is strictly in the wide, sure groove of mass comprehension.

Where It Comes From

Not all is gold that glitters and by the same token not all is gold in a gold mine. One of the largest of the mines, supplying one-half of the world's production, is in Johannesburg, South Africa. Herein is pictorially described the production of the metal from its beginning, three-quarters of a mile below ground through the multifarious refining processes to its ultimate shipment to the world markets as gold bricks. The gold is mined by native Kaffir boys who supply an added attraction here by performing one of their native dances. Narrated by Alois Havrilla. Running time, 10 minutes.

MONOGRAM IN DRIVE FOR $5,500,000 SALES

Observance of W. Ray Johnston's 25th Year in the Industry Coupled with Campaign

A "Johnston Silver Anniversary Drive" was launched by Monogram this week after franchise holders of the company met at the Coronado Hotel, St. Louis, last Saturday, and committed themselves to a $5,500,000 sales quota during the drive which will end January 14th, 1939.

As a climax to the campaign, and in celebration of W. Ray Johnston's 25th year in the motion picture industry, a banquet will be held in January. Mr. Johnston is president of Monogram. Edward Golden, general sales manager, who was among the home office executives at the St. Louis meeting, will be director of the drive for new sales contracts.

On the suggestion of John Mangham of Atlanta, it was decided that all salesmen would be placed on a quota, according to their zone's quota, and that they would be allowed a special bonus commission for all sales above their quota.

Scott R. Dunlap, vice-president in charge of production, announced that the Monogram feature line-up for 1938-39 will include 42 productions, of which 26 will be melodramas and 16 westerns. Complete details on the coming season's product were withheld for announcement at the company's annual sales convention, which will be held April 24th to 27th at the Netherlands Plaza Hotel, Cincinnati.

Among the home office executives at the St. Louis gathering were Mr. Johnston, Leon Fromkess, treasurer; Mr. Dunlap, Mr. Golden and George West.

Among the franchise holders attending were Joe Felder, New York; Sam Rosen, Philadelphia; Harry Bachman, Washington; William Onie, Cincinnati; Robert Taylor, St. Louis; Lester Durland, Kansas City; John Mangham, Atlanta; Steve Broidy, Boston; Harry Benkson, Buffalo; Henri Elman, Chicago; Sam Schultz, Cleveland; John Franconi, Dallas; Lon Fidler, Denver; L. O. Ringler, Des Moines; F. E. Judd, Des Moines; William Hurlbut, Detroit; Sam Decker, Detroit; Charlie Trampe, Milwaukee; Ben Nathanson, Minneapolis; Charles Weiner, Minneapolis; Ben Welansky, Pittsburgh; Carr Scott, Oklahoma City, and Ed Blumenthal, Dallas.

Norton V. Ritchey, Monogram foreign export manager, who is now on a three months' tour of Latin America, this week reported to his home office that he has signed contract for all of Monogram's 1937-38 product with International Films S. A. in Brazil and with Monogram Pictures de Mexico, S. R. L., in Mexico.

Xavier Liceaga, who formerly handled Paramount product in Mexico, is now in charge of the Monogram office there.

"Paradise Isle" and "God's Country and the Man" will be the first of the Monogram pictures to be exhibited under the new contracts.

"Tom Sawyer" Breaks Records; Texas Governor Honors Stars

"The Adventures of Tom Sawyer" last week established one all time record, one 11-year record, a four-year record and four week end marks and two opening day records, according to United Artists. The all-time record was established Saturday at the Fox, Tucson, and the 11-year record was established at the Fox, Phoenix, both in Arizona, on the same day.

The picture, the company reported, broke a four-year record for the Saturday-Sunday week end business at the Denver theatre, Denver, Col. Other week-end marks were established at Loew's Grand, Atlanta, Ga.; Palace, Norwalk, Conn.; Capitol, Wilkes-Barre, Penn., and the Strand, Scranton, Penn. Extended playing time was arranged for the picture at the Garde, New London, Conn., and the Riviera, Binghamton, N. Y., after opening day records were broken.

James V. Allred, Governor of Texas, Monday, honored Tommy Kelly and Ann Gillis, juvenile stars of "Tom Sawyer," who arrived in Dallas for personal appearances. In a special ceremony at the Palace theatre, young Kelly was appointed an honorary Texas Ranger, and little Miss Gillis was dubbed the youngest admiral in the Texas Navy. Young Kelly also acted as honorary Mayor of Dallas for the balance of the day.

Roxy Report Approved

The final accounting and report rendered by Howard S. Cullman, trustee in reorganization for the Roxy theatre, New York, was formally approved by Federal Judge Francis G. Caffey in the United District Court Wednesday.

Cartoon Process Uses Dolls in Place of Drawings

A motion picture cartoon process employing moulded figures, instead of drawings, was brought to New York last week from Europe, for possible introduction in Hollywood, by George Pal, young Hungarian, who says he has been working on the idea for five years.

A new figure is used for each movement, the same as cartoonists now use a new drawing for each different animation.

Mr. Pal the other evening gave the first screening of his "Puppet-toons" before an American audience, at the McMillin theatre, Columbia University, before members of the film study group of Columbia's Extension School.

He calls his technique "the color cartoon in third dimension." Dolls perform against sets in miniature, with synchronized music, song and sound effects employed in the same manner as for silently-made animations of Hollywood's present pen-and-ink cartoons.

Although Mr. Pal's "players" are puppets, there are no strings. They are stationary. Movable figures in past puppet-films, he says, caused a jerkiness. Where the present screen cartoonist draws a separate figure for each motion-step, Mr. Pal builds a separate doll. Each phase of movement is photographed as a single frame of film. He reports that for a typical single scene, a large staff of woodworkers and artists must work for two days making some 56 dolls, each representing a different movement.

The dolls are mostly fabricated from wood, on machines. Hand carving, he said, would be too impractical from the standpoint of time. Glass, cellophane and some metals are also occasionally used.

Color drawings are first created, and photographed, to get a rough cartoon version, as a guide, before puppets are placed on the sets. After the photographing of each frame the dolls are replaced by those representing the next phase of action and positioned in proper relation.

Comparison of production costs of the Pal process and present systems employing drawings has not been made by Mr. Pal. He has his own studio, in Holland, maintaining a staff of 30, said to be the largest outside of Walt Disney's in Hollywood, and where he has made some 25 subjects in his five years of experimentation, mostly "sponsored" reels for advertisers. Philips Company, European radio set manufacturer, is accredited with considerable of the Pal support to date.

Mr. Pal does not intend to enter production here through the advertising films field, but through regular entertainment channels. He has not decided whether he will lease his process to Hollywood producers on a royalty basis, or produce independently for states rights or for "major" company distribution.

Mr. Pal, born in Cegled, Hungary, in 1908, became a film animator in Budapest in 1928, then headed Ufa-Film's animation, at Berlin, for two years, forming his own company in 1930 with studios first at Berlin, then Paris, and now at Eindhoven, Holland.

He is represented in New York by Douglas Duff Connah.

NEWSPAPER THEATRE ADS ATTRACT AS MANY READERS AS PAGE ONE 'BANNER'

AMUSEMENT advertisements in a daily newspaper have more women readers than does the Page One "banner story," or lead.

A Hollywood column attracts as many as does a report on the activities of bonds in the financial market.

Radio programs are scanned by more men and women than are the New York stock transactions.

These and a score of other facts about what is read in newspapers are reported by Dr. George Gallup, director of the Institute of Public Opinion, in the chart published on this page.

The chart, reproduced from Advertising and Selling, brings up to date a "decade of research," according to Dr. Gallup, vice-president of the advertising agency, Young & Rubicam, Inc. The percentage results are based on interviews with 100,000 adult readers of 40 daily newspapers, 33 in cities of more than 100,000 population and seven in cities of 50,000 to 100,000.

More Women Read the Ads

Amusement ads, including those of motion picture theatres, are read by 55 per cent of women newspaper readers, contrasted with only 35 per cent six years ago. Approximately the same number of men, 25 per cent, read them in 1932.

This year's study also reveals a wider circle of radio program readers than in 1932, the percentage comparison being, for men, 26 and 25, and for women, 40 and 30.

First place, in number of readers, goes to the broad classification of "one or more news stories." The second greatest attraction is the picture page, with 86 and 90 per cent of the male and female readers, respectively. Pictures of Hollywood stars are frequently part of a newspaper's pictorial layout.

Third place is taken by another general classification, "one or more comic strips." A breakdown of the number of comic strip readers shows that the best comic in a paper is read by 67 and 59 per cent of the women and men readers, respectively, while the poorest comic has 37 per cent of the women and 33 per cent of the men as readers. These percentages are greater than those credited to editorials, Washington columns, or financial columns.

And the "Love Advice"

Women read newspapers more thoroughly than men, according to the survey results. The total points for the women is 1,427 as compared to 1,095 for men.

There is a wide difference in the number of men and women readers of the best department store ad in a newspaper, 72 per cent of the women reading the ad as against 19 per cent of the men.

Shipping news attracts only two per cent of the male readers while love advice is read by three per cent.

Dr. Gallup points out that "by and large, the studies made during the last six years show a high correlation with the findings of the study reported earlier. . . . The average deviation for 38 items is only three per cent."

Variations and Typography

He also explains that there are variations from city to city in the reading of certain features. "Change in the typographical treatment," he continues, "or in position can often double the number of readers of a given feature. For example it is possible to increase materially the reading of features like Vox Pop, advice columns, various kinds of political, radio, New York and Hollywood columns by giving them greater prominence and by treating them typographically in a way to invite reading."

"On the other hand such features as local news stories, comic strips, picture pages, stock and bond reports, department store, amusement and classified advertising have an almost uniform reading from city to city."

The study was carried on by equipping each interviewer with a copy of the paper for the day preceding the interview. He then went through the paper, column by column, with the reader to find out exactly what each one read in the particular issue. The law of averages, Dr. Gallup says, ironed out the individual differences arising from the fact that some readers spent more than their usual time reading the issue while others spent less time than usual in the perusal of the newspaper.

CHANCE GAMES HIT IN 3 STATES, GAIN IN ONE

Georgia Supreme Court Refuses to Review "Lottery" Ruling; Legal in Kentucky

Chance games received setbacks this week in Georgia, where the supreme court refused to review its decision classifying theatre "Bank Night" a lottery, and in Chicago, Montreal, Missouri, St. Louis, Alabama and New York, but in Kentucky the legislature passed a measure legalizing theatre giveaways. This bill is awaiting the signature of Governor Chandler. The legislature has adjourned. It is believed that efforts now will be made to have the games legalized in Ohio. Exhibitors there see a precedent established by the passage of the Kentucky bill.

In Chicago, Corporation Counsel Barnett Hodes ruled all Bunco games illegal, and Judge Joseph Burke dissolved an injunction preventing police interference with such games. In Montreal, police opened a drive to stamp out giveaways in theatres. "Sho-bonus" was termed a lottery under the laws of Missouri by the Attorney General.

In St. Louis Fanchon and Marco announced that the circuit's first runs and neighborhood houses operated by the St. Louis Amusement Company had permanently eliminated merchandise giveaways, while in Alabama the Superintendent of Insurance suggested grand jury investigation of "jackpot guarantee." In New York, the Brandt circuit was speeding plans to introduce vaudeville in about 20 houses as a cure for chance games.

Charged with Operating Lottery

The Georgia supreme court action was taken in the case of Frank Barber, of Albany, Ga., charged with operating a lottery in connection with Bank Night at his theatre. After an Albany judge had overruled his demurrer in the case, Mr. Barber appealed. The court of appeals and later the supreme court upheld the judge's decision. The case now will be tried in Albany on its merits.

A survey among exhibitors in key situations in Ohio showed practically a unanimity of opinion that an important precedent had been established for Ohio by the passage of the Kentucky bill legalizing theatre giveaways.

Montreal police, in opening their drive to stamp out giveaways, charged three theatre owners with operating a lottery. They pleaded not guilty. One of the cases will be taken as a test case to decide the legality of theatre giveaways in Montreal. According to the police, 10 local theatres were operating the games.

Called "Unequal Contest"

The opinion terming "Sho-bonus" a lottery was written by Assistant Attorney General Franklin E. Reagan, who had charge of the attorney general's departmental investigation into various box office stimulants for motion picture theatres and other amusements. Under the "Sho-bonus" plan it was proposed to distribute weekly prizes up to a total of $500 a week to persons submitting the correct answers to three questions.

In commenting on the plan, Mr. Reagan said: "There appears to be no rule or yardstick by which the correct answers to the questions submitted are to be determined by the judges. The contest is open to all persons 10 years of age or over. It is therefore an unequal contest."

Circuit executives in New York are cautioning their managers to make sure that when reproducing newspaper clippings and other material for publicity purposes, there is nothing in them which might be made the basis of a damage suit. The action resulted from the filing of a $500,000 suit against Balaban and Katz, Chicago, by a man whose name and likeness appeared in a "blowup" of newspaper clippings used on a poster to exploit "Torture Money."

Fanchon and Marco first-runs in St. Louis, the Ambassador, Fox and Missouri, as well as the St. Louis Amusement Company's neighborhood and suburban houses have permanently eliminated merchandise giveaways, according to Harry Arthur, executive of Fanchon and Marco.

Mr. Arthur said that a careful study of box office results over a long period had indicated that the merchandise giveaways were not really beneficial. Experience with Movie Trading Stamps, however, had been different, showing benefit to theatre and merchants, he said.

Frank N. Julian, Alabama superintendent of insurance, suggested grand jury investigation of a practice of guaranteeing collections of theatre "jackpots," saying "it is clearly against the insurance laws of Alabama unless the operators are authorized guaranty companies." Mr. Julian said no individual or corporation had been authorized to engage in the "jackpot guarantee" business, and none would be, "unless they can post $100,000 cash and meet other requirements of the law." Theatre Jackpots recently were held to be lotteries by the Alabama supreme court.

Introducing Vaudeville

As a means of stimulating attendance, the Brandt circuit in New York is speeding plans to introduce vaudeville in about 20 theatres in the metropolitan area. Harry Brandt, president, said that arrangements are being made with the stagehands' and electricians' union. He believes that theatres are putting too much stress on "outside attractions," like cash games, and that they have overdone such stimulants to a point where theatre operations now need a "hypodermic."

While the circuit is willing to pioneer in the move to bring vaudeville back to film houses it will have to be on a business basis, without inflated costs, since the circuit plans to present the combination policy at present admission scales, it was said.

The giveaway test case for Connecticut, appealed to the supreme court of errors by Ernest Dorau, manager of the Capitol, Middletown, has been heard and the decision is awaiting in April or May.

Denver police issued an order barring the use of wheels or cards or series of cards in determining winners in theatre giveaways. The stamp of approval was placed on drawings in which coupons were used and it was not necessary to purchase a ticket in order to participate. The police said they desired to do away with any appearance of lottery if possible.

The National Annuity League, an old age pension group, is sponsoring "pension nights" twice weekly at five Denver Fox houses, holding as bait a chance on a prize for all who buy tickets from the organization.

Mayor Feiker of Northampton, Mass., has threatened to withhold theatre licenses unless chance games are discontinued. The mayor's edict hit two of Northampton's three theatres that have been operating giveaways. In Springfield, Mass., Mayor Putnam revealed he had been requested to cooperate with Mayor Feiker in studying the question of legality of Bank Night. He said the question will be subject to review by the city's Law Department.

At a meeting of the Des Moines Council of Churches in Des Moines the subject "The Moral Implications of Bank Night" was discussed by representatives of city groups. The Reverend Percy Thomas, representing the Des Moines Ministerial Association, charged that Bank Nights were creating a gambling psychology in the public and diverting energy from creative purposes, that the inauguration of Bank Nights was an admission by theatres that they could not survive on the merits of their product alone, that thousands of persons were spending money for Bank Night when they should spend it for their families.

Mrs. S. E. Lincoln, vice-president of the Des Moines council of Parent-Teacher Association's committee of motion pictures, said both the Des Moines and the state PTA are on record as opposed to Bank Night and that it is a lottery even though the Iowa supreme court declines to so call it.

G. Ralph Branton, manager of Tri-State Theatre Corporation, in defending Bank Night, said the Iowa supreme court had declared it was not a lottery, that Bank Night had been a business stimulant to theatres and had enabled many to stay open and run at a profit.

Milwaukee Agitation Renewed

Agitation against chance games in Milwaukee theatres, which culminated in visits by the police to some 20 houses in January for evidence without a single warrant being issued, had been renewed with a request to the state attorney general by the Milwaukee Ministerial Association as to the legality of the games.

In response to the request the attorney general's office declared that it was still studying the statutes and was uncertain when an opinion would be handed down. Pending further action by law enforcement officials, the games continued in use in Milwaukee theatres.

Chief of Police Ralph Brooks, Portland, Maine, and Sheriff Henry Burnell of Cumberland County were planning to enforce the ban on Beano. The game was declared illegal some time ago.

V. L. Chandler, operator of the Rex Theatre in the Negro section of Tulsa, Okla., was freed without bond after pleading not guilty to a lottery charge in connection with Bank Night.

New Trailer Company Formed by Schwartz

E. Schwartz, who headed Ad-Vance Trailer Service, will reenter the trailer field with a new company to be known as Trailer-Made, Inc., with headquarters in the Film Center Building, New York. Pathe Film Corporation is a partner in the new company, and it is understood that J. A. Sisto and Company, Wall Street investment house, also will be a participating factor in the setup.

Operations of the new company will begin immediately. Mr. Schwartz headed Ad-Vance Trailer Service until it was bought out by National Screen Service seven years ago. He also produced a number of short subjects and also heads the Peerless Outdoor Advertising Company.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

TIME MAGAZINE, parent of the March of Time magazine newsreel and of Fortune Magazine, is observing its 15th birthday. For which, Congratulations, Time. To friends and "prospects," Time's proud staff is sending a fac-simile copy of Volume I, No. 1. Thereto is attached a note, written by Albert Sindlinger, advertising manager, as follows: "I am sure you will get just as big a kick as I did out of reading the first copy of Time, especially out of the development of Time's Cinema Department, from the 'custard-piety' of Chaplin 15 years ago to the reviews and news of the cinema today from our own Hollywood correspondent."

Aside to Mr. Sindlinger: We certainly did get a "big kick" out of reading the first (fac-simile) copy of Time, and especially out of Time's first Cinema Department, with its "custard-piety," as exemplified by the following lone item constituting the whole Cinema Department of that first issue:

CINEMA

Adolph Zukor, now in Paris (March, 1923), replying to the queries of French reporters as to whether Hollywood was really as wicked as all that, responded sternly in the negative.

"Hollywood," said Mr. Zukor, "is a very quiet place." He paused. "How disappointing!" chorused the French reporters politely. "A very quiet place," he resumed, emphatically. "No drinking—very little smoking. And as for the evenings—they're just as quiet! Why they're practically inaudible. No sound at all but the popping of the California poppies." And the reporters went disconsolately away.

Time Marches On!

We have come into possession of the funniest-looking snapshot ever to meet our eyes, of a four-year-old standing in the altogether, who later grew to be Montague (Monty) MacLevy, Brooklyn Randforce Circuit press agent and also conductor of the MacLevy Health Gym in New York. Mr. MacLevy may gain possession of the photo on the delivery of solid gold life passes to each and every one of the Randforce theatres, and a life membership in his gymnasium, with towels gratis.

Times being what they are, United Artists' home office workers got a palpitation the other Friday pay day when each received a "blue slip" from the personnel manager, Mr. Norris Wilcox. The cardiograph registered normal again, however, after the employees opened the slips and read:

A refrigerator has been installed on the 15th floor in the cloak room. This is for the preservation of milk only and not for any other purpose or foods.

Empty milk bottles are to be washed and placed on the floor adjacent to the refrigerator. Your milkman should be notified to collect empty bottles there. Milk bottles must not be left in the halls either, full or empty.

Mr. Wilcox won't budge on his stand that the ice-box shall not be used for any other purpose, emergency calls for ice-cubes notwithstanding.

With a parting of, "I never thought I raised my son to be a competitor," Jesse Louis Lasky, Hollywood producer for RKO, now visiting New York, stamped across his Waldorf-Astoria Hotel suite bewailing the hard-heartedness and hard-headedness of Jesse Louis Lasky, Jr., for not giving him first "crack" at the purchase of "No Angels in Heaven," a novel just completed by the son.

Mr. Lasky had been wiring propositions to his son clear across the continent while en route to New York, urging him to "Give your old man a break." Lasky Senior even raised his original bid of $7,500 to $10,000. But it was no use. Young Lasky told the father he would have to sell the story to the highest bidder. And four bids are already in hand from as many of the large companies.

"From laughs to tears in 30 seconds" is a terrific "throat-strain of emotional acting," and Claudette Colbert is able to do it for Paramount only with Lucky Strike Cigarettes, according to this week's magazine testimonials.

ON February 15th, Mr. Vance King, staff reporter of Motion Picture Herald in Hollywood, wrote to the New York news desk as follows:

"A standard gag out here, good for a laugh at all gatherings where persons are acquainted with its DRYNESS, is the Los Angeles River, in reality a sandy depression in the ground.

"With great hullabaloo, James Vandiveer, in charge of the KFI-KECA stations' special events, rigged up a stunt. He planned to take his portable transmitter pack to the river, with Ben Blue, comedian, and 'set sail' on the river, picking up, in the meantime, three Paramount showgirls."

Whether Mr. Vandiveer himself was to "pick up" the Paramount showgirls, or the girls were to be picked up by the microphone, Correspondent King never disclosed. Nor was it determined whether Mr. Vandiveer even reached the arid river with this transmitter. However, if he had only been patient for another two weeks, he could have sailed with ease right down Hollywood Boulevard in a coast guard cutter and literally picked up a choice selection of Busby Berkeley Beauties, Glamorous Goldwyn Girls, RKO Radio Revelers and an assortment of Republican Renegades (from the western-film contingent), to say nothing of a varied collection of writers, directors and producers swimming around in the flood waters without life-preservers. He could have left the studio "efficiency experts," the yes-men and the supervisors until another time.

If that flood had continued just another few days some of those Hollywood producers would have had the American Red-Cross financing their production.

The George Brjur Advertising Agency in New York telephoned our information department to ask what kind of business "Snow White" might be doing in three months.

Three alumni of Grinnell (Iowa) College who got together in the restaurant of Chicago's Standard Oil Building, the other afternoon, were John Canning, Jr., Frank James Cooper and William Francis Crouch. It was a kind of preview for the annual meeting of Grinnell alumni to be held this Sunday at the Chicago Women's Club.

Mr. Frank James Cooper is none other than Hollywood's own Gary Cooper. He has been back for a Grinnell homecoming only once before since he left college, but not once since "arriving" in Hollywood. This trip, then, is intended to bring blushes to the old dramatic coaches at Grinnell, who "blacklisted" him twice, from the dramatic class for "showing no promise."

Mr. William Francis Crouch is the "Bill" Crouch of MOTION PICTURE HERALD's Chicago staff.

Applications of the Schine Circuit in New York State for candidates for the job of theatre manager require the applicant to state his "athletic prowess." Not a word is asked about the candidate's proclivities at explaining things to patrons.

IN COURTS

Paramount Copyright Suit Is Dismissed

The copyright infringement suit brought by Paramount Productions, Inc., and Exclusive Movie Studios, Inc., against Benjamin Leder, who does business as Leader Motion Picture Film Company, and Nathan Leder was dismissed by Federal Judge Samuel Mandelbaum in the United States district court in New York this week because the plaintiffs were not ready to proceed with the trial.

The suit charged infringement of 20 cartoon short subjects produced by Fleischer Studios, Inc. It was alleged that the defendant sold 16 mm. prints in violation of a license granted to Exclusive Movie Studios. A permanent injunction and damages were asked.

Order Claims Filed on French Corporation

Creditors of the French Motion Picture Corporation, distributors of French films in North and South America, this week were ordered to file their claims with Special Master John E. Joyce before March 18th by Federal Judge William Bondy in the United States district court in New York. A hearing at which creditors and stockholders will be represented was ordered held on March 23rd before the special master.

The debtor was authorized to continue royalty payments to producers whose films are being exhibited, but the order did not carry approval of the contracts. The corporation's petition for permission to reorganize under section 77B of the bankruptcy law was approved by Judge Bondy on February 23rd.

Second RCA Extension Granted

A second 30-day extension has been granted to RCA Manufacturing Company, Inc., wholly-owned subsidiary of Radio Corporation of America and Electrical Research Products, Inc., wholly-controlled affiliate of Western Electric, defendants in two separate suits brought by Acoustic Films, Ltd., wholly-owned subsidiary of Gaumont British. Cases have been set for the first part of April in United States district court, district of Delaware. Delay was granted for preparation of technical defense against charge of patent infringement.

Paramount Sued

Suit for $90,000 damages for alleged plagiarism in the Bing Crosby film, "Double or Nothing," has been filed against Paramount by Charles D. and Harriet Livingston of Detroit, in Federal court there. Plaintiffs base their claim on a play they claim to have written, using the same title and story, in 1933.

Order Details in Suit

Casino Productions, Inc., and Yermi Stern, who are suing Warner Brothers for $50,000 damages as the result of an alleged libel in the Warner film, "Go Into Your Dance," were ordered to file a bill of particulars by Federal Judge William Bondy in the United States district court in New York this week.

Loew Stockholder Motion To Be Heard Friday

A hearing on the motion made by Loew's, Inc., to consolidate six separate stockholders' actions against it was set for Friday by Justice Aaron J. Levy in the New York supreme court this week. The suits name as defendants Loew's, the members of the board of directors and some of the officers, and seek an accounting for alleged "acts of mismanagement, waste and extravagance." It is charged that the defendant paid excessive salaries and percentages of net profits, voted options on stock purchases to themselves and made "secret commissions."

Bernard Epstein, a stockholder, started the first suit on January 20th. Other plaintiffs are Arba Dike Faxon, Nicholas Lowy, Charles Alpert, Pearl R. Ginsburg and Hana W. Goldstein, all stockholders. At the same time, Justice Levy will hear arguments on a motion made by Mr. Epstein to examine Loew's before trial through Nicholas M. Schenck, president; David Bernstein, J. Robert Rubin, Arthur M. Loew, Alexander Lichtman, Edward J. Mannix, Sam Katz, Edward A. Schiller, vice-president; Leopold Friedman, secretary, and Louis B. Mayer, vice-president in charge of production.

Upon consent of all sides, all further action on the six suits was stayed until the consolidation motion is determined. It was learned that attorneys for various parties are trying to reach an agreement on the mechanics of the consolidation. The trial of the suit is expected to take place some time this spring.

Fleischer Plans Feature Cartoon

Plans for the production of a feature-length cartoon in color and using third-dimensional effects have been completed by Max Fleischer and Paramount. The film, as yet untitled, will be started in the present Fleischer studio in New York and will be completed in the producer's new Miami plant now under construction and which will be completed about August 15th.

Court Enjoins John Torr

Judge Woolsey in Federal court in New York this week issued a permanent injunction against John M. Torr and others in favor of the Securities and Exchange Commission, which had charged the defendants with violations of the law in connection with the sale of a block of stock of Trans-Lux Daylight Pictures Screen Corporation.

Legal Digest Service

Herbert T. Silverberg, Los Angeles motion picture attorney, is planning to establish a digest service which will make available to motion picture attorneys, film executives, libraries and research bodies the legal decisions rendered by State and Federal courts in their respective jurisdictions. He also plans to have six representative lawyers of the industry serve on a committee, the duty of which will be to govern the editorial policies of the digest.

Open Minneapolis Exchange

The new Twentieth Century-Fox exchange building in Minneapolis, Minn., was opened this week. William C. Gehring, central division manager, and M. A. Levy, district manager, attended the opening.

OBITUARIES

Max Young Dies

Max M. Young, 42, eastern Ohio independent theatre operator, died at Miami, Fla., from a heart attack February 24th. Mr. Young operated the Mozart, State and McKinley theatres in Canton, Ohio. At the time of his death he and his associates had plans for a new $100,000 theatre at Akron, Ohio.

Ralph A. Pilbrook

Ralph Alger Pilbrook, 40, former exhibitor, died in Haroer Hospital, Detroit, after a short illness. He is survived by his widow and three children.

Ike M. Hartzell

Ike M. Hartzell, 61, former theatrical man in Youngstown, Ohio, died suddenly at Miami Beach, Fla., March 3rd, following a heart attack. Mr. Hartzell at one time owned the Bijou theatre and later the Princess and several others in Youngstown.

Mrs. Elizabeth Mannix

Mrs. Elizabeth Mannix, mother of Edward Mannix, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer producer, died at her home, 330 Main Street, Fort Lee, New Jersey, March 7th, in her 72nd year.

Prudential Signs for RCA Service

Morris Seider, acting as secretary of the Prudential Circuit, New York, has signed a contract with RCA Photophone for servicing in 16 theatres in New York City and Long Island. A similar contract for four other houses in the circuit were signed by Charles E. Casey. At the same time, Mr. Seider arranged for the replacement of old sound equipment with new RCA High Fidelity apparatus in the Playhouse, at Hicksville; the State, at Ozone Park; the Garden, at Springfield Garden; and the Strand, at White Plains. Edward C. Cahill, RCA Photophone service manager, also disclosed a service contract consummated with the Saenger Theatres Corporation covering the sound equipment in 65 theatres.

Reduce Canadian Rates

A further reduction in railway express charges for shipments of films and accessories for film exchanges and exhibitors has been made by the Canadian Pacific and Canadian National Railways with the publication of a new schedule of rates to meet the growing use of highway transport services for delivery and pickup of films and supplies. The rates were materially reduced in September, 1935.

"Happy Landing" Voted Best

"Happy Landing," Twentieth Century-Fox's third musical starring Sonja Henie, has been selected by motion picture critics of the Scripps-Howard newspapers as the best picture released in January.

French Bar One, Pass Another

The censor board in Paris has refused to permit the dubbing of "Dead End" into French, though the picture has been shown in the original form for several weeks. The board has approved "The Road Back" after certain deletions.

THE SOLUTION

FINE grain, solver of many a photographic problem, has finally overcome the problem of duplicating. Eastman Fine Grain Duplicating Films are capable of making "dupes" that cannot be distinguished from originals. Now the original in the laboratory and the duplicate in the vault can be actually equal in quality. Eastman Kodak Company, Rochester, N. Y. (J. E. Renaissance

A renaissance of production is announced by Warner Brothers First National Productions at Teddington, which suspended activity on Irving Asher's departure to the United States, and which he declared would remain dark until the Quota act had become law.

Mr. Asher, having changed his mind, now announces that 15 films will be made in the current production year from April, 1938 to March 1939, and that the first of these will be the "The Return of Carol Sawyer" in which Bebe Daniels has been signed to star.

"I have worked out a programme only in its early stages," said Mr. Asher, "but I thought that anything I could do should be done now without waiting for the final decision on the Films Bill.

"Carol Sawyer" will be a large scale film and though I intended to cast it from America I have decided that Miss Daniels is perfect for the part, and I shall make the production on its original proportions."

The producer is to arrange a programme for at least four major films, which by the time they are in production, will have taken the studios in full employment over the waiting period, and quota commitments will be known.

Max Miller, one of Vaudeville's most popular star comedians, is scheduled to go on the floor shortly in a new comedy titled "Everything Happens to Me."

Two other scripts are in preparation for large scale productions "The Kid's Last Fight" and "The Murder at River House."

A new Claude Hulbert comedy will be made, and the script is at present under way in the hands of Brock Williams and Reginald Purdell.

The advent to our shores of Hollywood stars and directors for Warner Brothers First National Productions hangs greatly upon the final stages of the Films Bill, but Mr. Asher hopes to bring over artists among whom may be Joan Blondell, Pat O'Brien and Frank McHugh.

He also hopes to make films based on plays recently acquired and which include "The Amazing Doctor Clitterhouse", "George and Margaret", "Blondie White", "Wise Tomorrow" and an original "A Gentleman from Kimberley".

Reopening

Activity is to commence again this Spring, promises Basil Dean, executive in charge at the Associated Talking Pictures Studios at Ealing Green, London.

The studio has been closed for some time, no pictures having been made there since production was completed on the George Formby comedy "I See Ice."

Mr. Dean states that he has two productions scheduled, one a film in which the leading roles will be taken by Edmund Gwenn and the Lancashire discovery Betty Driver. This is to be a musical and has already been provided with the working title of "Penny Paradise".

The other will be a new George Formby comedy, script and production of which will once again be in the hands of Anthony Kimmins, and which has received the title of "It's in the Air".

The Duke of York's boys, junior military organization, as they appear in "Stepping Toes," musical recently completed at Sound City Studios by John Barter for U.K.-Two Cities Productions. The film stars Hazel Ascot, juvenile dancing discovery.

"Penny" Films

Production is now almost completed on "Meet Mr. Penny" the British National production which is to bring to the screen "Mr. Penny," one of Britain's radio's favorite characters. Richard Golden, creator on the air of the original "Penny" role, also plays the name part in the film production.

David Macdonald has been directing and is to direct others in the series which John Corfield of British National intends to continue.

Playing in the films are a small band of personalities already known and popular on British radio; they include Fabia Drake, who plays the part of Mrs. Penny, Vic Oliver, rapidly shooting to top stardom as a radio vaudeville quick-fire comedian, Hermione Gingold, whose "Mrs. Trotter" sketches are popular on the air, and Kay Walsh whose work in the George Formby comedies have attracted attention.

"Drum" Ready

Waiting its West End Premiere is London Film Production's "The Drum," latest Technicolor opus from Denham Studios, and responsible for production of which is Zoltan Korda, brother of Alexander Korda.

Set on the North West Frontier of India and with exterior shots taken on the North West Frontier of Wales, "The Drum" brings to the screen again Sabu, the "Elephant Boy" of the film of that name, Raymond Massey, Roger Livesey and Valerie Hobson.

Military scenes in this country were supervised by distinguished military experts.

Documentary

"Conquest of the Air," the London Films documentary drama of the history of flight, is at last completed. One of Alexander Korda's first tasks on his return from America was the supervision of the final editing of the picture.

The picture starts with man's study of the flight of birds and a summary of the early attempts at human flight to be found in legend and mythology. From this it passes through all the phases of achievement and finishes with prophetic reconstruction of the possibilities of flight in the future, based on present day study of the stratosphere.

These final sequences were devised by Ned Mann.

Although "Conquest of the Air" may be termed a documentary film, it has dramatic interest. The many historical episodes connected with the invention of mechanical flight have been re-enacted by a large cast. Laurence Olivier plays the part of Lunardi, one of the early balloonists, and Margaretta Scott is seen as Isabella d'Est in the sequences dealing with Leonardo da Vinci.

De Rosier, the brothers Montgolfier, Count Zeppelin, Borelli, Louis Bleriot, Robert Cocking, Otto Lilienthal, Blanchard, Jeffried, Roger Bacon, Jerome d'Ascoli, Nero, Simon the Magician, Leonardo da Vinci, Wilbur and Orville Wright are a few of the many characters found in this film.

"Conquest of the Air," which was directed by Alexander Shaw and produced by Donald Taylor for Alexander Korda, will have its premiere very shortly in the West End.

ANSWER TO QUESTION NO. 103-B

F. H. RICHARDSON

Question No. 103-B was: (A) Explain why a wire of commercial copper offers to all intents and purposes the same resistance to current flow in any amount up to normal, rated capacity of the wire. (B) What determines the normal capacity of copper wires? (C) To what is increase in resistance of copper wires proportional? (D) Upon what basic temperature is all copper wire resistance based?

Before giving answers to this question I'd like to refer to occasional "kicks" from "students" that their names are seldom or never near the top of the list of acceptable answers. No attempt is made to regulate position of names. Position means just exactly nothing at all. If your name appears, you have answered acceptably—the last as acceptably as the first. Now the answers to Question 103-B (there were two questions numbered 103; the present was submitted in the January 8th issue).

(A) W. H. Edmonds replies, "The maximum safe carrying capacity for commercial copper wires is based by the authorities on the current they may convey without appre-

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL Question No. 109

(A) Name the evil effects of too much or too little pressure of brushes upon the commutator of a generator.

(B) Tell us how you would measure brush pressure and how often you do it?

(C) What is the generator rocker or yoke, and how should it be set?

(Note: Remember this is a Bluebook school and the answer to all save possibly some social questions can be found in that book.)

cial rise in temperature. Since, aside from injury to the wire in such manner as will reduce its area of cross-section at some point, or by heating that will alter its resistance (and since, as before said, the wire will not heat appreciably when carrying any amperage up to its normal, rated capacity), it may safely be said that undamaged wires of commercial copper will offer uniform resistance up to rated capacity.

(B) Few answers to this one were overly informative. R. and K. Wells say, "The normal capacity of a commercial copper wire was arrived at by practical tests to determine at what point increase in current flow (amperage) would cause a rapid rise in temperature. Up to a certain point (slightly above the rated capacity), rise in current flow causes no appreciable rise in temperature. When the point was reached where additional current flow caused an immediate and rapid rise in temperature, that point, presumably with some reduction as a safety factor, was set as the rated capacity."

Messrs. Rau and Evans go further. They say, "Commercial copper wire resistance calculations are based upon a normal temperature of 75 degrees Fahrenheit, or 24 degrees Centigrade. The resistance of one milfoot of such wire (one-thousandth of an inch in diameter and one foot in length) is 10.5 ohms at normal temperature. [The exact actual resistance is 10.79 ohms. In the Bluebook I gave 10.5 ohms to simplify calculations for users of the book, without any appreciable effect on results in practical work. I make this explanation lest some criticize the 10.5 figure.—F. H. R.] What is known as the 'temperature coefficient' is used to determine the increase or decrease in resistance due to increase or decrease of temperature above normal. The coefficient is multiplied by the number of degrees Fahrenheit away from normal and the result added to or subtracted from resistance at normal temperature, depending upon whether temperature be above or below normal."

Altec To Construct Los Angeles Warehouse

Plans for the establishment of a Los Angeles warehouse to serve western emergency stock points were announced this week by Altec Service Corporation following the completion of two deals with western theatre circuits.

Contracts were signed with United California Theatres, Inc., to service 75 houses in California and with the Griffith interest in Texas, which includes 129 theatres operated by Griffith Amusement Company, Consolidated Theatres, Inc., Westex Theatres, etc., and R. E. Griffith Theatres, Inc.

The company's new warehouse will be at West Washington and Vermont Streets, former headquarters of Fox West Coast Theatres.

Akron ITO Opposes Additional Houses

Pointing out that there is one theatre seat for every nine persons in Akron, the Akron Independent Theatre Owners resolved at its annual meeting to oppose the construction of any additional theatres in the city.

Stresses High School Film Classes

Mrs. Jeannette W. Emerick of the East Coast Preview Committee, New York, addressing the meeting of the Better Films Council, Delaware Federation of Women's Clubs, at Wilmington this week emphasized the importance of the move to establish classes for the study of motion pictures in high schools. Teachers as well as parents must be taught the value of this new feature before it can be a success, she said. There are about 5,000 high schools in the country with this new feature, Mrs. Emerick pointed out.

It's Erpi Classroom Films, Inc.

ERPI Picture Consultants, Inc., New York, has changed its corporate name to Erpi Classroom Films, Inc.

THEATRE RECEIPTS

The total of theatre receipts for the calendar week ended March 5, 1938, from 64 theatres in 13 major cities of the country was $886,557, a decrease of $54,928 from the total for the preceding week ended February 26, 1938, when 64 theatres in 13 large cities aggregated $941,485.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

*An international association of showmen meeting weekly
in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress*

STILL SHOWMEN

It has been pointed out to us in a recent story that exhibitors are now more or less content to accept their offerings without sufficient exploitation. The middle-west has been specifically pointed out as being a prime offender in this respect.

Many factors have been claimed to be directly responsible for this apparent situation. One is that exhibitors have ceased to consider one picture "more important" than another. Another reason advanced is that double-feature bills have somewhat quieted the manager's enthusiasm in selling his product.

Frankly our mid-western showmen have been directly accused of "slapping" their product on the screen and just sit waiting for business to come.

However, judging both from the excellence and abundance of campaigns received in this office from the particular territory referred to, we are forced to take exception to the above report.

First of all, as proven in the campaigns we have received, good showmen do not single out any one attraction on which to pull "ace" angles, but rather regard each week with an equal amount of importance, and each attraction with the same respect. Consistent efforts of our fellow Round Tablers point directly to the fact that the manager, if anything, is exerting more effort than ever to lure extra box office revenue.

Also, the fact that a manager's enterprise would be dampened in the selling of any particular show by virtue of his playing a double feature program, may be dismissed with the same thought, according to the evidence at hand.

We sincerely hope that our showmen will continue to display the same spirit and originality they are at this point, in contradiction to the report we have heard. Our records reveal that the boys in the field are "hitting on all high," as never before.

SPELLING BEE

To be found in this week's Round Table Section is a detailed account of a Spelling Bee introduced by Manager Charles Alderson of the Victory Theatre, Salt Lake City.

It is reported to be such a success that it is being used throughout the entire Intermountain Circuit. Frankly we are not surprised that it has "caught on" in such fine fashion, for after studying it we can easily understand why it has become so popular.

It sound like exceptionally good box office for small towns, particularly, or neighborhood houses. Conducted in conjunction with a sponsor, the Bee is put on at absolutely no cost to the theatre. Furthermore, and more importantly, it is not a lottery. There is considerable "skill" connected with it, and above all, it carries a good deal of entertainment. Not to be confused with give-aways, we strongly urge your perusal of the complete details on this Spelling Bee.

SPRING PLANNING

Showmanship is challenged each year with the coming of Spring. Reports have invariably indicated a decrease in attendance receipts along about when the old ball park is thrown open, and now seems to be the proper time to make plans to keep up attendance at your theatre.

In an early Round Table issue will be found many ideas dealing with theatre merchandising for Spring and Easter. Fashion shows, Easter Egg Hunts, lobbies in new Spring garb, special trailers, egg rolling contests, Mother's and Father's Day tieups, etc., etc., will all be discussed and addressed to your attention.

Mayor Myron B. Gessaman, of Columbus, Ohio, has designated seven days as "Loew's Appreciation Week" due to the high calibre of entertainment which has been and is being offered by the Ohio and Broad Theatres there. We can think of few other such ideas as this to sell the consistency of theatres in such a high order.

Pleasant news comes from Salt Lake City, where Charlie Pincus, manager of the Centre Theatre, was low man on the circuit of Intermountain Theatres for the number of passes issued from June 1st to December 31st. He is now, according to authentic reports, wearing a new suit of clothes given him by his employer.

Jack Goldstein

Harry Botwick, M & P State Theatre, Portland, Maine, scouted around until he unearthed one of the old wooden Indians, use of which he promoted for an exploitation tieup in connection with his opening of "Every Day's a Holiday." Planting the Indian out front, card was attached with copy reading: "Don't be a wooden Indian, see," etc., etc.

Round Table In Pictures

Outstanding indeed was the parade staged by Dewey Mousson, manager of the Knickerbocker Theatre, Nashville, for his premiere of "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs." Governor Gordon Brown rode from the Capitol to the theatre; seated in the back of the official car were the Seven Dwarfs "in person."

Promoted by Johnny Sebis and his assistant, N. Krasny was material used to sell their opening of "Nite Spot" at the Terminal Theatre, Newark. Through the cooperation of local police, radio equipment was borrowed and planted in lobby ahead and during run.

Local shoe merchant cooperated with Ray Bell, publicity director, Loew's Theatres, Washington, to exploit his engagement of "A Yank at Oxford." With window carrying tiein copy and plugging sale of store's "oxford" ties, merchant further offered gratis autographed photos of Robert Taylor.

Created by Manager Rudy Kuehn and Assistant Bob Deitch, Stanley Theatre, Jersey City, was "Buccaneer" lobby display shown above. Ship was attached to small turntable and motor which created swaying motion, flanked by six foot star cutouts.

Promoted by Charles Perry, Aldine Theatre, Philadelphia, was Gimbel's attractive window display of Charlie McCarthy dolls in connection with the opening of "Goldwyn Follies." Store also plugged the sale of the dolls in toy department.

Described in detail elsewhere in the Round Table section is Tom Soriero's fashion show at the United Artists Theatre, Los Angeles. Through tieup with local merchant, mannequins paraded in lobby in latest fur styles. Store credit card was prominently displayed.

QUICK REPORTS FROM THE FIELD

Street Broadcast

Regular sidewalk interview from the front of the State Theatre, Portland, Maine was arranged for "Wells Fargo" by Manager Harry Botwick with head of the Express Company on the air who was questioned on the traditions and romance of that era. Spot announcements were secured over local stations and brief synopsis was given over air.

Botwick took the motion picture critic of the Express to Boston with him to attend a sneak preview at which Frank Lloyd was present, which brought excellent reviews in local Portland paper. On return preview was held for critics and local prominents, special lobby displays were built and contest run in dailies for which guest tickets were awarded.

Anniversary

Numerous were the slants used by Jack Markle, Coolidge Corner Theatre, Brookline, Mass. to celebrate that house's fourth anniversary. Weeks ahead, giant setpiece was planted in lobby tacked to which were wires and letters from town and state officials and stars from Hollywood. Planted next to giant birthday cake which was placed on a revolving table, was blowup of congratulatory letter from Governor Charles Hurley addressed to Markle.

Entire front was decorated in festive dress, 200 silver window cards were spotted in merchants' stores, gala anniversary program printed, and door and telephone hangers distributed as were imprinted mirrors, plugging current attraction and the anniversary.

School Tieup

Manager Ray Hughes of the Liberty Theatre, Heavener, Okla., has hit on a plan to increase the average school daily attendance at all schools in his section. Hughes gives a pass to his house to every school child who makes a perfect record of attendance each month and will continue to do so until the end of the present school term.

MANAGER CHALLENGES PATRONS TO CHECKERS

It isn't every showman that is a crackerjack checker player but S. M. Perry, Skouras' Broadway, Haverstraw, looking for a buildup on "Checkers" landed some front page publicity on the date.

Perry who is reported as an expert at the game, challenged anybody in town in groups of eight players, offering guest tickets to those who could beat him. And according to clips received, the theatreman didn't lose a game.

Every manager hasn't this talent, but the gag can be used by engaging an expert.

Broadcast

Week ahead of opening of "I'll Take Romance" at Loew's Rochester, Rochester, N. Y., Les Pollock planted a contest over local broadcasting station offering guest tickets in connection with an essay contest on "Why I would like to see," etc., etc.

Six day serialization was run in the Rochester Abendpost, 10 spot announcements were received over WHEC two days ahead and orchestrations were placed with leading night club bands.

Special Edition

E. G. Fitzgibbon, Palace Theatre, Peoria, promoted his own paper and ran off several hundred peach-colored copies with flier across top reading, "N. Y. riots to see Mae's Film," followed by a cut with stories on the New York premiere of "Every Day's a Holiday." This special May West edition was distributed to dinner time folks with reported excellent results.

Classified Ad

Newspaper co-op contest with a little different twist was used by Pete Egan, Palace Theatre, Calgary for "The Buccaneer." Contestants were instructed to go over each ad on the page and carefully sum up the number of times each letter in the title appeared and to then see how many times the word "Buccaneer" could be spelled completely from the letters accumulated. Guest tickets were given to first ten submitting greatest number.

Ventriloquist

The advent of "Percy and Dummy," a Charlie McCarthyish character into the Major Hoople comic strip, gave Ray Bell, Loew's publicity director, Washington, D. C., an opportunity to tie up interest on Charlie McCarthy's appearance in "The Goldwyn Follies," playing at Loew's Palace. The Washington Daily News, one of the papers carrying the Hoople comic, ran a special one-column box for a week, copy reading, "Charlie McCarthy may drive Phil Baker crazy in 'The Goldwyn Follies,' coming to Loew's Palace soon, but it's nothing the way Percy, the Dummy, is fixing to upset poor old Major Hoople and the other folks in," etc., etc.

For "Yank at Oxford," Bell tied up local shoe store several days ahead of Valentine's Day to christen stock of oxfords the "Yanks." Special window, embellished with collegiate atmosphere, was used, and store and theatre distributed four-page pamphlet asking women to write Valentine to Robert Taylor and for the six most interesting love notes management offered a pair of the oxfords.

Lobby Front

Attractive indeed was Walter Davis' "Victoria the Great" front at the Capitol Theatre, Regina, which was converted into a replica of Windsor Castle, with large door through which patrons entered, entire front was also covered with bunting. Miniature model of Queen Victoria's carriage was planted in selected window with theatre copy and special stories in local papers concerning makeup artist for the production were landed.

Practically all teachers organized theatre parties for their pupils and radio stations plugged the attractions. Davis took advantage of local holiday by hanging signs on all closed stores to the effect that merchants had gone to see the picture, and through tieup with local baker, special cakes were made with the letters "V. R." on the icing. Small picture card plugs were inserted in each box of cake sold.

Street Car

Manager Eddie Pentecost of Loew's Grand, Atlanta, Ga., to ballyhoo "Everybody Sing" chartered a street car to advertise the engagement. Covered with four-sheets, the vehicle made the city's entire loop of car tracks.

DECEMBER: R. Lee Kline, Colonial, Germantown, Pa., "Alcatraz Island"; Elias Lapinere, Paris, Paris, France, "Day at the Races."

Leading in the compilation of the 1937 Monthly Plaque Winners, are theatre-men in the Loew Circuit with a total of four winners. Ray Bell of the Palace Theatre, Washington, D. C., was the only man in the field with two Monthly Plaques to his credit.

Paris, France, was represented by Elias Lapinere's entry and Toronto, Ontario, by that of H. C. Main of the Hanson Theatres.

Subsequent runs as well as first runs were included among the Monthly Awards Winners, and communities as small as Cleburne, Texas, were in successful competition with cities as large as New York and Philadelphia.

During the year 1937, approximately 200 First and Honorable Mention Certificates were awarded various showmen in addition to the Monthly Silver and Bronze Plaques.

As has been the custom in the past two years, the Grand Awards will be presented again this year in Hollywood. Early in May the Grand Awards Winners will be transported to the Coast via United Airlines as guests of the MOTION PICTURE HERALD.

Besides the formal presentations which studio heads, stars, directors and others are expected to attend, a gala round of special entertainments is planned.

The 1937 Quigley Silver, and Bronze Awards plaques will be the same as those given in the 1936 Competitions and measure approximately 11 inches by 14. Names of Monthly Silver and Bronze winners are to be included on these Grand Award Plaques.

Money Back Guarantee

Unique slant in newspaper advertising was used in San Francisco by Manager Cliff Work at the Golden Gate Theatre. Theatreman for the run of "Bringing Up Baby" offered to refund anyone's admission price who failed to enjoy the comedy. There were no requests for refunds.

Educational is investigating the possibility of making a short subject dealing with the history, resources and attractions of the State of North Carolina, it was said last week by E. W. Hammons, president of the company, before leaving New York for Asheville, N. C., for a few days of golf.

Novel Contests Highlight "Non Stop"

For the opening of "Non Stop New York," Ted Kirkmeyer and Harold Woods of the Rio Theatre, Helena, Montana, launched their campaign with a tieup with Western Air Express, whereby the air line gave one round-trip pass to Great Falls and one to Butte to the holders of winning tickets on the opening matinee. The give-away was advertised by lobby cards, one-sheet A-board on sidewalk in advance of the showing and a man carrying a sandwich board on the opening day.

Merchant Provides Window

The theatre also arranged with a local merchant, who is located on Helena's busiest street, for a full window display on a guessing contest as follows: Large map, 10 feet long and four high, showing London, New York and the Atlantic Ocean was placed in the window. In a slot drawn from London to New York was placed a small airplane attached to a belt and pulley. An eight-day spring clock drew the plane slowly from London to New York. By use of a five-foot slot and a six-inch pulley, the plane completed the distance in approximately 120 hours. Thus, the plane starting Monday afternoon completed the trip on Saturday, opening day of the picture. On one side of the map were picture credits and on the other details of the contest; idea was for contestants to guess the exact time the plane would arrive in New York. Entry blanks and receptacle were provided in the store in addition to the window display.

Fashion Show Is Staged In Lobby

In advance of the showing of "Mannequin," Tom Soriero, manager of the United Artists Theatre in Los Angeles, staged a fur fashion show in his lobby.

While in the past these fashion shows were produced on the stage, Soriero utilized his beautiful lobby for this show, thus eliminating the cost of stage hands and musicians, and reports that by having the models parade in the lobby it created a more intimate effect, with the patrons of the theatre being able to view the girls at close range.

Thirty mannequins beautifully gowned, wearing $50,000 worth of furs furnished by one of Hollywood's leading furriers, paraded up and down the lobby all day, from opening to closing of the theatre. There were different models for each day, and the furs they wore were an attraction in themselves. (See photo in Round Table picture section.)

Soriero reports that shows of this type are being staged every month at his theatre with much success.

Star Appointed Governor for Day

For the first time in the political history of Rhode Island a female governor ruled the destinies of the state. And for one day only. Her Excellency was none other than Judy Garland, who was appointed to the exalted position by Governor Robert E. Quinn and brought about by the ingenuity of Howard Burkhardt, manager of Loew's State in Providence, and his division manager, H. M. Addison.

Dear Mr. Hoffberg:

Congratulations to you and your organization on your picture "KATHLEEN" which is now being shown at our Squire Theatre where it is breaking all house records.

We are now in our seventh week with no let-up in business. Our patrons love the picture and the word of mouth advertising has helped swell the gross. Not only have the Irish of New York taken "Kathleen" to their hearts, but the general public as well—give us more "Kathleens."

Wishing you every success, we remain

Yours very truly,

Congratulations

Ted Kirkmeyer and Jules Seltzer are the winners of the 1937 Quigley Grand Awards.

Kirkmeyer, selected for the annual Silver Plaque, is manager of the Rio Theatre, Helena, Montana. His entry on David O. Selznick's "A Star Is Born," awarded the Quigley July, 1937 Silver Plaque, was the campaign that won him this coveted honor.

Seltzer, who is the winner of the annual Bronze Plaque, is head of the Warner Brothers press department in Philadelphia. He won on his entry of "The Life of Emile Zola" which had earned him the Quigley October, 1937, Silver Plaque. Maurice K. Gable aided on the campaign.

Distribution, exhibition and advertising leaders of the industry, comprising the Grand Awards Judging Committee, convened at the Hotel Astor on Tuesday, March 8th. In the News section of this issue will be found a list of Judges, photos, and story of the ceremonies.

Kirkmeyer and Seltzer as guests of Motion Picture Herald and Managers' Round Table will be accorded an all-expense trip to Hollywood and return, via United Airlines. The Grand Awards are to be presented on the coast in the presence of studio heads, stars and directors.

Wrestler and Wooden Indian Sell Picture

Harry Botwick of the State Theatre, Portland, Maine, reports two unusual promotional activities for the selling of "Every Day's a Holiday."

His first was concerned with the wrestling promoters of the Exposition Building, who stage bouts every Monday night which are usually heavily attended. Prior to the engagement of the film, an especially popular wrestler was scheduled for the main bout. Generally regarded by the sporting fans of Portland as the accepted "bad man," this wrestler was presented with a huge bouquet from Botwick consisting of a variety of vegetables and flowers.

This presentation was made in the center of the ring before the bout started, and was visible to everyone in the Auditorium. The center of the bouquet had a large cauliflower which was surrounded by carrots, peas and lilies.

Harry remarks that the announcement speech, which was carried over the loudspeakers, created a lot of laughs and much comment. At the same time a great plug was obtained for Harry's film.

His second promotional scheme involved a wooden Indian. He placed a three-line ad in the local newspaper advising the theatre's need of a wooden Indian. Although this was obtained from another source, the paper received credit for it, and as a result ran a three-column, 12-inch promotional ad in their classified section at no cost to the theatre.

The figure was placed in front of the box office of the theatre. Attached was a sign

Botwick claims this attracted a crowd to the theatre, and an unusual twist to it all was insuring the Indian against fire, wind-storm, hail, explosion, etc. He received excellent newspaper publicity on the presentation of the insurance policy.

Thousands Enter in "Snow White" Contest

Highly successful was a "Snow White" Scrambled—Name 'Em contest, conducted through the medium of the RKO Newsette, published by John Dowd's Home Office publicity staff at RKO under the supervision of Division Manager Charlie McDonald.

Dowd reports that this contest brought 11,000 replies.

Printed in the newsette were the heads of the Seven Dwarfs cut into fourteen separate pieces. In other words, each dwarf was cut in half, and entrants were asked to piece the proper halves together.

Alongside of the cut showing the Dwarfs, was a story with the rules, including the fact that after entrant pasted heads properly together, he had to identify each one with the proper name.

Guest tickets were given as prizes.

"Let's Hear From You!"

Candid Camera Idea

With the candid camera craze in full swing in Toronto, Manager Jules Bernstein of Loew's Theatre, pulled a good one by displaying an array of unposed photographs of local people in the lobby of his theatre. Any person establishing his identity in one of the candid shots is presented with passes for the current week. It is reported that the stills attracted much general attention.

Sponsored Spelling Bee Tied Up With Radio Station

Reported highly successful is a Spelling Bee introduced at the Victory Theatre in Salt Lake City by Manager Charles Alderson, and according to Helen Garrity, publicity representative, it is now being used throughout the entire Intermountain Circuit. It is definitely explained that this is not a lottery.

The scheme is costless to the theatre by virtue of a tieup with radio station KDYL. Besides pleasing the audience immensely, the Bee is claimed to definitely sell tickets.

Although it is preferable to have a radio hook-up with a sponsor since this eliminates cost to the theatre, it is not absolutely necessary. Anyone in the audience may participate with the exception of theatre employees, the sponsor or his employees or anyone connected with the radio station.

Approximately 20 words are used. A certain amount of money is awarded for the correct spelling of each word. One special word is singled out for a larger "prize" than the others, creating more interest. To win a prize, one must not only spell the word correctly, but first pronounce it, then spell it, then pronounce it again. Fifteen seconds is the time limit allowed. Only two opportunities are given to spell a word. If both persons misspell it, the prize money then automatically goes into the following week's prize fund. These rules are announced at the beginning of each program and whenever the prize money is carried over, this is explained to the audience.

The program opens with a commercial for the sponsor. This may or may not be broadcast from the theatre. If not, it is made from the station before the Bee begins. An announcer acts as master of ceremonies. He carries his mike out to the center of the stage and his two assistants walk down the aisles with their mobile mikes.

List Prepared in Advance

The master of ceremonies works without a script, having only a list prepared in advance of the words to be used, with the amount each will bring as a prize. The two assistants who work the aisles should be well known and should understand crowd psychology.

The Hudson Bay Fur Company is the sponsor of the Victory Theatre, Salt Lake City, Spelling Bee. They contribute the prize money as well as the radio time, getting in return, the opening and closing commercials.

As to where to get the words to be used is concerned, the announcer may solicit a list of words from High School and University teachers. This, however, is not exactly necessary, since most newsstands carry a book entitled "1,000 of the Most Frequently Mispronounced and Misspelled Words," which could be used for guidance.

Besides, Miss Garrity reports that this has proven definite box office in Salt Lake City, she further advises that in Twin Falls, Iowa, patrons refuse to go up to the balcony on the grounds that they will miss a chance to spell.

CARROLL T. WILSON

manages the Campus Theatre in Middlebury, Vt., for the Graphic Circuit. Wilson has been in the theatre business for the past eight years, beginning as an usher in a suburban house in Melrose, Mass. From there he went to the Keith Memorial in Boston as usher and worked up to Chief. Last spring Wilson joined the Graphic outfit as manager and opened their new house in Middlebury.

ORVILLE RENNIE

is the city manager of the Tri States Theatres in Hastings, Neb., headquartered at the Rivoli Theatre. Varied has been Rennie's experience, which includes stage production work, master of ceremonies, radio, produced shorts and has managed the Paramount, Orpheum and Omaha Theatres in Omaha. Well, Orville, with that background, there's no reason why you should not send along some mighty interesting contributions to our section and we shall await them with interest.

C. L. BRUSEGARD

up in Winnipeg, Manitoba, manages the Crescent Theatre for the Western Theatres, Ltd., and started in showbusiness seven years ago as usher at the Gaiety. From there we find him working for Round Tabler Bill Novak, aiding on submitting Quigley Awards, and last year Brusegard was sent as temporary manager of the Lyceum in Winnipeg and thence to his present spot. Well, Brusegard, it's time you sent along some campaigns for Award consideration on your own hook, so let's have them.

C. ARNOLD SKELLY

manages the New Arcade Theatre in Newark, Ohio, for Clark C. Rader. While this new Round Tabler says he is fairly new to showbusiness, having been connected with the advertising and newspaper game previously, he promises to become an active contributor to our pages and we shall await his contributions with interest.

ROBERT HEEKIN

down in Jacksonville, Florida, is the house manager of the Florida Theatre. Starting in at that theatre as an usher, Heekin was later promoted to Chief of Service, then to assistant, and about eighteen months ago promoted to house manager when the previous man, Jack Hodges, good member, was transferred to another house.

GEORGE GEORGOPULOS

who is in Philadelphia managing the Venus Theatre for Stamatis and Stephens, worked for them about five years ago as usher and then left to go to the Terminal Theatre in Brooklyn, starting as usher and working his way up to Chief of Service. After three years at that house George re-joined his bosses and he joins us from the Venus, from which spot he promises to keep us informed of his activities.

J. A. SANDERS

is city manager for the R. E. Griffith Theatres handling the Chief and Navajo in Gallup, New Mexico. Johnny says he started in business by the time he was big enough to peddle hand bills for a pass to the show, and has been artist, billposter, janitor, operator and other jobs around the theatre. Sanders says he has been a member of the Chamber of Commerce in every city in which he has managed houses. Theatres that he has worked in include the Colorado and Pueblo in Pueblo; Kiva in Lincoln, Nebraska; Palace in San Saba, Texas; Westex and Olney in Olney, and thence to his present spot.

GEORGE J. FLICKER

manages the Terminal Theatre in Upper Darby, Penna., for William Goldman; started at the Susquehanna as assistant and then became assistant operator there. From there Flicker went to the Norris, York and Jefferson in the same capacity. George operated the Bandbox, went to Sedgwick as assistant and later became manager, then to Yorktown, and from there to his present theatre.

WILLIAM H. MAC DONALD

manages the Liberty Theatre in Great Falls, Montana; was in the pit for six years and then handled all theatre advertising for ten years for the Theatre Operating Company. When Hughes-Franklin started operation and purchased the Theatre Operating Company, MacDonald went along as manager of the Lyric and Regent Theatres in Billings, Mont. Fox took over Babcock soon after Hughes-Franklin released it and Bill joined them as manager at Babcock. Later he was transferred to the Liberty, from where he joins us.

E. R. ERICKSON

manager of the Ogden Theatre, Chicago, Ill., a Warner house, started as usher at the B & K Tivoli, then went to the Avalon and thence to the Jeffrey as chief usher. From that spot Erickson moved over to the West Englewood as manager, at which post he remained a year before going to his present situation.

TED SMITH

is up in Toronto, Ontario, managing the York Theatre. Smith started in showbusiness as an usher at the Christie Theatre, from there he became head usher at the Century and then to the York, from which spot he joins the Round Table. Remember, Ted, we expect that you shall keep us posted on your activities, so let's hear from you.

DEBORAH B. WASHER

manages the Bell Cinema in Brooklyn, N. Y., for the Museum Theatre Corporation. Miss Washer worked as cashier before taking over management duties and she is close enough to Round Table headquarters to drop in and get personally acquainted soon. How about it, can we count on meeting you soon?

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

COUNSEL FOR CRIME: Otto Kruger, Douglass Montgomery, Jacqueline Wells—Although no outstanding stars in this picture, it is very good. Did good business and everybody satisfied. Played February 15.—L. G. Tewksbury, Opera House, Stonington, Me. Small town patronage.

DODGE CITY TRAIL: Charles Starrett, Marian Weldon—This Don Grayson has it. He bids fair to rival Dick Foran. A very good musical western.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

HOLLYWOOD ROUND-UP: Buck Jones, Helen Twelvetrees—This western is different and combines picture making with some western action that makes good entertainment as westerns go.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

ROARING TIMBER: Jack Holt, Grace Bradley—I thought this picture was only very fair. Not good enough for a Holt picture. Business off and no one seemed to care for it. Holt used to be my favorite he-man actor and was very popular here, but he isn't getting anything to work with. His "Storm Over the Andes" made a few years ago by Universal was the best we've had him in years. We wish you better luck next time, Mr. Holt.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

TWO GUN LAW: Charles Starrett, Peggy Stratford—This boy goes over fairly well and they get some nice cowboy songs and music worked in these, enough to help the picture.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

WIDE OPEN FACES: Joe E. Brown, Jane Wyman—Just an average Brown programmer that did slightly better than some of the high priced so called specials from some other companies. Just got by on Sunday. Outgrossed "Love and Hisses" and "Second Honeymoon" by a wide margin. Running time, 68 minutes. Played February 27-28.—Warren L. Weber, Deluxe Theatre, St. John, Kansas. General patronage.

PERFECT SPECIMEN, THE: Errol Flynn, Joan Blondell, Hugh Herbert, Allen Jenkins—Very good comedy drama that pleased Sunday crowd. Both leads doing nice work and ably assisted by Hugh Herbert and Allen Jenkins.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

"SH! THE OCTOPUS": Hugh Herbert, Allen Jenkins, Marcia Ralston—Men have been shot at sunrise for less offenses than this. And if I had been there, I would have cheered them on.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

TALENT SCOUT: Donald Woods, Jeanne Madden—You can take it or leave it and it will never be missed. I am finishing up last year's Warners and will be glad when they're gone.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

Grand National

HERE'S FLASH CASEY: Eric Linden, Boots Malory—Amateurish. It suffers badly when compared with most of present day product. The star is excellent and any company using his talent should at least make an effort to meet the ordinary requirements of modern picture making. Played February 1.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

average picture here, but amateurish direction muffs all chances for it to survive. Maybe the cutting room is at fault, too. Poor box office returns. Played January 25.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BAD MAN OF BRIMSTONE: Wallace Beery, Virginia Bruce, Joseph Calleia—Good old Wallace Beery and MGM certainly made a dandy picture for us small town exhibs. Not only a wonderful picture, but settings and scenery with the tinted film made it beautiful to look at.—L. G. Tewksbury, Opera House, Stonington, Me. Small town patronage.

BEG, BORROW OR STEAL: Frank Morgan, Florence Rice, John Beal—What a swell cast put over this excellent program! We'll take Morgan, Beal or Rice in any picture. The story was good and certainly kept them laughing. Running time, 72 minutes. Played February 16-17.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

BEG, BORROW OR STEAL: Frank Morgan, Florence Rice, John Beal—Another good program from Metro. Why don't they make more of this type and fewer of the costumes that we pay for so that England will buy and which don't mean a thing but argument and loss of revenue.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

BROADWAY MELODY OF 1938: Robert Taylor, Eleanor Powell, Buddy Ebsen, Judy Garland, Sophie Tucker—A very good musical which does not quite measure up to the "hit" standard. The usual excellent dancing by Eleanor Powell, George Murphy and Buddy Ebsen, a couple of thrilling horse races and some brilliant comedy by Willie Howard, Robert Benchley and Raymond Walburn keep the picture going in fine manner, but the stars, the real stars, are a youngster, Judy Garland, and an old timer, Sophie Tucker. Judy's rendition of "Everybody Sing" and "You Made Me Love You" are rather ringing show stoppers, and Sophie's "Some of These Days" and "Your Broadway and Mine" share equal honors. Without them, well, it would have been just a musical. Running time, 105 minutes. Played February 26.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

DOUBLE WEDDING: William Powell, Myrna Loy—Good picture. Will please but not strong enough for extended runs. Running time, 87 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

FIREFLY, THE: Jeanette MacDonald, Allan Jones—Excellent production in every detail and is strong enough for extended runs in any spot. Running time, 135 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

GOOD EARTH, THE: Paul Muni, Luise Rainer, Walter Connolly—Another masterpiece from Metro. We booked this to satisfy the more intelligent group, but it seemed to please all. Pearl Buck's great novel lost none of its appeal in its transfer to the screen. A sterling performance by Luise Rainer eclipsed Muni's acting. Stark realism stalks all through the picture in the shape of famine, plagues and storms. It is Irving Thalberg's last picture and he has left a monument which will be talked of long after the "fluff and twaddle" passes into oblivion. Thanks, Metro, for giving us one of the outstanding pictures of the year. Running time, 130 minutes. Played February 22.—J. R. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

LAST GANGSTER, THE: Edward G. Robinson, James Stewart, Rose Stradner—A fine Robinson picture and that's saying a lot because any Robinson picture is good. Rose Stradner is fine, too. Running time, 81 minutes. Played February 18-19.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

MADAME X: Gladys George, Warren William—Times like these call for comedy as a steady diet but we found that for a change this non-profitable tear jerker was quite satisfactory. Running time, 72 minutes. Played February 21-22.—H. Wilson Young, Wahoo Theatre, Dubach, La. Small town and rural patronage.

MANHATTAN MELODRAMA (RE-ISSUE): Clark Gable, William Powell, Myrna Loy—Fine reissue. Stars perfect.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

MANNEQUIN: Joan Crawford, Spencer Tracy—Excellent and well received. Strong enough for extended runs. Running time, 92 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

MAN-PROOF: Myrna Loy, Franchot Tone—One of the finest pictures we ever played that did not draw to our small town audience. MGM for some reason has gone highbrow. Miss Loy is easily the Queen of the Screen but her talents are wasted on our people. Tone is rapidly becoming the idol of the small town fans. For us this was just a program picture but, as usual, it was allocated in the "B" group, so we can write it off in the red side of the ledger. Better run it midweek to break even. Running time, 71 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

OF HUMAN HEARTS: Walter Huston, James Stewart, Beulah Bondi—Everybody pleased with this production. Just missed being a masterpiece. Locale and incidents of time of story very, very interesting. Running time, 100 minutes. Played February 21-22.—L. G. Tewksbury, Opera House, Stonington, Me. Small town patronage.

PARADISE FOR THREE: Robert Young, Florence Rice, Frank Morgan—One of those kind that keeps them chuckling all the way through the picture. It is clever, subtle comedy; rich man masquerading to see how the other side lived, and vamped by Mary Astor.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

PARADISE FOR THREE: Robert Young, Florence Rice, Frank Morgan—Very enjoyable comedy produced on lavish lines. As the trailer says, it is really eighty minutes of hilarity. You won't go wrong on this one. Played February 19.—L. G. Tewksbury, Opera House, Stonington, Me. Small town patronage.

ROSALIE: Nelson Eddy, Eleanor Powell, Frank Morgan—A first class production. Frank Morgan has a swell part in this and makes the most of it. Played January 30-31.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

ROSALIE: Nelson Eddy, Eleanor Powell, Frank Morgan, Edna May Oliver, Ray Bolger—I did not know that they accepted middle aged men at West Point as a cadet; must be a new innovation. Miscast, I'd say, but as with all Metro musicals, grandeur obtains in sets and ensembles; whether that adds to the picture and the cost is problematical. The picture was liked and, of course, the build-up on it was considerable. But Powell is not so wonderful any more as a dancer; lot of these young stars in the shorts top her or equal her. She is no great shakes as an actress. Morgan and Bolger topped the show. And I agree with another exhibitor that less of Powell and more of Bolger in the dancing would have been acceptable.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

TRADER HORN (re-issue): Harry Carey, Edwina Booth—Seems pretty crude, these heroics that we once thought good. Most noticeable is the recording which, compared with what is coming through on the pictures at this time, to use the musicians' slang, is corny. Did average business, but it is one that would have been just as well left unrun, which was not true about "Hell Divers" and "Manhattan Melodrama".—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

inson is utterly wasted in this weak programmer. It may satisfy, though, if you can induce 'em in. Played January 19.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

YANK AT OXFORD, A: Robert Taylor, Maureen O'Sullivan, Lionel Barrymore, Vivien Leigh—Have not run this one yet, caught it in another city, to see just what Metro has done to counteract the growing resentment for this too perfect specimen of beauty. Well, they have him kicking the professor in the pants, reminiscent of the Bill Haines days. The dialogue is also reminiscent of the Rover Boy days and, besides that, it was, as the title would indicate, produced in England. Looks like a good picture to let lay on the shelf; that is my opinion. Metro made Taylor what he is today, and it looks to the writer that they are far from satisfied to cast him in this role. His roles have been saccharine in the past and now they have gone to the extreme.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

YOU'RE ONLY YOUNG ONCE: Lewis Stone, Cecilia Parker, Mickey Rooney—One of Metro's best pictures and one of their lowest allocations, but this picture will please more people than most of their super-colossal costume affairs that only the studio and publicity department enjoy. Will get money the second night from word-of-mouth advertising. Play it and enjoy some satisfied patronage and profits.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

YOU'RE ONLY YOUNG ONCE: Lewis Stone, Cecilia Parker, Mickey Rooney—Nice picture of the average American family, well acted and a good cast. And in this one Mickey was vamped, and what a vamp, Eleanor Lynn, a sophisticated youngster that you wanted to spank where it would do the most good.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

Monogram

STARS OVER ARIZONA: Jack Randall—Very good western. Better than average. Randall's singing didn't go over here. People said they didn't like his voice.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

Paramount

BARRIER, THE: Leo Carrillo, Jean Parker—A very good picture. Jean Parker makes the most of this opportunity to shine. The producers ought to recognize in her something worthwhile exploiting. Box office fair. The usual complaint; this isn't like the story. Played January 23-24.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

BLOSSOMS ON BROADWAY: Edward Arnold, Shirley Ross, Rufe Davis—Sell Rufe Davis in this picture, for without him you would have nothing to offer. I regret the fact that two stars of the rank of Arnold and Miss Ross were ever put into such an inexcusable production. It missed all the way around in my town. I would advise that you book your strongest short features with this one to help hold it up. Running time, 82 minutes. Played February 22-23.—R. D. Leatherman, Rialto Theatre, Denison, Tex. Railroad town patronage.

BUCCANEER, THE: Fredric March, Francisca Gaal, Akim Tamiroff—Cecil B. DeMille so far outstripped his last contribution to the entertainment world, namely, "The Plainsman," that you can not compare the two. It would be hard to believe that the same genius was responsible for both of them. March did a very smooth piece of work as expected, but I offer praise for the characterization brought to us by Akim Tamiroff. This picture is on a par with any of recent years. Get behind it and sell it. You can't say too much for it. They're bound to like it. Orchids to Miss Gaal. Running time, 124 minutes. Played February 19-21.—R. D. Leatherman, Rialto Theatre, Denison, Texas. Railroad town patronage.

BULLDOG DRUMMOND'S REVENGE: John Barrymore, John Howard, Louise Campbell—Entertaining mystery comedy drama. Played February 25-26.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

DAUGHTER OF SHANGHAI: Anna May Wong, Charles Bickford—A good melodrama. Played February 2.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

EVERY DAY'S A HOLIDAY: Mae West, Edmund Lowe, Charles Butterworth, Charles Winninger—There is nothing wrong with this picture. It is honest-to-goodness entertainment all the way through. A lot of brains and money spent and should do extra business in any theatre, but I am sorry to report it only did average business three days last part of week.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

LIVES OF A BENGAL LANCER: Gary Cooper, Franchot Tone, Richard Cromwell—Did a bit of swapping to get this instead of one of the new season's and it is a plenty good picture. The print is good and I'd say run it on a bargain night. It will please most of them.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

NIGHT CLUB SCANDAL: John Barrymore, Lynne Overman—A very interesting murder play. Fair box office value, we'd say. Played January 26.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

PARTNERS IN CRIME: Lynne Overman, Roscoe Karns—Very good comedy. Wonder what some of the companies expect us to do with some of their double bill features, when we do not double bill? I think this would have been better suited on a double bill, although it isn't a bad comedy.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

PARTNERS OF THE PLAINS: William Boyd, George Hayes, Harvey Clark—The best picture Boyd every made. This man Clark is a knockout. The cast was well chosen and the plot extremely good, without so much shooting as heretofore. We can say that this picture was different than most plots. Of course, "Windy" was missing, something all western fans look for, but Harvey Clark is a good substitute. Just a swell show. Running time, 70 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

SOPHIE LANG GOES WEST: Gertrude Michael, Larry Crabbe—Fair program picture. Played on Give-away night. Would not have been so hot on any other night.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

SOULS AT SEA: Gary Cooper, George Raft, Frances Dee, Olympe Bradna—Very fine sea story. Well played by a fine cast. The outstanding personality, coming without warning, was Olympe Bradna. Running time, 92 minutes. Played February 13-14.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

THIS WAY PLEASE: Charles "Buddy" Rogers, Betty Grable, Ned Sparks—If you want to see some patrons who haven't been in the place since radio season began last fall, set this in and advertise the radio names. They'll get patrons in who have deserted you. It didn't break any house records and I didn't get rich, but they liked it.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

THRILL OF A LIFETIME: The Yacht Club Boys, Ben Blue, Judy Canova, Larry Crabbe—With a persistent regularity, Paramount's pictures are missing. There is something disjointed in their direction. This was evidently produced by Fanchon and not in their own studio. From her efforts she does not know the public and what they want. Also they plugged Dorothy Lamour and the fact was that if you had batted an eye you would have missed her entirely. Judy Canova the one bright spot.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

WELLS FARGO: Joel McCrea, Bob Burns, Frances Dee—Paramount can be depended upon to give exhibitors at least one smash hit a year and this is it. "Wells Fargo," in spite of a general run of poor business, and very bad weather, did a very nice business, which is something no other feature has done for me since August. It's terrific and good for a day longer than any picture is played. Played February 14-17.—Warren L. Weber, Deluxe Theatre, St. John, Kan. General patronage.

WELLS FARGO: Joel McCrea, Frances Dee, Bob Burns—Frank Lloyd has done a great piece of work in this one. You are delighted by the unique impressionistic graphic picture of the passing of the years as the picture touches on outstanding events of historic moment, by the way the picture rushes through the years and never seems to drag, and by the nice way in which Joel McCrea handles his part. Frances Dee was slightly disappointing. This picture is good for your best dates. You cannot oversell it. Running time, 114 minutes. Played February 12-14.—R. D. Leatherman, Rialto Theatre, Denison, Texas. Railroad town patronage.

Republic

PORTIA ON TRIAL: Frieda Inescort, Walter Abel—A very fine picture. Advertise it big and you won't be sorry. I did not do any business with it, perhaps due to the fact that the stars are not so wellknown. I played this at same time I played the Government film, "The River," and they were both fine. Let all the school teachers in free and they told the school children about "The River."—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

RIDE, RANGER, RIDE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—Very good. Burnette's "Bugle Song" at first of picture helps lift his role to better than average. Autry's are always good.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

UNDERCOVER MAN: Johnny Mack Brown, Suzanne Kaaren—Apologies to Brown for being reluctant to try his pictures. This had all the ingredients that it takes and more besides, including a very pretty girl. Running time, 58 minutes. Played February 25.—H. Wilson Young, Wahoo Theatre, Dubach, La. Small town and rural patronage.

RKO Radio

ANNAPOLIS SALUTE: James Ellison, Harry Carey, Marsha Hunt—A swell little program picture with Harry Carey at his best. Ran it on a double feature with "First Lady" and it saved the day for us. The company has made a remarkable improvement in their product this season. These Service pictures are coming more and more to the front. Running time, 60 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

EVERYBODY'S DOING IT: Sally Eilers, Preston Foster—This particular concoction of slapstick took them all by surprise and pleased quite well. Foster, as usual, turns in a good performance but I am convinced that if he had been confined to roles such as he had in "You Can't Beat Love" we exhibitors would have occasion to be really proud of him. Running time, 67 minutes. Played February 26-27.—H. Wilson, Wahoo Theatre, Dubach, La. Small town and rural patronage.

FIGHT FOR YOUR LADY: John Boles, Jack Oakie, Ida Lupino, Margot Grahame—Quite a good deal of action and a fair amount of comedy. Seemed to please our patrons. Just an average production and good for town or country. Played February 5.—George Lodge, Green Lantern Theatre, Claymont, Del. Small town patronage.

FIT FOR A KING: Joe E. Brown, Helen Mack—Play this one and watch the satisfied look on the customer's face as he leaves theatre. Joe really got a break in this picture and as usual he made good. Running time, 73 minutes. Played February 20-22.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

HITTING A NEW HIGH: Jack Oakie, Lily Pons, John Howard—Played on a Bargain Day but would not have been a bargain at half the price. Cannot say much for this one from any angle. Might fit well in some situations but it didn't click with a bunch of railroad brakemen. Miss Pons had a role that a canary bird could have played to better advantage. Oakie was inexcusable. Better book March of Time with this one or you will be off of RKO for life. Running time, 85 minutes. Played February 17.—R. D. Leatherman, Rialto Theatre, Denison, Texas. Railroad town patronage.

ON AGAIN-OFF AGAIN: Wheeler and Woolsey—Folks don't say anything. I guess they know not to expect their money's worth every time. Any picture with this pair wherein Woolsey is paired off to any extent whatever with a woman has been a dismal flop. Fred Guiol, for one, knew a few of these things, but look what we have now. Running time, 68 minutes. Played February 19-20.—H. Wilson Young, Wahoo Theatre, Dubach, La. Small town and rural patronage.

RIDING ON AIR: Joe E. Brown, Florence Rice—Very interesting and suitable to small towns and country houses. Our patrons seemed to greatly enjoy the show. Action and comedy enough to please everybody all the way through.—George Lodge, Green Lantern Theatre, Claymont, Del. Small town patronage.

TOAST OF NEW YORK: Edward Arnold, Jack Oakie, Frances Farmer, Cary Grant—Here is one of those swell pictures hid behind a weak title. Don't let that scare you, for this is one grand piece of real entertainment. Business above average but should build up on second day of any length run. Running time, 109 minutes. Played February 16-17.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

ALI BABA GOES TO TOWN: Eddie Cantor, Tony Martin, June Lang, Roland Young—Good for any place, town or country. Plenty of action and comedy. One of the good pictures of the year. Of course, Eddie Cantor was the whole show. Played February 12.—George Lodge, Green Lantern Theatre, Claymont, Del. Small town patronage.

BIG TOWN GIRL: Claire Trevor, Donald Woods—Girl makes good as singer in spite of criminal husband, who tries to drag her back to his life. Woods as a newspaper man who inadvertently helps the girl while trying to unmask her as a fraud. Clever comedy angle made this a pleasing program.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

BIG TOWN GIRL: Claire Trevor, Donald Woods—A pretty good program and on bargain night did a right nice business. Not a big picture, but fairly entertaining.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

CHARLIE CHAN ON BROADWAY: Warner Oland, Joan Marsh—This is our second Chan picture and I feel sure that interest in these is increasing among our folks. Running time, 68 minutes. Played February 17-18.—H. Wilson Young, Wahoo Theatre, Dubach, La. Small town and rural patronage.

DANGER-LOVE AT WORK: Ann Sothern, Jack Haley—One of those screwy ones. Not too good, but not bad either. People seem to like them, so why should we worry? Running time, 81 minutes. Played February 9-10.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

HAWAIIAN BUCKAROO: Smith Ballew, Evalyn Knapp, Benny Burt—My first from this star. Played it brand new and have nothing but something good to say about it. I notice that his other two pictures have received bad comments. I have been dreading to play any of them. "Hawaiian Buckaroo" is very good. It's different and your people can't help but like it. I used a Deluxe trailer on it and the trailer is also fine. Smith Ballew's singing was very good but somehow it seemed that he wasn't doing the singing. Notice it when you show the picture. Several people mentioned it to me and I had noticed it also. This is a western with a different story and settings. Music excellent. Evalyn Knapp fine as leading lady. Benny Burt good as laugh provider. I will gladly welcome more Smith Ballews if they are as glad as this one was. But from all accounts his first two were not so hot. Of course, he's no finished actor, but he gets by with the action fans, and it won't matter as long as the pictures are otherwise good. Congratulations, Fox, you have at last released a western that people liked. When will you do it again?—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

HOLY TERROR, THE: Jane Withers—Went back and picked this up in preference to some program picture on the new group and think we were smart. It went over very well. Jane seems to draw them in. Running time, 67 minutes. Played February 11-12.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

JUDGE PRIEST (REISSUE): Will Rogers, Anita Louise—We use these instead of some new punks and they still draw better than average business. Henry B. Walthall's part in this is worth the money, and if anything gets better with age, it is these Will Rogers' pictures.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

LANCER SPY: George Sanders, Dolores Del Rio—We couldn't find any way to make money on this one but it pleased. Sanders was excellent, as was also, for that matter, Dolores. Running time, 84 minutes. Played February 24-25.—H. Wilson Young, Wahoo Theatre, Dubach, La. Small town and rural patronage.

SECOND HONEYMOON: Loretta Young, Tyrone Power—Just as we expected, a swell better-than-average program picture. This pair certainly has what it takes, and what a supporting cast, including that little Marjorie Weaver gal who is certainly a honey, to say nothing of Claire Trevor and Stuart Erwin. Running time, 79 minutes. Played February 20-21.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

SECOND HONEYMOON: Tyrone Power, Loretta Young, Stuart Erwin, Marjorie Weaver—A very good picture that will go over well anywhere. Held attention of our patrons all the way through. One dark reel that was not so good. I enter my protest against pictures so dark that almost nothing can be clearly seen. Played February 26.—George Lodge, Green Lantern Theatre, Claymont, Del. Small town patronage.

THANK YOU, MR. MOTO: Peter Lorre, Jane Regan—My patrons like these chiefly because they have read the story in some magazine and there is always plenty of action and mystery combined in some very good entertainment.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

YOU CAN'T HAVE EVERYTHING: Alice Faye, Ritz Brothers, Don Ameche, Tony Martin, Joan Davis—We know we can't have everything, but an increase in business would have been most welcome. Fine picture. Business was not so hot.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

United Artists

ELEPHANT BOY: Sabu, Walter Hudd—Good jungle picture, but it failed to do business. Too much elephant for most patrons.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

52D STREET: Ian Hunter, Pat Paterson—A disappointment. No business. The picture won't bowl anybody over with its brilliance, either. Only mildly interesting. Played February 2-4.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Universal

ARMORED CAR: Robert Wilcox, Judith Barrett, Cesar Romero—Excellent picture, but poor at the B. O. They liked it very much.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

BLACK ACES: Buck Jones, Kay Linaker—We should think, Buck, that after dropping from number one western star you'd look at one of your finished products and understand the cause. Since we note from the credits you produce your own pictures you must see that by comparison with other nicely produced westerns of today's vintage your own are so crude that they appear ridiculous. For instance, even the photography looks cheap, awfully cheap. It has none of the snap and clarity of a Paramount western. The stories are routine formula stuff—a story is of prime importance even in a western. And worst of all are the amateurish actions of your supporting players. Buck, they are terrible. We've done an awful lot of spouting here, but honestly, Buck, it's sincere and because we'd like nothing better than to see Buck Jones again number one western star when the next poll comes around. And we believe the only thing that keeps you down, Buck, is the fact your pictures are still in rompers. Let 'em grow up and look and act like real 20th century quality action plays. Played January 29.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

LAW FOR TOMBSTONE: Buck Jones, Muriel Evans—Some westerns that we've had lately had a cowboy who could sing and with his hat glued on so that the best fighters couldn't knock him out from under it, but Buck can't sing and he loses his hat often enough to make the action seem real. This western is god enough and worth a playdate.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

MERRY-GO-ROUND OF 1938: Bert Lahr, Alice Brady—The first night we were ready to ditch this one. We didn't like the hodge podge of nonsense it contained and business was next to zero. But we let it run its course, and while it still turned in a rock bottom gross at the end of the run, we did think maybe it was fair entertainment. At any rate, no complaints, and suppose our disappointment in it was somewhat influenced by the fact we almost had to sit alone to view it. Our friends didn't seem interested and were conspicuously absent, and it's hard to find praise for a flop. Played January 27-28.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

YOU'RE A SWEETHEART: Alice Faye, George Murphy—A very good musical that did good business in spite of the weather. This Alice Faye looks like the money and she is going places. This picture has a happy combination of everything that pleases the patrons that it draws and it will draw plenty with a decent weather break.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

YOU'RE A SWEETHEART: Alice Faye, George Murphy, Ken Murray, Oswald—The best Alice Faye musical yet and Universal had to make it. It is really streamlined musical fare and not a draggy spot in it. Ken Murray and Oswald plenty good and should be seen often. 100 per cent satisfaction on this picture. Played January 30-31.—Warren L. Weber, Deluxe Theatre, St. John, Kansas. General patronage.

Warner Brothers

DEVIL'S SADDLE LEGION, THE: Dick Foran, Anne Nagel—This is the best Foran has ever made. If you fans like Foran, don't be afraid of pushing this picture to the limit. The results should surprise you. Running time, 52 minutes. Played February 18-19.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

FIRST LADY: Kay Francis, Preston Foster—Warner Brothers are hitting one hundred per cent with us this season on walkouts. First "The Great Garrick," and now "First Lady." It is a shame to use an actress with Miss Francis' talents on this type of product. If they would call a conference of independent exhibitors and talk over product for the coming season and then listen to the independent's comments, perhaps their product would be more profitable to all. This comedy was 'way over the heads of our small town patrons. Running time, 82 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

FIRST LADY: Kay Francis, Preston Foster—We think most folks failed to get enough of the intended satire in this one to get much of a kick out of it. The players were fine but it is awfully talkative. There is practically no action. Played January 29.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

KID COMES BACK, THE: Wayne Morris, June Travis—After "Submarine D-1" thought this kid Morris would be okay at the box office, but this one fell flat. Will be okay on weekend doubles. Running time, 60 minutes.—Warren L. Weber, Deluxe Theatre, St. John, Kan. General patronage.

MARRY THE GIRL: Hugh Herbert, Mary Boland—Positively the silliest picture that was ever made. Our customers lost no time in telling us that it was. Running time, 68 minutes. Played February 18-19.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

VARSITY SHOW: Dick Powell, Fred Waring, Ted Healy, Johnny Davis—I first reported on this after seeing it at Warner's trade show last fall. Went over pretty well; business fair. Healy very, very good. Davis didn't go so good. Waring fine; hope to see more of him.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

Miscellaneous

PASSION PLAY: (State Rights)—This subject, released by Monogram in New Orleans territory, went over O. K. Wonderful music and singing. Off stage voice describes the action. Characters do not talk. Picture is old but good print.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

Columbia

FISHING THRILLS: New World of Sport Series—A good sport reel featuring fishing in all its forms, starting with "little fishes" and ending up with "whales." We have yet to get a poor sports reel from Columbia. Running time, 11 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

HOLD 'EM, COWBOY: New World of Sport Series—Very good. Do not miss this one. Play it by all means.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

HOLLYWOOD PICNIC: Color Rhapsodies—Very poor cartoon. Nothing to it.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

KANNIBAL KAPERS: Krazy Kat Cartoons—Cartoons are always in good taste. This one O. K.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

OH! WHAT A KNIGHT: Herman Bing—Another good two-reeler. It seems like some of the old boys are coming back to putting laughs in comedies instead of clocking them.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

ROOFTOP FROLICS: Broadway Follies—A dandy single reel band act with colored novelty band, good singing and dancing.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

SCARY CROWS: Scrappy Cartoon—Fine cartoon in color.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

SCREEN SNAPSHOTS: Screen Snapshots are consistently good fun fare.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

SCREEN SNAPSHOTS SERIES: These are all excellent.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

WHEN THE WEST WAS YOUNG: Columbia Tours—Pretty fair colored subject.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

Educational

MISS LONELY HEARTS: Song and Comedy Hits This did have some good moments and some of the acts were worth watching.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

SWEETIES: Two-Reel Comedies—A good comedy and when you find one of them that's something. This will fill the bill on most any program.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BOSKO AND THE PIRATES: Harman-Ising—A good cartoon with frogs giving imitations of Louis Armstrong, Fats Waller, Cab Calloway, etc. Good color adds to its value. Running time, 7 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

CANARY COMES ACROSS, THE: Musical Comedies—An excellent comedy two-reel musical. Good singing and very funny. Good on anybody's program any time.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

CANARY COMES ACROSS, THE: Musical Comedies—Some good entertaining spots in this musical.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

CANDID CAMERAMANIACS: Pete Smith Specialties—A seasonable subject at this time and will find a spot on most any program because there are quite a number of these amateur photographers running loose.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

LAND OF INCAS: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—On a par with the rest on most counts. This subject, unlike the very best of the series, fails to leave one with a poignant feeling of wanderlust and nostalgia. Running time, nine minutes.—H. Wilson Young, Wahoo Theatre, Dubach, La. Small town and rural patronage.

LITTLE BUCK CHEESER: Harman-Ising—A crackerjack. Very good, indeed. The cartoon antics are very cleverly done.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

MAIL AND FEMALE: Our Gang—This is good comedy.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

NATURAL WONDERS OF THE WEST: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—Some very nice shots of the well known spots, including the Black Hills.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

NIGHT AT THE MOVIES, A: Robert Benchley—Smart, laughter-bringing short that places Benchley on the top insofar as comedies go. It's a natural for any program. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

OUR GANG FOLLIES OF 1938: Musical Comedies—Very good in its way, but does not pack half the laughs of a Gang one-reeler. Running time, 21 minutes.—H. Wilson Young, Wahoo Theatre, Dubach, La. Small town and rural patronage.

PIGSKIN PALOOKA: Our Gang—Swell fun.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

ROAMIN' HOLIDAY: Our Gang—Will please all Our Gang fans. Running time, nine minutes.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

ROMANCE OF RADIUM: Pete Smith Specialties—Interesting but hardly as sensational as we were led to believe. Doubtless a tough job to produce it, but it's mild and actionless.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

SUNDAY NIGHT AT TROCADERO: Musical Comedies—Good but we missed the color.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

WHAT DO YOU THINK?: M-G-M Miniatures—Another one of those mental telepathy things that create some comment and worth a playdate.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

YELLOWSTONE PARK: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—This subject is absolutely the tops to dress a program. The only one that gets a hand at the ending and isn't that something? Years ago, that would not have happened; they just accepted them.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

Paramount

BALL TOSSERS: Grantland Rice Sportlight with Ted Husing narration—Quite entertaining basketball subject narrated in the pleasing style of Husing. We had local basketball coaches for a morning screening and the local high school's entire team attended on their coaches' recommendation. A good short for the program. We played it with the very weak "Blossoms on Broadway." Running time, 10 minutes.—R. D. Leatherman, Rialto Theatre, Denison, Texas. Railroad town patronage.

EDUCATED FISH: Color Classics—A dandy color cartoon.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

FOWL PLAY: Popeye the Sailor—Fair. These need something new for variety's sake.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

FROM THE MINUET TO THE BIG APPLE: Headliners—A good musical short featuring the Hudson-Delange Orchestra and introducing the new dance, the "Big Apple." A good filler for any program. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, Prison Theatre, State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

FROM THE MINUET TO THE BIG APPLE: Headliners—Up-to-date and good.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

IT'S A GOOD STUNT: Paragraphics—A lot of funny ways of earning a living and a good short.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

MAGIC ON BROADWAY: Screen Songs—This Screen Song is clever and worth a playdate. My patrons won't sing, but they enjoy watching these.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

NEW DEAL SHOW, THE: Betty Boop Cartoons—Amusing.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

POPEYE THE SAILOR MEETS SINBAD THE SAILOR: Popeye the Sailor—A two-reel Popeye in color that is worthwhile addition to any program. It's an adaptation from the Arabian Nights' Entertainment done in good style and should amuse the kids from 1 to a 100. Running time, 18 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, Prison Theatre, State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

POPULAR SCIENCE SERIES: Play these by all means. If given the proper advertising they will become a big box office for any theatre. Running time, 10 minutes.—B. J. Aylesworth, Lyric and Connelley Theatres, Eastland, Texas. General patronage.

PROTEX THE WEAKERIST: Popeye the Sailor—Again we give praise to Paramount shorts. This is a fine Popeye cartoon, which series has a fine following here.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

PROTEX THE WEAKERIST: Popeye The Sailor—Not what they once were. Might just as well run another feature at the price.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

RHYTHM OF THE GAME: Grantland Rice Sportlights—We have yet to find a Grantland Rice Sportlight that is poor. This is another good piece of work with Ted Husing M. Cing some excellent sports introduced by sound alone. It's novel, distinctive, and should prove interesting to everyone. Running time, 11 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, Prison Theatre, State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

RIVER, THE: Government Film—I played the Government film, "The River," at the same time with "Portia on Trial" and they were both fine. Let all the school teachers in free and they told the school children about "The River."—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

UNUSUAL OCCUPATIONS, NO. 3: Much better than the first of this present series as the subject matter has been selected with more care. A very good reel. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

WHISPERS IN THE DARK: Screen Songs—Not even a good filler. Running time, nine minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

RKO Radio

HARRIS IN THE SPRING: Phil Harris Band Act—This was a quite outstanding short in my situation. Harris is a favorite in Texas since he took the recent Exposition by storm in Dallas. His name on the attraction will sell tickets in Texas any time. Furnished quite a pleasing contrast to the refined warbling of Miss Grace Moore in "I'll Take Romance." Running time, 20½ minutes.—R. D. Leatherman, Rialto Theatre, Denison, Texas. Railroad town patronage.

MARCH OF TIME, NO. 1: A masterpiece in news.

The best buy of the year. Running time, 18 minutes.—Eugene Venne, Radio Theatre, Longueuil, Que. General patronage.

MARCH OF TIME: No. 4—These are always good. My patrons eat them up and ask for more. On this I extended the run two days by popular demand, so you see. Running time, nine minutes.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

MARCH OF TIME: No. 7—Up to the standard of these reels.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

PATHE PARADE, NO. 1: An asset for any program. Running time, 13 minutes.—H. Wilson Young, Wahoo Theatre, Dubach, La. Small town and rural patronage.

RENTED RIOT, A: Leon Errol—It is truly a riot of laughs. Errol never better. A comedy that will help pull any dull feature out of the hole. Running time, 18 minutes.—Harry M. Palmer, Temple Court Theatre, Washington, Ind. General patronage.

SWEET SHOE: Nu-Atlas Productions—Excellent musical short, where women star, and men almost steal the show. Running time, 11 minutes.—H. Wilson Young, Wahoo Theatre, Dubach, La. Small town and rural patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

KING GEORGE VI CORONATION: Color Special—I ducked this as long as possible but was delightfully surprised to find that it is an excellent and impressive subject, due in no small part to fine color and sound. Running time, 28 minutes.—H. Wilson Young, Wahoo Theatre, Dubach, La. Small town and rural patronage.

Universal

BARGAIN MATINEE: Mentone Musical Comedies—Average talent. Fair entertainment.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

MECHANICAL HANDY MAN: Oswald Cartoons—At least they tried to be different and it did have some funny moments, so will call it a good cartoon.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

TEDDY BERGMAN'S BAR-B-Q: Mentone Musical Comedies—Good collection of acts.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Vitaphone

BED TIME VAUDEVILLE: Big Time Vaudeville Reel—These juvenile vaudeville stars are very good and will please all who see it.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

DOCTOR CUPID: Ken Murray, Oswald—One of the worst shorts I ever ran. Running time, 20 minutes.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

DAY AT SANTA ANITA, A: Sybil Jason—A fine color reel and very good entertainment. Running time, 19 minutes.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

PORKY'S HERO AGENCY: Looney Tunes—A totally different cartoon that took in Greek mythology. Our fans go for these in a big way but the kids did not know what it was all about. The grownups thought it swell. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

SPEAKING OF THE WEATHER: Merrie Melodies—A good cartoon.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

VAUDE-FESTIVAL: Big Time Vaudeville Reel—Some mighty good acts in these and this is no exception.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

WEDDING YELLS: Ken Murray, Oswald—Was a quite silly comedy but these boys seem to click for us in Denison. We had this one with the previously reviewed "Hitting a New High" (R.K.O.) and thanked the Gods of Showmen for something to please the patrons. Running time, 19 minutes.—R. D. Leatherman, Rialto Theatre, Denison, Texas. Railroad town patronage.

DANGER-HIGH VOLTAGE: Floyd Gibbons' "Your True Adventure"—Good entertainment.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Serials

Mascot

ADVENTURES OF REX AND RINTY: Rex, King of Wild Horses, Rin Tin Tin, Jr.—Picked this old one up from Monogram at a very fair rental. Had not played it before. Pretty good, nothing extra. On Chapter Seven now.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

THE RELEASE CHART

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parentheses after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1937-38 season.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk(*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

J. C. JENKINS—HIS COLYUM

Neligh, Nebraska

Dear Herald:

A letter from Ray Musselman of Lincoln, Kansas, tells of the improvements they have made in their Princess theatre, and we surmise that Kansas has another theatre the state can well be proud of. He says that his daughter, Dorine, is in her second week in high school. We can remember when Dorine, then a little tot, sat on our lap and told us about her favorite actor, Buck Jones, but we suppose that now she has transferred her actor affections from Buck to Clark Gable or Robert Taylor. Gosh, how time does fly.

Our guess is that Ray's wife, Mayme, is largely responsible for the operation of the theatre, and our further guess is that Kansas has another theatre operator she can well be proud of. Thanks, Ray, for your very good letter. Give our regards to little Dorine.

The newspaper this morning says that after a person passes 50 the best exercise he can take after he wakes up in the morning is to turn over—and go to sleep again. That's pretty good advice, and if our housekeeper will postpone breakfast for a couple of hours we'll try it.

The acting was very good and the settings much above the average. Mr. Healy gave his usual excellent comedy performance, in what, we understand, was his last picture. In his passing Hollywood lost one of her best comedians.

Mrs. Nell Flake of the Colonial theatre at Alma, Kansas, writes us that she wants the HERALD "immediately." This would indicate that she considers the HERALD necessary to a successful operation of her theatre. Mrs. Flake has it figured just about right. Those Jayhawkers down there seem to know a good thing. Thanks, Mrs. Flake, we'll have it sent to you.

Here is something that we think will be of special interest to you exhibitors who are planning a vacation this summer. Go to the Black Hills. We have been over the Rockies, the Cascades, the Olympics and the Ciscues, but for a short trip the Black Hills has them all beat.

Those of you living south of the Lincoln highway, take the Lincoln to Omaha, then on No. 8 to where it intersects No. 20, on No. 20 to about three miles west of Chadron, turn north to Hot Springs and from there go to Rapid City past the Coolidge lodge and the bowl where the stratosphere balloon went up. From Rapid City go to Lead and Deadwood, from there come back to Rapid City, then go to Rushmore, where the images of Washington, Jefferson, Lincoln and Teddy Roosevelt are carved on the top of the mountain. Go over the Iron mountain to the Needles, then to Sylvan Lake. Then come back by way of Custer to Hot Springs, and go through Wind Cave, but be sure to go into the big plunge bath at Hot Springs. At Rapid City meet Leo Peterson of the Elks theatre, you will find him a swell guy, and at Hot Springs meet Clint and Bessie Robins of the theatre; they are dandy folks too. If you want to go to Yellow Stone National Park come back until you strike 20, then stay on 20 to the park. This is taking a lot of space but we believe you exhibitors will appreciate it.

The HERALD had a picture of a stork carrying a baby to Mr. and Mrs. Happy Hasselo. Happy manages the State theatre at Worthington, Minn., for Henry Hower, and we'll betcha that stork made Happy happy. Congratulations, Happy.

"It's Love I'm After," with Leslie Howard, Bette Davis, Olivia de Havilland and Eric Blome, is a pretty good comedy-melodrama, with Micky Larson of the Majestic at Oakland, Nebraska, sends us a check and says, "Say, Colonel, you old stick-in-the-mud, renew my subscription to the HERALD." To be called "stick-in-the-mud" sounds better to us than almost any other way they could address us.

When we introduced ourself to a lady exhibitor down in Texas once she said, "Why, you old reprobate, what are you doing down here?" Which reminds us of a lady exhibitor in Idaho who said to us, "Well, you old son-of-a-gun."

This "White Spot" is indeed a white spot right now. Almost the entire state is blanketed with about twelve inches of snow, which puts the people in an optimistic frame of mind.

According to the paper this morning the HOLC (Home Owners Loan Corporation) had acquired title to 71,733 homes through foreclosure up to the end of 1937. Up to November 30, 1937, the corporation had loaned $3,093,469,271, of which 11 per cent had been repaid. At the end of 1937 the corporation had sold 6,024 homes and still owned 55,951.

It kinda looks like Uncle Sam had gone into the loan and real estate field, but we were glad to note that not a theatre was listed "among those missing." Say, Aunt Prunty, we've got some uncle. Hey, what?

We understand that Spencer Tracy was born in Milwaukee, Wisconsin. Maybe it was he, rather than the beer, that made Milwaukee famous. Anyhow it was the movies, rather than the beer, that made Spencer famous.

Time was, and maybe still is, when the producers didn't want it known that their stars were married for fear it would hurt their prestige at the box offices, but we understand that Bing Crosby changed all that when he told the producers that he had a lovely wife and four fine children and he wanted the whole world to know it. Hurrah for you, Bing, we're for you.

Doc Bixby used to write a daily column for the Lincoln State Journal. He always wound up his column with a verse of poetry sometimes with this:

*No office lures, though I might fight
The battle and succeed,
Enough if I can only write
What people care to read.*

Personally, we'd sooner have the good opinion of readers than a controlling interest in the United States mint, and we are just about as near broke right now as you find 'em.

THE KEYSTONE OF YOUR FUTURE

MOTION PICTURE HERALD

MARTIN QUIGLEY, Editor-in-Chief and Publisher

VOL. 130, NO. 12

March 19, 1938

TOTALITARIAN

AT long last the organized industry of the motion picture has become poignantly and militantly aware of the Neely Bill and its revolutionary, totalitarian, proposals for federal regulation of motion picture distribution.

Because of a new state of imminence, or the seeming of one, a tide of protests from official sources now sweeps in. Four official statements on the bill were presented, or recorded, in the news pages of Motion Picture Herald last week.

But the story of the Neely Bill began a long time ago, both in fact and in the recordings of the Herald. The measure took its real origin in the designs and purposes of the late Dr. William Harrison Short, who after shuttling from movement to movement and cause to cause, at last elected the motion picture as his pasture and founded the Motion Picture Research Council. It was a job, a payroll and a rostrum of publicity for Dr. Short. He made it a dilettante forum of an array of academic, social and uplifter "name" personages, none of whom had taken his measure, or that of his new cause.

IN the guise of a democratically minded, constructive citizen, eschewing censorships and such, Dr. Short and his associates entered into a movement addressed at a control of the art and industry of the motion picture for his and their purposes, involving a censorship intent, the more to be damned for its dissembling.

Unhappily, too, it developed that what might be called the "Short movement" had purposes that seemed painfully close to a program to make commercial profit-taking opportunity for some of the participants.

It is appropriate at this point to refer to a news article under the heading of "Meddlers seek to grab screen to finance 'Welfare Work'" appearing in Motion Picture Herald of March 30, 1935—and that was three years ago.

The fantastic concepts of the Neely Bill and their weird impracticalities have been amply aired.

THE most serious aspect of the measure is that whether or not it is passed by this Congress, it represents a movement and pressure that will continue. A defeat of the measure, or its possible demise on the table, now probably means that it or its equivalent will be back again at the next session. It is a part of that whole movement of the day addressed at having the government take care of everything.

While the Neely Bill is professed by its proponents to be a measure for the liberation of the screen—a liberation from those who created it—it is in truth an attempt at the reduction of both the art and the industry to the rule of a bureau.

And, speaking of Washington, one may speculate a moment about what might occur in the sector where the Neely Bill and the O'Mahoney-Borah Bill, discussed on this page last week, might overlap.

It would seem that there are a number of movements aimed at preventing the motion picture industry from tending to its own business.

MR. ROACH EMERGES

AN uncommonly assured amusement page advertisement from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in the New York dailies of this press day morning, announcing the opening of "Merrily We Live," inspires reflection on the interesting new career of Mr. Hal Roach.

Not so long ago Mr. Roach seemed firmly cast forever in the category of the two part comedy producer, deep rooted in the traditions and technique of an art of yesterday.

Today he is to be discovered full-fledged and sure handedly engaged in first rank feature production, and production of a type unburdened of reminiscence. This constitutes a performance with few, if any, parallels in the annals of Hollywood. Few have had the elastic capacity.

MR. DARROW

THE passing of Mr. Clarence Darrow in the fullness of his years takes from the American scene a uniquely eminent personality, a great lawyer and a firm friend of the motion picture institution.

Mr. Darrow was a representative of a type and order of citizen becoming all too uncommon among the dominant public figures of the day. He came up from the soil of the great Middle West in a generation so productive of men destined to enrich the national tradition.

Few men of any such positive convictions and such dynamic capacity for stating them in public forums have ever enjoyed as much genuine respect and appreciation as Mr. Darrow, the militant, had from the leaders of his day.

It was his own story that he took to the law because he decided after a season in the hay fields that farming was too arduous. His humor and salty philosophy were reminiscent of the something that was to be found in common between Fields, Ade, Dunne and what might be called the "Indiana school."

Speaking of Indiana reminds one, too, that some thirty and odd years ago this spring there began, in a courtroom battle, a friendship between the already famous Darrow and Mr. Charles C. Pettijohn, then a young novice of the law. Young Mr. Pettijohn did so well that he won approval from Mr. Darrow, and there was many a sequel.

THERE is always optimism in the soil. The day that Austria fell, the snowdrops, first herald of spring, bloomed under the wall in our Connecticut garden. It is income tax time, the market is still unhappy, and the box office could be better. But the mallards have arrived and the marsh marigolds at the edge of the meadow are up with a guaranty of paying in gold.

This Week

Anti-Dual Clause

After almost four years of litigation, another step in the Perelman case against distributors was taken this week when the United States circuit court of appeals upheld a ruling that distributors conspired to insert an anti-dual clause in their contracts with exhibitors. The decision did not outlaw use of the clause but held that when distributors employed it in concert the action constituted a conspiracy and a violation of the anti-trust laws. Double features were the subject of controversies in other communities where parent-teacher associations adopted resolutions calling twin bills detrimental to the health of children.

The court of appeals' decision and the general situation are discussed on page 12.

Propaganda Costs

Press, radio and motion picture "propaganda," so-called, created in behalf of New Deal agencies, once again is the subject of open attack in Congress. J. Parnell Thomas, of the House, is asking for legislation to halt the expenditure "of taxpayers' money" for "perpetuations of the New Deal in office."

Congressman Thomas charges that $600,000 annually is spent for such "propaganda," and that existence of 270 "highly paid press agents" in the various government agencies and bureaus is against the law.

The story of the government in motion picture production is told on page 33.

Long Term Loans

Long term loans for exhibitors covering types of theatre rehabilitation and renovation and equipment purchases not now covered by the Federal Housing Administration credits will be sought by the Independent Exhibitor Owners Association of New York. Harry Brandt, president of the ITOA, said he is endeavoring to have the maximum credits set at $25,000 for individual loans, but the Government agencies so far have limited the amount to $10,000.

Two-Hour Programs

Two-hour programs, during which no trailers advertising future attractions are shown, were demanded by the Bronxville Motion Picture Council this week after it concluded a poll among parents living in the Westchester County village. The council poll also showed that adventure pictures such as "Captains Courageous" rank first among the type of pictures liked and that films in which juvenile stars appear "do not go over so big."

Other results of the poll are given in an article on page 54.

Universal Elects

Stockholders of Universal Pictures Company, Inc., meeting at Wilmington, Del., this week elected three new directors to the board. They are Matthew Fox, a vice-president and executive assistant to Nate J. Blumberg, Universal president; Samuel I. Posen, a New York insurance broker, and J. Dabney Penick, who is associated with A. M. Kidder and Company of New York.

Mr. Posen and Mr. Penick were chosen to represent holders of first preferred stock. They succeed Myer Schine and Willard S. McKay.

William Freiday, formerly a representative of common stockholders on the board, was reelected as the representative of second preferred holders, succeeding R. H. Cochran, resigned. Mr. Fox replaced Mr. Freiday.

All other directors, who represent common stockholders, were reelected. They are: J. Cheever Cowdin, chairman; Mr. Blumberg, Paul G. Brown, D. C. Collins, Ottavio Prochet, Budd Rogers, Charles R. Rogers, Daniel M. Shaeffer and Willis H. Taylor, Jr.

Sales Taxes

Distributors, represented by United Artists, scored a victory in West Virginia this week when the state tax commissioner was enjoined by a federal statutory court from seeking to collect a sales tax on films rented to exhibitors within the state. The court held that levying of the tax would place an undue burden on interstate commerce. The Ohio sales tax was the subject of a bulletin sent out by P. J. Wood, secretary, of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio. Mr. Wood urged exhibitors to oppose a move to eliminate the state's sales tax, warning them that if the move is successful a theatre tax of 12 per cent might be levied.

Both developments, along with the action of the Georgia supreme court on the question of Sunday motion pictures, are discussed in articles on page 16.

ITO Protests

The board of directors of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio met in Columbus Wednesday to discuss the effect upon the independent exhibitor of "discriminatory tactics of the distributors." Contract adjustments on "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" also were discussed.

New England Allied members will hold a special meeting Tuesday in Boston. The meeting will supersede one called three weeks ago but not held.

The Independent Theatre Owners of Arkansas will hold their annual convention at the hotel Marion, Little Rock, Ark., April 10-11. J. F. Norman is president of the organization.

Southeastern Theatre Owners Association will meet in Chattanooga, Tenn., June 5-7 for the organization's annual convention.

Demands Action

Refusing to grant more than a 10-day postponement of the hearing on the RKO Radio reorganization plan scheduled for last Friday, Federal Judge William Bondy advised attorneys for the proponents of the plan that "proper progress" would have to be reported next Monday or the court would not countenance further delay in the company's reorganization.

Hamilton C. Rickaby, attorney for Atlas Corporation, proponent of the plan, requested an adjournment to April 1st, advising the court that the amended reorganization plan, which will improve the cash position of RKO upon reorganization by approximately $4,650,000, would be ready for submission at that time.

Objections to the new adjournment of the hearing were voiced by Nathan Rosenberg, attorney for holders of $140,000 of RKO debentures.

Good Business

The motion picture industry under its Production Code and Advertising Code has shown that "decency is good business," Martin Quigley told a luncheon meeting of the New York Chapter of the American Marketing Association Wednesday at the New York Advertising Club. Reviewing the dangers avoided and the problems solved by the industry in planning the advertising presentation of its product, he pointed out that other general advertisers should realize the danger of running contrary to the public's sense of decency.

The publisher's remarks are quoted in full on page 17.

Radicalism Denied

Denial of the existence of subversive groups in Actors Equity Association was issued by the organization's council and officers this week after a meeting in New York. The council also declared there is no basis of fact for reports that there is a plan under way to form a Works Progress Administration section to which actors without professional training would be admitted.

On Friday Equity's council will recommend at a meeting that the presidency hereafter be an honorary post.

Asher Resigns

Irving Asher, executive in charge of production at the Warner Brothers studios in Teddington, England, resigned on Wednesday from that post after the failure of negotiations for a contractual agreement.

In Parliament the House of Lords committee considering the new Films Act approved the reintroduction of the Stanley three for one quota proposal and increased the initial exhibitors' and distributors' quota percentages to 15 and 20 per cent.

Aubrey Flanagan's article is on page 42.

'Not for One Union'

George E. Browne, president of the International Alliance of Theatrical and Stage Employees, said this week that he was not seeking to absorb performers' unions but merely was proposing that they align themselves with the IATSE. His explanation is revealed and criticized by Frank Gillmore, head of the Associated Actors and Artistes of America, in an article to be published in "Equity," official publication of the Actors Equity Association.

"There must be a catch in it somewhere," says Mr. Gillmore, observing that if the four A's were to consider such an amalgamation the voting power of the IATSE would completely subordinate all the branches of the four A's put together.

Threat in France

American companies in France faced the prospect of serious curtailment of their market in reports that a bill barring double feature programs was under consideration by the Parliament in Paris. Bans on such programs are part of bills being pressed by Jean Zay, minister of education, and L. O. Frossard, new minister of propaganda, both of whom are trying to gain control of the cinema industry for their ministries. Suppression of double bills would make the position of American companies exceedingly precarious because of the fact that the majority of programs in French second and subsequent run theatres are made up of a French talker and an American production in dubbed form.

A review of distribution in France, American and domestic, for 1937 appears on page 36.

FCC Radio Probe

Federal Communications Commission Wednesday ordered investigation of alleged monopoly in radio broadcasting. Frank R. McNinch, chairman, called on the commission's legal division for all material on the subject.

Washington had understood that if the commission did not investigate radio Congress would.

New Feathers

Already labeled in Washington "a blue eagle with new feathers," the Borah-O'Mahoney bill to require the licensing of all corporations engaged in interstate commerce by the Federal Trade Commission, remained a serious threat to the established methods of operation of most of the industries, including the motion picture, which would be affected. Financial structure and operations, methods of selling, character of transactions and competition, and employment of labor, all would be brought under the rigid control of the commission under the terms of the bill.

Provisions are explained on page 13.

On the March

Several weeks ahead of the robin and about coincidentally with the bock beer signs came the first reports of stirrings of life in those quarters concerned with the planning and announcement of the product for the season to come. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer officially announced 52 for 1938-39 at the first of a series of regional sales conferences and from Paramount came word in advance of a series of similar conferences that the program would be the same, 52.

A consolidation of the reports to date is on page 27.

Film Rights

Showing their unusual preference for original stories, 11 motion picture producers entered the literary market last month and acquired 38 properties for the new season. The total purchases numbered three more than were acquired by film companies during January.

The titles of the 38 stories, available production credits and a comparison of purchases during the last 12 months are on page 18.

Doubt Neely Action

The desire of administration leaders to adjourn Congress in May was seen in Washington this week as precluding enactment of the Neely-Pettengill anti-blockbooking and anti-blind selling bill.

Golden Promoted

Edward A. Golden, sales manager of Monogram, has been made vice-president in charge of exchange operations, and executive assistant to W. Ray Johnston, president. The promotion, which takes effect immediately, will permit Mr. Johnston to spend more time at the studios with Scott R. Dunlap, vice-president for production, on the 1938-39 program.

George Weeks, former sales executive of GB Pictures, becomes Monogram's sales manager.

Mrs. James Loomam, executive of the National Legion of Decency, second from left above, and her daughter with Deanna Durbin and her mother, Mrs. Ada Durbin, at a reception for the Universal star at River House, New York.

Clarence Darrow, above, liberal leader and famed criminal lawyer who died this week, had contact with the motion picture industry when he aided in the production of "The Mystery of Life," a pictorial exposition of the theory of evolution, for Universal in 1931, an aftermath of his work in the Scopes "monkey" trial in which he matched briefs with William Jennings Bryan.

Owners, managers and office employees, left, of Affiliated Theatres, Inc., at the annual meeting to discuss future product deals, held this year in the Spink Arms Hotel, Indianapolis. The company has 39 theatres in 26 Indiana and Kentucky cities.

Seated in almost the center of the banquet scene above are Mr. and Mrs. Jack Cohn, observing their 25th wedding anniversary, and their guests, gathered in the Gold Room of the Hotel Savoy Plaza, New York. Motion picture personalities and Columbia executives with personal friends of the Columbia president and his wife were guests for the occasion.

The contented and inquisitive looking birds below are the subjects of Educational's "The Private Life of the Gannets" which won the Academy award for one reel short subjects in black and white. Filmed on a rocky pinnacle off the coast of Wales, one of the four places in the world where that rara avis, the gannet, breeds the reel shows details of the birds' feeding and nesting.

Even dogs have their day at the Academy award presentations. Skippy, above, examines the trophy awarded him as the most outstanding animal in motion pictures during 1937 for his performance of the role of "Mr. Smith" in Columbia's "The Awful Truth." Presenting the statuette is Humphrey Bogart, Warner Brothers' star.

CONCERTED BAN ON DOUBLE FEATURES IS ILLEGAL, COURT OF APPEALS RULES

Attorneys Interpret Philadelphia Court Decision to Mean Anti-Dual Clause Not Unlawful if Employed by One Company

The double feature controversy, for a few weeks confined chiefly to action by parent-teacher associations and other community groups, took on a more official aspect in Philadelphia this week when the United States circuit court of appeals upheld a lower court's ruling prohibiting the use of the anti-dual clause in contracts by the eight large distributors when the distributors act in concert.

Inclusion of the clause by all, the court held, constituted a conspiracy in violation of the anti-trust laws. The decision was generally interpreted by attorneys to mean that the anti-duals clause itself is not illegal but that use of it by two or more distributors in concert is a violation.

Thus, it was pointed out, if one distributor desired to enforce the showing of a picture on a single feature basis, the use of the clause to accomplish this would be legal providing no other distributor, acting in concert, was employing a similar clause at the same time.

Appeal Awaits Texas Ruling

Attorneys for the defendant distributors indicated they probably will not attempt to appeal to the United States Supreme Court until after a decision is handed down in the Hoblitzelle-Interstate Circuit case, in Texas, which involves the same principle—regulation of double featuring by means of exhibition contracts by several distributors. The appeal in the Hoblitzelle case was taken in January, from a decision, adverse to distributors, made last year by the Dallas federal court. The United States Supreme Court will hear the appeal in the week of March 28th.

The Philadelphia decision was rendered in the Perelman case, which was instituted against major distributors almost four years ago. It affirmed the ruling made by George A. Welsh, federal judge, in January, 1935. He had held that the large distributors whose contracts included the prohibitory clause had conspired to violate the anti-trust laws. This decision was appealed to the circuit court of appeals in the fall of 1935 and was affirmed by the higher court in April, 1936.

The distributors were granted a rehearing of the case by the circuit court in October, 1936. In March, 1937, the appeals court issued a memorandum, affirming the district court's decision, but on the following day recalled the memorandum with the explanation that it had been rehearing, which was granted, and the case was regarded last December. It was on this last hearing that this week's decision was based.

It was pointed out that if the decision in the Hoblitzelle case is in favor of the distributors there will be no need for an appeal from the Philadelphia decision but that if the lower court is upheld there is little likelihood that an appeal from the latest decision would be granted.

Double Bills and Health

Meanwhile, the health question, raised originally by women's clubs in Chicago, became the basis of wars on double bills in other sections of the country. However, in Chicago plans for introduction of an ordinance regulat-

KENT PREPARED TO AID ARBITRATION

Support for the setting up of arbitration machinery to settle industry disputes came from three sources this week. Sidney R. Kent, president of Twentieth Century-Fox, announced in Chicago, while enroute to the coast, that his company is prepared to co-operate in any sound move to end industry disputes.

Thomas D. Goldberg, president of the Walbrook Amusement Company and the Harford Theatre Company, both of New York, voiced his opinion in a letter to the Independent Theatre Owners Association of New York. "One of the most important things we need in this industry," he wrote, "is the arbitration board reestablished."

Harry Brandt, president of the ITOA, pleaded for reestablishment of arbitration boards at a meeting of the organization this week.

In announcing his stand, Mr. Kent declared: "There is a feeling among some companies that if they act concertedly to set up conciliation or arbitration machinery, it would be considered collusion in violation of the anti-trust laws. That is not our feeling. We are ready to join with other companies in establishing a system of conciliating exhibitor grievances."

ing the running time of shows have been abandoned, Arthur Lindell, councilman, announced, following the results of a public hearing called by Chicago's council in response to demands for action.

Although there had been joint action by parents seeking to eliminate double features on the ground that they were detrimental to the health of children, not one person spoke against duals at the hearing.

With the dropping of the health issue, Aaron Saperstein, head of Allied Theatres of Illinois, announced in Chicago that his organization will continue its opposition to double bills. Allied attorneys were understood to be prepared to institute legal action against Balaban & Katz, who initiated the two-feature practice in Chicago.

In Omaha, the second district of the Nebraska Congress of Parents and Teachers, through its board of managers, went on record as indorsing the Omaha PTA campaign against double features. But here, too, the movement gained little headway. The anti-dual groups decided that attendance of children at dual feature programs is a matter for parents to control.

Mrs. Jones' statement was made after Dan Butler, mayor, had received a legal opinion informing him that the city had the power to legislate for protection of public health, safety and welfare only when citizens were unable to protect themselves.

The double feature fight invaded Fond du Lac, Wis., with the Jefferson School and the Roosevelt Junior High PTA associations opposing duals. The Junior high group voiced its opposition after conducting a survey which showed that one-third of the seventh grade pupils average one evening a week at the theatre, the eighth graders as a whole have the same average weekly attendance, and slightly more than one-half of the ninth grade pupils.

Milwaukee's double feature problem was described as having resolved itself into a "war of words," with representatives of both sides voicing opinions before women's groups.

Russell Leddy, district manager of Twentieth Century-Fox, informed the Milwaukee County Better Films Council that twin bills were a result of definite public demand. Contending that the theatre's most loyal patrons are between 18 and 26 years of age, individuals who have grown up on motion pictures as their chief form of recreation, Mr. Leddy explained that single bill experiments at the circuit's Downer and Varsity theatres proved unsuccessful. The return of dual bills at the Downer, he said, resulted in receipts being doubled.

Elimination of twin programs, at this time, would mean disaster for the film industry and would result in extensive unemployment, Mr. Leddy declared.

H. C. Herzog, film editor of the Milwaukee News-Sentinel, in an address before the Wauwatosa Women's Club, declared that his newspaper had taken a definite stand on the subject and "feels that no ordinance or laws should be enacted to control the situation."

"If the majority wants double features," he said, "double features will prevail. No law or ordinance commands you to see double features. No law or ordinance should command you not to see double features, if you so desire."

Support for those in favor of a ban on double bills was given by the Milwaukee PTA council, comprising 35 parent-teacher associations with an estimated 3,600 membership. The council also disclosed its planned to seek the support of the state unit by proposing a similar resolution at the state convention April 25 to 27.

Direct to the Public

The Better Films League of Racine, Wis., comprising 25 organizations, tackled the double bill problem by undertaking a study of the public's wishes. Questionnaires now being circulated contain, in addition to a query on double bills, such questions as:

"How often do you go to see a movie? Do you stay to see only the feature picture, or the whole program? What would you like to see besides a feature picture (such as short comedy, newsreel, or other suggestions)?"

The survey is expected to be completed before the league's next meeting in April.

In Denver, the newspaper, Monitor, reported that 57 per cent of the thousand answers to a questionnaire favored two feature programs.

Independent Distributor Defends Double Bills

Were double featuring abolished, either by legislation or by distributor demand, "the entire independent motion picture industry would be wiped out and a great proportion of the major companies as well," Armand S. Cohn, general manager of All Star Features Distributors, San Francisco, wrote last week to Claude A. LaBelle, drama editor of the San Francisco News.

Mr. LaBelle, in an article on advantages and disadvantages of double features, had taken exception to a remark by James Fidler, radio commentator, that "thousands of people, except big stars, would lose employment" if single features became compulsory.

INDUSTRY APATHETIC TO BILL THAT WOULD VIRTUALLY REVIVE THE NRA

Borah-O'Mahoney Licensing Measure Would Place Business under Straitjacket Control of Federal Trade Com-

Despite the broad modifications of distribution practices threatened by the Borah-O'Mahoney bill, leaders in motion pictures appear to be apathetic to the existence of the Congressional proposal empowering government to regiment business.

Virtually giving rebirth to the NRA, in the form of "a blue Eagle with new plumage," the bill would place the motion picture, and all other businesses engaged in interstate commerce, under rigid control of the Federal Trade Commission, including its financial structure and operations, its manner and method of selling, character of transactions and competition, and employment of labor.

The philosophy of the authors is expressed in the requirements surrounding the issuance of licenses, including the following:

Full information regarding the organization and structure of the company.

The character of its transactions in interstate and foreign commerce.

Terms, position, rights and privileges of all classes of outstanding securities.

Terms on which securities are offered to the public or otherwise.

The property taken by the company at the time of its organization and the consideration paid therefor.

Listing of bonded indebtedness and the interests of the bond promoters.

Personnel and salaries of the management.

Text of charter and bylaws.

Number and distribution of stockholders.

Copies of contracts with financial interests with respect to the company's organization and its management.

Names and post office addresses of officers and board of directors.

Amount of each class of stock held by each.

Information on any special legislation relating to the applicant.

Listings of stock held by applicant in other corporations and when acquired.

Written certification, duly authenticated by officers and directors, that the company will subject itself to all Acts of Congress regulating the commerce in which it is engaged or Acts that would limit or affect the rights, powers, or duties of corporations engaged in such commerce.

Unless the aforementioned certification is forthcoming, a license would be refused.

No company shall be entitled to a license which is a party to any contract or combination in restraint of commerce, or if it is monopolizing, or attempting to monopolize.

Employers could not "discriminate" against female employees as to rates of pay or in any other rights when they perform the same duties as males.

Employment of persons under 16 years of age would be prohibited, and no person under 18 would be permitted to work before 7:00 A. M. or after 7:00 P. M.

Employees shall have "the right to self-organiza-

Average Theatre Profits Put at 10%, Film Rentals at 25%, Rent at 15%

Average profit accruing to the average independent motion picture theatre is estimated at ten per cent of gross box office receipts, in a breakdown of theatre operating expenses computed by the Associated Theatre Owners of Indiana, Inc., Indianapolis, of which Norma Campbell is secretary.

Film rentals, as expected, represent the greatest expense of the independent exhibitor, ATO placing that charge at 25 per cent, followed by salaries and wages, at 20 per cent, rent at 12 to 15 per cent, advertising at six per cent, management and booking, five per cent, heat, light and power, four per cent, taxes at three, and insurance at two per cent. Additional, non-specified expenses, are estimated at ten per cent.

This schedule, it was said, "has been found over a period of years to follow approximately the successful operation of a motion picture theatre."

"If your costs are deviating materially from any of the above percentages," the ATO urges exhibitors to "immediately take steps to bring them into line."

tion, to form, join or assist labor organizations, to bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing, and to engage in concerted activities for the purpose of collective bargaining or other mutual aid or protection."

No company could engage in any trade practices which the Commission decides are "unfair," or which have been so defined by United States courts.

The chief place of business—"home office"—and executive offices must be maintained within the state under the laws of which the company was organized.

A full accounting of the affairs of each subsidiary would be required to be made annually both to the Commission and to stockholders.

The manner and method of voting by stockholders in corporate affairs would be regulated, and proxies for stockholders would be allowed to vote only after authorization by the Civil Service Commission.

No company could pay a bonus or commission or emolument of any kind in addition to a regular salary without approval of stockholders.

The Commission would hold full power to deny an application and to promulgate new rules and regulations governing licenses or operations of the licensees under the licenses.

Unfamiliar with Significance

Investigation in and around motion picture home offices in New York, and elsewhere in motion picture quarters recognized as official, shows there is, admittedly, a pronounced unfamiliarity both with the contents and the potentialities of the bill, and a definite refusal to discuss the legislation was made where some knowledge does exist.

At the headquarters of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, it was explained that the usual policy of the organized industry is to avoid discussion of any legislative proposal that would affect all business along with the motion picture.

Furthermore, industry leaders were preoccupied with sales policies and film product for the new season. Some leaders felt that any expression on, the Borah-O'Mahoney legislation and its possible effect on distribution practices might embarrass their company at this time when agitation already exists in Congress for "film reforms" (Neely-Pettingill bill, anti-block booking bill—See MOTION PICTURE HERALD March 12), and in exhibition, as witness Allied States Association's campaign to eliminate block booking and to force distributors out of circuit operation through the so-called state "divorcement bills." Also, the MPTOA is insisting periodically that distributors adopt its ten-point trade practice program.

However, opponents of the Borah-O'Mahoney bill who appeared at the recent Senate Judiciary Committee hearings at the Capital, said it would retard recovery, lead to increased unemployment and otherwise upset interstate business activities.

Hearings bringing out similar testimony were continued this week.

Witnesses contended that more than 300,000 companies would be affected; advocates of the measure, however, asserted that not a third of that number would be involved, because only corporations with book assets in excess of $100,000 would be covered.

Specifically mentioned in the measure is control of competition in interstate commerce, which the bill would "protect, foster and increase."

Fines and prison terms are the penalties for officers, agents or managers of corporations violating the law or refusing to abide by decisions, directions or investigations.

Would Destroy Business

Most outspoken opponents of the legislation are Senators W. H. King (Democrat, Utah), and W. R. Austin (Republican, Vermont).

"The measure is an interference with individual liberty and would destroy American business," Senator King said. "Government has no place in regulating business."

President Roosevelt has not yet determined when he will send to Congress his promised message asking for anti-trust modernization, and it is generally accepted that the message, if and when sent, will be limited to the suggestion that a thorough study be made. However, the Administration has reiterated that control shall prevail by law over corporations engaged in interstate commerce, and over their trade practices and wages and hours of employment.

DISTRIBUTORS WIN SALES TAX FIGHT; GEORGIA SUNDAY SHOWS ATTACKED

Levy Against Rentals Would Be Undue Burden on Interstate Commerce, Is United Artists - West Virginia Ruling

A clear-cut victory by film distributors over so-called sales taxes was won this week in a test case instituted by United Artists, in behalf of all distributors, against the state of West Virginia.

Ordinarily, city and state sales tax laws are clear in their exclusion of film sales made by distributors to exhibitors, but in some sections, such as West Virginia and, previously, in New York City, the authorities refused to grant exemption from payment to the distributors on the distributors' contention that film sales are not taxable because they involve royalties paid on a license under copyright.

In the West Virginia decision, handed down by a three-judge federal statutory court, it was held that levying of the state's one per cent gross sales tax against film rentals would place an undue burden on interstate commerce. Ernest K. James, acting tax commissioner of the state, was defendant.

Denies Distinction Exists

The court's opinion pointed out:

"The defendant attempts to draw a distinction between anti-trust cases and tax cases, claiming that while the former may be interstate commerce, the latter is not necessarily so. No real authority is cited for this claim, and under all the authorities to the contrary and the facts here, we are unable to agree with this alleged distinction.

"The contention of the defendant that the plaintiff had an adequate administrative remedy is, in our opinion, not tenable."

The opinion continued by explaining that under the tax law, the plaintiff had the right to pay the tax and then sue the tax commissioner for its recovery. The defendant contends, the opinion added, that the plaintiff lost any right when it did not make a return and pay the assessed tax.

"If the tax was unlawful," the court held, "then the plaintiff was not required to pay it and go into a state court for its recovery (when it has a right to resort to a Federal Court) and if judgment for the recovery of the tax is obtained, to then wait until a legislature of its own free will, sees fit to appropriate money for the refund."

Payments of Money

Under the tax law, the court pointed out, the tax commissioner is required to pay any money collected into the state treasury immediately upon its receipt "and only the act of an independent legislature, which meets every two years for a constitutional period of 60 days, can take it out."

The court also explained that after the opinion was drafted the supreme Court of the state considered whether the method of refunding had been validly passed by the legislature.

"The court decided in an opinion filed November 23rd, 1937, that it had not been validly enacted and was of no effect," the three judges continued. "As we see it, this only strengthens our conclusion. . . ."

MOSS OPPOSES CONTROL OF THEATRE AGENCIES

Paul Moss, license commissioner in New York City, this week expressed objections in Albany to clauses in the pending employment agency bill which would put small theatrical agencies under the industrial commissioner outside of New York City and under Mr. Moss in the city.

The bill excludes large theatre circuits and the National Broadcasting and the Columbia networks, to which exemption Commissioner Moss objected. In effect, the bill would not apply to networks systems or to theatre circuits which have 20 weeks work available.

This measure, introduced by Assemblyman Ostertag, an outgrowth of the recently defeated Quinn bill, is scheduled to pass the Assembly, but its possible fate in the Senate is unknown.

dependent Theatre Owners of Ohio, expressed fear that theatres will be affected adversely if a plan to discontinue a state sales tax is successful.

"Petitions providing for a constitutional amendment forbidding the imposition of a state sales tax are now being circulated throughout the state," Mr. Wood declared in a bulletin to members.

"If sufficient signatures are obtained, the matter would go before the voters at the November election. If adopted, this amendment would eliminate the sales and use taxes, cigarette tax, beer and wine taxes and certain other excise taxes now in existence.

"The loss in revenue to the public schools, cities, counties and for poor relief and old age pensions would be from $70,000,000 to $90,000,000 annually.

"Such a stupendous loss of governmental income would create a chaotic condition throughout the state and, unless new sources of income were promptly found, numerous functions of government would have to be discontinued and the schools could operate only on a very restricted basis.

"New taxes would have to be enacted to take the place of the loss of revenue and unquestionably the theatres would again find themselves in the position of paying the state of Ohio a 12 per cent admissions tax."

Mr. Wood then called upon members of his organization to actively oppose the circulating of the petitions.

"The threat of this amendment," he warned, "is sufficiently real (if it gets on the ballot its adoption seems certain) to demand immediate action on the part of theatre owners."

Ohio exhibitors now pay a three per cent tax on grosses, which in the majority of cases is passed on to the public through increased admissions.

Johnny Mednikow, formerly with E. Schwartz of Advance Trailer Service Corporation and more recently with National Screen Service, has joined Trailer-Made, Inc., as central western district manager with headquarters in Chicago.

Georgia's Supreme Court Rules Operation of Theatres on Sunday Subject to Injunction by Solicitor General

The showing of motion pictures in Georgia on Sundays, carried on for several years under a clause in the "blue laws" which permit charity performances, was threatened this week when the state supreme court reversed a lower court ruling that the operation of Sabbath shows in Rome is subject to injunction by the solicitor general.

The action highlighted the week's legislative developments which included:

Legalizing of Sunday vaudeville in Meriden, Conn.

Introduction to the New York senate of a companion bill to the assembly bill presented last week and designed to prevent the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers from operating in the state.

Sending the "full crew" bill, providing additional jobs for projectionists in New York City and Buffalo, to the state assembly rules committee.

Passage by the New York senate of a bill giving state troopers and sheriffs jurisdiction over enforcement of laws in theatres in certain communities.

Introduction of legislation in Boston "to provide that outdoor advertising devices may be regulated by zoning laws."

Georgia's "blue laws," tested and re-tested, prohibit all types of amusements on Sunday, except when they are operated for charity. Ralph Rosser, solicitor general of Rome, Ga., sought to enjoin the Rome theatres from operating on the ground that they were not being operated for charity purposes as the theatre owners claimed.

He contended the receipts for six Sundays from Rome theatres amounted to $2,979 and that only $327.20 of the total went for charitable purposes. The remainder, he charged, was used by the operators to pay the regular salaries of employees and to pay rentals on films used. He further charged that the theatres were not operated by any committee representing charitable organizations.

Originally the injunction action was dismissed by Judge Porter in the Floyd County superior court on a general demurrer but the higher court reversed this decision, ruling that the injunction plea stated a cause of action.

It is not considered likely that the decision will have any bearing upon Sunday pictures in Atlanta because in that city the Sunday shows are operated by a committee representing the Scottish Rite Hospital for Crippled Children. The committee takes charge of all receipts and pays all expenses. However, it is generally believed that if Mr. Rosser obtains an injunction in Rome, his action will sound the death knell for Sunday amusements in the smaller towns where the reform element has its greatest strength.

Among the New York anti-theatre bills killed in committee were one by Assemblyman Nicholas A. Rossi, preventing ticket sales when seating capacity had been reached, and a measure stipulating a matron for each 35 children of 16 years of age or under.

SCREEN SHOWS DECENT ADS BEST, QUIGLEY TELLS MARKETING LEADERS

Motion Picture Industry with Its Production and Advertising Codes Has Avoided "Easiest Way", Says Publisher

The motion picture industry has solved the problem of selling its product without recourse to the easy way, that of writing suggestive copy, Martin Quigley, editor-in-chief and publisher of MOTION PICTURE HERALD, told the New York Chapter of the American Marketing Association at a luncheon meeting Wednesday at the New York Advertising Club.

The industry, under its Production Code and Advertising Code, has shown that "decency is good business", Mr. Quigley said.

"To persons engaged in any manner in the profession of selling, there is a story of interest in the problems presented in the selling of motion pictures," said Mr. Quigley. "There is an even better story in just how the motion picture industry has met and solved some of the more important of these problems.

"In the solution of some of these problems there lies an achievement which has not yet received adequate recognition in the advertising councils of the nation. I do not cite this to seek the applause of the advertising world merely for purposes of industry gratification. Rather I am anxious that there be a better understanding of what the motion picture industry faced and solved—and the methods employed—for the guidance it may yield to others who have not yet had their trial at the bar of public opinion but who may be rapidly heading in that direction.

Different from Rotary Motors Copy

"Because of the essential nature of motion pictures, there was—and there perhaps always will be—a temptation to employ methods in advertising copy which border on, if not actually partake of, the character of the suggestive and salacious. A principal selling point of the typical motion picture is the romantic allure of a beautiful young woman. With such a selling point to be dealt with, the hazards involving decency and good taste are conspicuously present. It is something very different from the case of the advertiser of rotary motors or steel girders who reaches out into space and grabs the figure of a bathing girl to put sex appeal into the midst of the machinery.

"There was a time when a certain percentage of motion picture advertising copy was not above reasonable criticism. There are some persons in the industry, or on the fringes of it, who still quake even at the distant rumble of criticism. I am not among these. After nearly twenty-three years of close association with the business of motion pictures I am happy to view at this day a condition which may well be regarded as a genuine achievement.

A Sensible Code of Conduct

"The results that have been obtained have not been fallen upon by accident. They are due to the adoption of a sensible code of conduct, written with an understanding of the objective principles of morality and based upon a sound realization that no business of consequence can exist in a nation of decent people

"... a considerable part of current advertising copy strikes me as being prepared in such a manner as to suggest that the advertiser is not unwilling to tread what is sometimes called the easiest way. . . . Decency is good business."—MARTIN QUIGLEY.

unless it avoids being an influence toward public or private indecency. The desirable results have been insured by the continuing loyalty of the principal concerns in the industry toward this code.

"Considering what a popular subject motion pictures and the industry constitute for assault and criticism in many quarters, I yield to the temptation of referring to certain advertising copy phenomena which are to be met with generally.

"In a recent issue of The New York Times I noted a Wanamaker's advertisement which presented a ladies' dress labelled a 'Strip-tease.' Here we have a phrase borrowed from the dregs of the New York theatre—a phrase, incidentally, which is forbidden in motion picture advertising.

Nudes and Soap

"Then there is the Elizabeth Arden advertisement which counsels secretaries to use the toilet preparations to become attractive to their employers. If the laws of decency have been so completely repealed as to permit a commercial advertiser to urge an office assistant to plan on and prepare for extra-territorial operations, your speaker has not been informed.

"I can well understand that when a beautiful nude is hung in the Metropolitan Museum of Art a legitimate purpose of art may be served. However beautiful and artistic the nude may be, when I see it displayed in a general magazine before an audience of men, women and children in a Woodbury soap advertisement I am inclined to suspect that the advertiser and the Minsky Brothers may have certain arguments in common. The Frenchman who wrote the line about the thing being evil to him who thinks it evil seems at the moment to have forgotten about certain well-known propensities of the human race. There are many manifestations which are inescapably evil in effect when displayed promiscuously before general audiences.

"The New Yorker, in his bus ride and elsewhere, has for some time been entertained with the Gold Stripe Hosiery advertisement which suggests the figure of a girl nude, save only the Gold Stripe Hosiery—that one in the com-modious arm-chair. The names of many perfumes and copy appertaining are worthy of mention, recommending as they do the concoctions as facilities for seduction.

"The Easiest Way"

"I am endeavoring to suggest that a considerable part of current advertising copy strikes me as being prepared in such a manner as to suggest that the advertiser is not unwilling to tread what is sometimes called the easiest way. Treading the easiest way in certain other connections is given a very unpleasant name, yet the two operations have a common meeting ground. They both involve the commercialization of subjects which ought not be made the means of commercial exploitation.

"Advertising is among the newest of the professions. I see no reason for it to embrace kinship with any of the older professions. There is no denial of the attraction value of the feminine face and figure. There is no reason why they may not lend attractiveness to commercial advertising copy. But there are definite and unvarying standards that must be maintained. The single over-all test that must be applied is whether the presentation in question is reasonably calculated to lower the moral standards of the persons to whom it is directed.

"Failure to apply this test is a flagrant assault upon public decency. It is also something that does not come under the heading of good business.

Decency as Good Business

"The organized motion picture industry in the United States, with its pictures produced under the Production Code and with its advertising prepared under its Advertising Code, has learned among other things that decency is good business. It had its test at the bar of public opinion, a test which might have been avoided but was not, probably for the same reasons that govern the continuances of wrong practices in the advertising business: First, the public had not been heard from, at least not emphatically enough; second, the easiest way is always attractive, and third—and very important—the practical application of the principles of morality either in the making of motion pictures or in the preparation of advertising requires very much more than the mere intention to do so.

"Unless all indications are not read aright by one who has felt the heat of public protest over a trend toward indecency, the advertising business is headed for a situation in which it may find that it has rendered a disservice to its clients and to its own reputation. Sales resistance is created and not dissipated in advertising devices which are objectionable to the majority of potential buyers.

Advertisers Accountable

"Advertisers are accountable for a conspicuous and an unwelcome trend in popular advertising and they are accountable also for the encouragement and support of this crop of new magazines which are rapidly destroying America's traditional reputation for decency. As an editor, I wish to assume the fullest responsibility for the character of my publications, but as a publisher, also, I must acknowledge that the advertiser in choosing the kind of publication he wishes to support exerts a very great influence in determining the eventual character of all publications which are dependent upon advertising support.

"If I were either an advertiser or an advertising agency I would not be happy over some of these new standards in publications which are now flourishing in this country.

"I shall not venture to suggest the specific steps the advertising profession should take to meet and control the conditions which obviously need attention. I do know that the danger signal is plainly visible. Adequate, intelligent and reasonable regulation will provide great satisfactions for those who accomplish it; it will create a genuine public benefaction and at the same time it will inevitably prove to be good business."

11 PRODUCERS BUY 38 BOOKS AND ORIGINAL STORIES FOR NEW SEASON

Purchases in Month Do Not Include Any Plays, First Time Since Last July; Nine Novels Have Also Been Acquired

With the attention of producers' buying agents turned to the needs of the 1938-39 season, February brought a slight increase in the number of stories acquired.

Eleven producers bought 38 stories as against 35 in January. Original material continued the favorite, 28 being in this classification. Of the remaining ten stories, nine were novels and one was a magazine serial.

Paramount and MGM Buy Seven

Paramount and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer proved the most active buyers, each acquiring the motion picture rights to seven stories. Paramount's purchases included six originals and one novel; MGM bought four originals and three novels.

David O. Selznick, of Selznick International, obtained the only magazine story purchased in the month, "Gay Banditti," a serial now appearing in the Saturday Evening Post. Janet Gaynor will be starred in the picture, which will be released under the title "The Young in Heart."

MGM negotiated a contract with Albert Bonnier, Stockholm publisher, under which the film company obtains priority rights on all works of fiction in Swedish, Norwegian and Danish which are accepted by Mr. Bonnier. All manuscripts will be submitted to the studio in synopsis form for consideration. Translations will be negotiated by MGM.

Kyne Story to 20th-Fox

Twentieth Century-Fox made two purchases, one of which was "Corncob Kelly's Benefit," by Peter B. Kyne. In 1925 the silent film rights were purchased and a feature based on the story was released in 1926 under the title of "The Shamrock Handicap."

Other buyers in February included Monogram, four originals and one novel; Universal, four originals; Warner Brothers, two originals and one novel; Walter Wanger, one original and one novel; and RKO, Republic and Stan Laurel Productions, two originals each.

For the first time since last July, no plays were bought by film companies.

Stories and Credits

The month's purchases with all available production credits are as follows:

ALGIERS, original screenplay in French by Detective Ashelbe of the French provincial police, and Julien Duvivier, purchased by Walter Wanger to star Charles Boyer. Sascha Lawrence is doing the translation. Release will be through United Artists.

AMERICAN BEAUTY, original by Martha Madison and Vincent Gerbino, bought by David O. Selznick to co-star Carole Lombard and William Powell, with United Artists releasing.

AS YOU ARE, original by Hans Kraly, purchased by Republic to star Ramon Novarro.

BIRTHDAY OF A STOOGE, original by William Wormser, purchased by RKO.

BORROWED TROUBLE, original by Harrison Jacobs, acquired by Monogram.

CAPRA, original by Allan Vaughn Ellston, acquired by Monogram.

MGM AND PARAMOUNT PLAN 52 AS NEW SEASON SELLING ADVANCES

District Meetings Supplanting National Conventions; Twentieth Century - Fox Budgets Six to Be Produced in England

Sales policies and plans for the new product for another motion picture season are in the making. Executives east and west are scurrying between Broadway home offices and Hollywood studios to establish the nucleus of the programs that will be brought to exhibitors, on paper, within a few weeks, by their salesmen in the field.

"Sales drives" are under way in nearly all companies, clearing billings on old contracts to prepare for the new.

Story buying is heavy, Hollywood's already well-stocked vaults receiving 75 new properties within a few weeks, in books and plays, with original manuscripts continuing to predominate. (See page 18, this issue, and page 15, February 26th.)

It seems that the national sales convention will be discarded pretty much this year for the intimacy and concentration of smaller regional meetings. Cost of national conventions is the prime reason.

Selling is earlier this year, with many an important circuit contract already reposing on sales managers' desks for delivery of the 1938-39 product.

MGM To Release 52

In line with the usual competition to get to market first, several distributors are advancing their sales meetings. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer stole a march this week when it officially got its 1938-39 season under way at the first of a series of regional conventions, held at the Muehlebach hotel, Kansas City. William F. Rodgers, general manager, presided.

MGM will release 52 features in 1938-39, Mr. Rodgers announced. The company's policy will be "elimination of the 'B' picture," Mr. Rodgers said, explaining that 36 features will be in a "big-budget, big-star value classification." The remaining films, he continued, will be on a "sliding scale of production expenditure but produced without regard to stinting on the production requirements of the story."

The sales policy was not officially announced, but it was said that the present policy would continue and that, in the final analysis, the terms would depend largely on individual deals.

Three in Color

Included in the new season product will be three pictures in color, five musicals, and two films to be produced in England. A contract was signed with Technicolor for six.

MGM scheduled a minimum of 44 features and a maximum of 52 for the current season. Up to this Friday the company will have given a national release to 27.

The short subject program for 1938-39 is still under consideration. During the season the company is releasing 94 shorts, including 13 two-reelers. There is a possibility, it was said, that the total number will be reduced for the new season. Plans have been dropped for a series of three-reelers, proposed for usage as substitutes for duals.

Other regional meetings of MGM will be held in San Francisco, Saturday and Sunday;

MGM RELEASES LEVINE, ASSOCIATE PRODUCER

After seven months as associate producer for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Nat Levine, this week received his release from the company. He had been preparing for the production of several stories, one of which, "Lord Jeff," starring Freddie Bartholomew, is ready for the cameras.

After taking a vacation, Mr. Levine plans to establish himself as an independent producer with arrangements for major releases.

Chicago, March 24th and 25th; and in New York, March 27th and 28th. Mr. Rodgers will preside at all the meetings. The company will not hold any national sales convention this year.

The 1938 program will be made by a studio roster of 105 stars, contract players and directors. The production plans include starring vehicles for Lionel Barrymore, Freddie Bartholomew, Wallace Beery, Joan Crawford, Nelson Eddy, Clarke Gable, Greta Garbo, Fernand Gravet, Myrna Loy, Jeanette MacDonald, the Marx Brothers, Robert Montgomery, Eleanor Powell, William Powell, Luise Rainer, Rosalind Russell, Norma Shearer, Margaret Sullivan, Robert Taylor and Spencer Tracy.

The company's contemplated pictures for the new season, either in preparation or production, are; Three in color, including "Northwest Passage," starring Robert Taylor, Spencer Tracy and Wallace Beery, with W. S. Van Dyke directing; "The Wizard of Oz," with Ray Bolger, Mervyn LeRoy producing, and "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea," based on the Jules Verne novel.

At least two films to be made by the British studio will be released here, similar to the procedure followed with "A Yank at Oxford." One will be James Hilton's "Goodbye Mr. Chips," starring Robert Donat, Sidney Franklin directing. The other is A. J. Cronin's "The Citadel," with Robert Donat and Rosalind Russell, King Vidor directing.

Additional Pictures

Other pictures will be: "Marie Antoinette" with Norma Shearer and Tyrone Power heading an all-star cast;

"The Thin Man Returns," co-starring William Powell and Myrna Loy;

Two Kipling stories, "Soldiers Three" and "Kim," the latter starring Freddie Bartholomew;

"Idiot's Delight," co-starring Clark Gable and Norma Shearer, with Clarence Brown directing;

"Maiden Voyage," co-starring Luise Rainer and Robert Montgomery;

"Tell It to the Marines," co-starring Robert Taylor and Spencer Tracy;

"The Women," long-run success on the Broadway stage, starring Norma Shearer, with Hunt Stromberg as producer in association with Max Gordon, who staged the play;

"How to Win Friends," based on Dale Carnegie's book, with Stromberg as producer;

Richard Sale's novel of escape from Devil's Island, "Not Too Narrow, Not Too Deep";

"Sea of Grass," with Spencer Tracy;

"The Great Canadian," a story about hockey, with Clark Gable;

"Fidelity," with Joan Crawford;

"I Love You Again," with William Powell and Myrna Loy;

"Stand Up and Fight" and "Bad Man of Arizona," with Wallace Beery;

"One Young American," with Beery and Freddie Bartholomew;

"Boy's Town," with Spencer Tracy and Mickey Rooney;

A Marx Brothers comedy, untitled;

"Honolulu," the cast for which has not yet been announced.

Musicals will include "Broadway Melody of 1939," with an all-star cast; "Adventure for Three," starring Jeanette MacDonald, with Robert Z. Leonard as producer-director; "The Great Waltz," co-starring Fernand Gravet and Miliza Korjus; "Sweethearts," co-starring Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy; "Bala-laika," adaptation of the continental European stage success, with Ilona Massey and Ray Bolger.

52, Paramount Minimum

Advance word on Paramount's product for 1938-39 was brought to New York by Robert F. Gillham, director of advertising, from three weeks of product conferences at the studio. While mentioning the decision for a minimum of 52, compared with previous season averages of 60, Mr. Gillham said that definite program construction will not be effected until the arrival in Hollywood, in a few weeks, of Barney Balaban, president; Stanton Griffis, chairman of the executive committee, and Neil F. Agnew, distribution. They will confer with Adolph Zukor, in charge of production.

Paramount is one distributor considering regional sales meetings instead of a national convention.

Twentieth Century - Fox Budgets

Second to definitely decide on regional conventions instead of a national meeting, Twentieth Century-Fox will start a series, at Kansas City, April 1st and 2nd.

The production budgets for six pictures to be produced in England by Twentieth Century-Fox for release during the 1938-39 season will be set during conferences in Hollywood next week, Sidney R. Kent, president, said this week when he left New York for the Coast. With Mr. Kent were John D. Clark, vice-president and general sales manager, and Charles E. McCarthy, director of advertising and publicity.

The conferences on the new season's product will be with Darryl Zanuck, production head, and Joseph M. Schenck, board chairman. Mr. Zanuck, according to Mr. Clark, will personally supervise production of 30 films on the new season's program, an increase of six pictures over those he supervised for the current season.

Plans for the six films to be produced in England were discussed by Robert T. Kane, executive producer of the company's studios at Denham, England, and Mr. Zanuck during the last few weeks. Mr. Kane arrived in New York this week and sailed for England on board the Bremen.

After attending the conferences on the coast, Mr. Kent will sail for Europe to attend the company's annual European and British sales conventions which will be held in Paris, May 5th, 6th, and 7th, and in London May 12th, 13th and 14th.

RKO Centering on Drive

While RKO's management is rounding out corporate changes, the sales division is concentrating on the "Ned Depinet" sales drive, reporting this week that H. Greenblatt's exchange at Cleveland has taken the lead in billings, followed by C. Boasberg's Buffalo branch, and the Indianapolis office, managed by R. C. Churchill.

The Hollywood production forces were on hand this week to greet Pandro Berman, returning from the New York home office with a new contract as vice-president in charge of all RKO filming. Accompanying Mr. Berman westward, to set 1938-39 production, were Leo Spitz, president; J. R.

KENT DRIVES' AWARDS WON BY 832 EMPLOYEES

A total of 832 employees of Twentieth Century-Fox have earned prizes in the last three Sidney R. Kent annual drives and the number of checks distributed in the various contests has totaled 1,297. The prize contribution totaled 194 individual awards in 1935, 629 in 1936 and 474 in the 1937 competition, the winners of which were recently announced.

The two prize contests on sales performances on the 1937-'38 "Tarzan" and Outdoor series will terminate at the end of April. Each of the contests provides for seven prizes, with $5,000 to be distributed on the Outdoors drive and $2,500 in the "Tarzan" contest. These awards are gifts of Sol Lesser, producer.

McDonough, who will assist Mr. Berman, in charge of studio finances, and Jules Levy, of the distribution department.

Warner-Schlesinger Contract

Gradwell L. Sears, general sales manager of Warner Brothers; Carl Leserman, Mr. Sears' assistant, and Mort Blumenstock and Sam Schneider, of the home office executive staff, will leave New York for the coast next Thursday to confer with H. M. and Jack Warner and studio officials on the new season's plans.

The releasing contract between Warner Brothers and Leon Schlesinger, cartoon producer, has been renewed for two years. Norman Moray, Vitaphone short subject sales head, left Hollywood for New York after concluding the deal. Mr. Schlesinger is at present ill, is a Hollywood hospital, suffering from a kidney ailment.

Columbia Conference

Columbia Pictures already has held its pre-season studio conferences, attended by Harry Cohn, and with Jack Cohn, vice-president, A. Schneider, treasurer, and A. Montague, general sales manager, attending, in Hollywood.

Columbia has 491 more accounts on its books for the season 1937-'38 than it has ever had in its history, Columbia district managers, meeting in New York, were told this week as the Montague Good Will Campaign arrived at the halfway mark.

Columbia has sold more than 2,500 contracts for next year's product, 304 more than the pre-convention total on last year's product.

Already announced for 1938-39 is a series of Spanish pictures, to be made by Jamie Del Amo of Cantabria Films, and Larry Darmour's new series of six with Jack Holt.

Quotas set by the sales department of United Artists, under the direction of Andy W. Smith, Jr., general sales manager, have been exceeded by 19 of the 32 branch offices, in the Better Business Drive, now entering its final month, according to George J. Schaefer, vice-president and general manager. Haskell Masters' Canadian district is leading, with Bob Mochrie's Southern district in second place; Far West third; Midwest, fourth; Central, fifth and East, sixth.

Golden Promoted

Of possible effect on Monogram's 1938-39 product was the announcement on Tuesday that Edward A. Golden, sales manager of Monogram, is to be promoted at the next board meeting becoming vice-president in charge of exchange operations, and executive assistant to W. Ray Johnston, president, permitting Mr. Johnston to spend more time at the studios with Scott Dunlap, vice-president for production for Monogram, on production of the 1938-39 program which starts soon. The promotion will take effect at once. George Weeks, former sales executive of GB Pictures, succeeds Mr. Golden as Monogram's sales manager.

A national convention of franchise holders, branch managers and salesmen will be held by Monogram in Cincinnati March 24th to 27th. Plans also have been made for a regional meeting in Hollywood for Los Angeles, San Francisco, Portland, Seattle and Denver sales staffs. The regional session is to be held at the end of this month.

Republic's first large convention will be held in Hollywood May 2nd to 5th and will be attended by home office executives, franchise holders, field supervisors, branch heads salesmen and bookers.

Mr. Johnston already has announced 52 features for 1938-39, five to cost $100,000 each. Purchases have been made on 14 stories, including Jackie Cooper's "Streets of New York;" "That Old Gang of Mine" and "Quincy Adams."

1,000 Attend Warner Banquet

The ninth annual banquet and ball of the Warner Club was held at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, New York, last Saturday night and was attended by more than 1,000 persons. Arrangements for the affair were made by a committee headed by Arthur Sachson, president of the club.

4,000 Houses for Rogers Subject

Four thousand theatres are expected to play "For Auld Lang Syne," short subject produced by Warner Brothers to help promote the annual drive in behalf of the Will Rogers Memorial Hospital at Saranac, N. Y. The cast includes Dick Powell, Rudy Vallee, James Cagney, Bonita Granville, Hugh Herbert, Allen Jenkins, Marie Wilson, Johnnie Davis, Mabel Todd and the Schnickelfritz Band.

"Snow White" to Loew's

"Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" will play a group of theatres in Loew's New York circuit in accordance with a deal signed with RKO Radio.

INDUSTRY URGES ELIMINATION OF QUOTAS IN TRADE AGREEMENTS

U. S. Negotiating with British Board Group; Separate Film Pact with Czechs; Canadian Accord Awaiting Renewal

The motion picture industry, pictured a few days ago by the Department of Commerce as having suffered substantial losses in the international film field, is seeking complete elimination of quota restrictions in the proposed reciprocal trade agreement with the United Kingdom.

The plea was contained in briefs filed recently by representatives of the motion picture industry in the United States. The industry is resting its entire case on the briefs and, for this reason, no representatives of the film industry sought to voice opinions at the hearings being conducted this week by the Committee for Reciprocity Information in Washington.

F. H. Coregan, of the Radio Corporation of America Manufacturing Company, was the only witness connected in any way with the film industry who was scheduled to speak before the committee. Mr. Coregan appears before the committee Friday concerning radio, phonograph and film sound equipment.

Oppose British Quota

Although the exact contents of the briefs filed with the State Department were not divulged, a spokesman summarized the plea by declaring: "We want to do away with all quotas. We are utterly opposed to the English quota. The industry hopes the negotiations will relieve us of the British quota, despite the recent parliamentary actions."

Francis L. Burt, of MOTION PICTURE HERALD's Washington bureau, cited another reason why film industry representatives were not appearing at this week's hearings. "The question of motion pictures is not scheduled to be discussed, as they are an export, rather than an import problem, involving restrictions and quotas rather than duty rates," Mr. Burt wrote.

The Czech Demands

Mr. Burt also reported that the demand of the Czechoslovakian government for a separate agreement covering motion pictures, agreed to by the State Department last week in order to prevent delay in the consummation of the reciprocal trade pact with that government, is not expected to establish a precedent to be followed by the United Kingdom.

There were no indications in Washington this week that the British negotiators would single out motion pictures or any other particular commodity for separate consideration apart from the general agreement, Mr. Burt reported.

Representative Sails

"In accepting the Czech demand for a separate film treaty," he continued, "the State Department was not actuated by reluctance to consider the subject but by a desire to keep our treaty arrangements as simple as possible, with a minimum number of agreements with individual countries. British officials are represented as also believing that the fewer number of treaties with a single country the better."

The British negotiators, he added, have given no indication that they consider films to be anything but an ordinary commodity to be dealt with the same as any other merchandise.

TRADE PACT? IT'S NEWS TO GOVERNMENT

Although several film companies have been notified by representatives in Australia that a delegation from that country soon will arrive in the United States to negotiate a reciprocal trade agreement, which will involve films, the State Department says it has not yet heard about it.

At the offices of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors it was announced that the reports had been heard from several companies but that queries to the State Department had failed to confirm them.

In consenting to a separate agreement with Czechoslovakia on films, the United States insisted that negotiations for the pact be undertaken as soon as possible. With this in mind, Paul Culbertson, assistant chief of the European affairs division of the state department, sailed this week for Prague to negotiate the agreement.

The United States is seeking removal of restrictions which Czechoslovakia has placed on American films. Among these is double censorship, for each of which a heavy fee is required.

The British trade agreement is being negotiated with a committee of nine members of the British Board of Trade. They include A. E. Overton, F. Grant, N. E. Archer, J. A. Stirling, G. L. Watkinson, W. E. Rhydderch, Miss H. D. Lupton, Miss J. C. Forrester and Miss T. H. Hammond.

The Canadian Pact

Included in the negotiations will be the proposed new United States pact with Canada, although separate hearings are expected to be held by the reciprocity committee on this proposed agreement. The present agreement with Canada, one film industry representative explained, has worked out satisfactorily and only minor changes are being sought by motion picture companies. The changes were requested in a brief.

Coincident with this disclosure was the announcement by the Department of Commerce that exports of films to Canada increased during 1937 as compared to the previous year. Exports last year totaled 21,145,000 feet valued at $654,000 as compared with 17,276,000 feet valued at $578,000 in 1936.

Repercussions

The report that Hollywood's supremacy in the international motion picture field was threatened was released by Nathan D. Golden, chief of the Motion Picture Division, Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce. He said: "The 'totalitarian' trend in various areas brought significant repercussions in the film business during 1937. The undeclared hostilities in the Far East and the civil war in Spain, and the unsettled conditions in other parts of the world have occasioned our American film distributors considerable concern and have unquestionably resulted in substantial loss of revenue."

Transfer of GN Action Is Sought

A move to transfer Grand National's 77B reorganization proceedings from Los Angeles to the jurisdiction of the Federal court in New York has been started by a committee of stockholders formed in Philadelphia. The committee, representing small stockholders, bases its planned action on the ground that the company transacts its principal business in the east.

Isadore Stern, a Philadelphia stockholder, is acting as chairman and steering head for the group. The committee's temporary headquarters have been established in Mr. Stern's law offices in the Packard Building, Philadelphia. He said that headquarters would be moved to New York after the committee had decided on a definite course of action.

Anne Rosenthal, home office attorney for Grand National, said this week that while Grand National Films, Inc., is a Delaware corporation, Grand National Studios, Inc., is a California corporation and that the company's principal assets were transferred to the coast about a year ago when International Cinema, Inc., was given a contract for printing and possession of the negatives.

Miss Rosenthal expressed the opinion that the committee's challenge of the California court's jurisdiction would not make much headway, at least not until after Monday's hearing in the Federal district court in Los Angeles which is to decide whether the reorganization proceedings are to remain in effect.

Grand National will handle the American distribution of "He Loved an Actress," English film produced by William Rowland. Lupe Velez, Wallace Ford and Ben Lyon are featured.

Ullman Arranges New Pathe Spain Coverage

Arrangements for Pathe News coverage of the Spanish civil war were made by Frederic Ullman, Jr., during his European trip, he said last week on his arrival on the Queen Mary. Two cameramen have been stationed with the warring forces. The first pictures from the front have arrived.

Pathe staffs in Sweden and Austria have been augmented by arrangement with local organizations, and the newsreel's European crews now total about 20, he said. While abroad Mr. Ullman arranged for distribution of French and German versions of "Quintupland," two-reel short subject on the Dionne quintuplets, which will be dubbed in Paris. The German version is for Austria and Switzerland.

Roy Simmonds, British publicity director of Twentieth-Century-Fox, has been made a member of the board of directors of Twentieth Century-Fox Film Company, Ltd., of Great Britain.

Tracy, Rainer and Warners Among Academy Winners

Spencer Tracy and Luise Rainer shared honors with Warner Brothers in the annual Awards of the membership of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, presented last Thursday night before an audience of 1,300 at the Biltmore Bowl in Los Angeles. From a hospital bed Mr. Tracy phoned his thanks for the vote that his work in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Captains Courageous" had been the best performance by an actor in 1937. Miss Rainer's contribution to MGM's "The Good Earth" was adjudged the best job done by an actress. It was her second successive Academy triumph. Warners' "The Life of Emile Zola" was designated the top production of the year.

To Darryl F. Zanuck went the Irving G. Thalberg Memorial Award, presented for the first time and fashioned by Bernard Soper, sculptor, for the producer who showed the most consistently high quality of production achievement in pictures personally produced.

Bob Burns was master of ceremonies at the dinner dance, which had been postponed for a week because of the floods. Mr. Burns was introduced by Frank Capra, president of the Academy.

Additional Winners

Other winners of the Awards, which included gold statuettes, plaques and certificates, were:

DIRECTOR—Leo McCarey, for "The Awful Truth," Columbia.

SUPPORTING ACTOR—Joseph Schildkraut, "The Life of Emile Zola," Warner.

SUPPORTING ACTRESS—Alice Brady, in "Old Chicago," Twentieth Century-Fox.

Technical Awards

The following technical awards were presented:

ART DIRECTION—Stephen Goosson and Paul Murphy, "Lost Horizon."

CINEMATOGRAHY—Karl Freund, "The Good Earth."

SOUND RECORDING—Thomas T. Moulton, "Hurricane," Samuel Goldwyn-United Artists.

Special Awards

Special awards, in addition to the one presented to Mr. Zanuck, were as follows:

A gold statuette to Mack Sennett for his lasting contribution to the comedy technique of the screen;

Wooden statuette in miniature to Edgar Bergen's "Charlie McCarthy";

Scroll certificate to the Museum of Modern Arts Film Library for collecting films from 1895 to the present;

Plaque to W. Howard Greene for the color photography in "A Star Is Born."

Scientific Awards

Scientific awards were made in the following classifications:

CLASS I (Statuette and plaque)—Agfa Ansco Corporation, for Agfa "supreme" and "ultra speed panchromatic" film negative.

CLASS II (Plaques)—Walt Disney Productions, Ltd., for design and application to production of "multiplane camera"; Eastman Kodak Company for two fine-grain duplicating film stocks; Farciot Edouart and Paramount, for development of "Paramount dual screen transparency camera setup"; Douglas Shearer and MGM's sound department for method of varying the scanning width of variable density sound tracks ("squeeze tracks") for further reduction of noise.

CLASS III—John Arnold and MGM's camera department for improvement of the semi-automatic follow focus device and its application to all MGM studio cameras; John Livadary, director of sound recording for Columbia, for application of the "bi-planar light valve"; Thomas T. Moulton and the United Artists sound department for application to sound recording of volume indicators which have a peak reading response and linear decibel scales; RCA Manufacturing Company for introduction of the modulated high-frequency method of determining optimum photographic processing conditions for variable width sound tracks; Joe Robbins and Paramount for exceptional application of acoustic principles to sound-proofing of gasoline generators and water pumps; Douglas Shearer and MGM for design of the film drive mechanism incorporated in the ERPI 1010 reproducer.

The Screen Directors Guild protested that the Academy should have permitted a vote on the Government's documentary picture, "The River."

John Lee Mahin, president of Screen Playwrights, Inc., nominated with Marc Connelly and Dale Van Every for the screenplay award for their work on "Captains Courageous," had withdrawn from the competition, saying that the voting qualifications for writers were not sufficiently strict. The rules had established fulfillment of the qualifications for membership in the Writers Guild as the requirement for participation in the balloting.

Form Documentary Company; Paul Rotha a Consultant

American Documentary Films, Inc., identified by its owners as ADFI, has been formed by Raymond Rich Associates to make films for both commercial and non-commercial distribution. Productions will feature current achievements and problems in science, industry, agriculture, education and government.

Paul Rotha, long identified with the documentary film movement in England, will act as production consultant. Also associated with the company are Raymond Rich, former director of the World Peace Foundation; Donald Slesinger, formerly of the Yale Institute of Human Relations and Dean at the University of Chicago, and Ralph Steiner and Willard Van Dyke.

Mr. Steiner served as photographer on "The Plough That Broke the Plains," and Mr. Van Dyke helped photograph "The River," the documentary films made by the Farm Security Administration.

Headquarters are at 11 West 42nd Street, New York.

Film Supervision Actions Noted in Six Localities

The Motion Picture Distributors Association of Canada decided this week that weekend features at any Toronto theatre may be changed without expense to the exhibitor when a picture is not considered suitable for children. In Omaha a board was appointed to supervise public amusement places; in Louisville, Ky., police notified the National theatre that "strip tease" acts must go; Massachusetts and New Jersey legislative committees were considering censorship bills and the New York appellate court upheld the ban on "Tomorrow's Children," sex sterilization film.

The Toronto action was decided upon at a meeting between the MPDA and the Toronto Home and School Association. Under the Ontario Theatres Act, matinee performance on Saturdays or holidays are the only occasions when juveniles may attend without adult escorts.

One Saturday attraction already has been changed. "Wine, Women and Horses" was canceled on complaint of Mrs. J. A. Shewfelt, chairman of the radio and visual entertainment committee of the school organization.

The Omaha board is composed of three men and two women and was appointed by the mayor. Board members said they believed the double feature question "should be left to parents."

The Louisville police department also demanded that the National theatre there, which recently resumed operations with vaudeville, burlesque and films, cease distributing books, pamphlets, etc., that are suggestive.

The two proposed censorship bills in Massachusetts were taken under consideration by the Committee on State Administration of the legislature in executive session. The move followed a public hearing in which Joseph Brennan of Allied Theatres of Massachusetts pleaded the case of the industry, saying that present censorship regulations as well as the industry's self-regulation are adequate.

A bill to provide for a board of three for film censorship is being considered by the House Ways and Means Committee of the New Jersey legislature. Assemblyman John Kerner is its sponsor.

The New York Board of Regents subcommittee screened "Remous" and "I Vant to Be Alone" at the State Office Building in New York City. No decision has been announced. The subcommittee includes George J. Ryan, Susan Brandeis and Gordon Knox Bell.

No films, either feature or short subjects, were completely rejected by the Board of Moving Picture Censors for Nova Scotia during 1937. A total of 1,958 films were examined, consisting of 507 features, 604 short subjects, 509 trailers, 321 newsreels and 17 serials. Only 93 deletions were ordered by the board. Of the features examined 15 were English productions and two were French. The board's report showed that there are 59 theatres operating in Nova Scotia from which a revenue of $175,893.80 was derived by the Provincial Government.

ATTACK ADMINISTRATION'S SPENDING ON PUBLICITY AND FILM 'PROPAGANDA'

Congressman Asks Inquiry of Costs; $118,000 Budgeted by WPA Alone for One of Several Series of Pictures

Congress has been asked to put a stop to the Administration's "heavy spending" for publicity in press, radio and motion picture "propaganda" for the New Deal.

Citing the existence in New Deal agencies of some 270 "highly paid press agents," creating New Deal news, radio and motion picture propaganda, despite a federal law prohibiting such procedure, J. Parnell Thomas, Republican Congressman from New Jersey, has petitioned the House to investigate.

Representative Thomas, who introduced a resolution for an inquiry by a nine-man House committee, called attention to the Act, approved Oct. 12, 1938 (38 Stat. L. 212), expressly forbidding executive departments to employ publicity "experts" without specific authorization. Many of the "experts" have been concentrating on motion pictures for the New Deal's "alphabetical agencies" almost since the present Administration took office.

While Congressman Thomas concedes it is difficult, because of the multiplicity of agencies and offices, to estimate accurately the full cost to taxpayers, he cites, as an example, a $600,000-a-year "propaganda" publicity bill.

Cost Never Determined

Just how much money is spent by the federal government specifically for motion pictures never has been determined. Not even the National Emergency Council, which is the "clearing house" for all New Deal information, has ever ascertained the amount. Some idea, however, of government film expenditures for New Deal agencies has trickled through on occasion from Washington, including the $118,000 budgeted by the Works Program Administration alone, for one of several series, to show New Deal projects in progress.

Not involved in the attack is the estimated $700,000 spent by the Army and Navy in film rentals to distributors for product to entertain soldiers and sailors.

Criticism of "propaganda" films has been repeated in Congress since June, 1936, when Pennsylvania's Republican Senator Davis called on Congress to investigate "emergency" governmental agency picture activities. He cited the WPA and the Senate Committee on Expenditures in Executive Departments included filming operations of the Federal Emergency Relief Administration. A party vote prevented an inquiry.

Fifty WPA reels had been planned before the attack, "each film captioned in such a manner as to make it clear to observers which Democratic Congressman had wangled what works improvements for his district."

Diversion of Funds Charged

Representative Bertrand Snell of New York, Republic floor leader, charged the WPA with diverting to films funds intended for the idle Democratic Senator Rush Holt, of West Vir-

Exhibitors Again Eligible for Loans From Government Up to $10,000

Enactment of the new housing legislation by Congress has paved the way for resumption of the Federal Housing Administration loans to exhibitors and other "little" business men for modernization and improvement of their establishments, which ceased a year ago with the expiration of the first FHA modernization campaign.

Theatre owners will be enabled to secure up to $10,000 for alterations and the installation of immovable equipment in the same way as they secured credit under the original act.

Officials of the FHA said this week that the regulations surrounding these loans will be practically the same as those in effect under the first program—that is, the money is to be expended only for permanent work, such as remodeling, new lighting fixtures and new equipment of an immovable nature.

No actual money will be advanced by the Government agency, which will confine its operations to the insuring of the loans, which are to be made locally by commercial lending institutions under restrictions as to interest and charges.

Money advanced to exhibitors and other business men will be on a five per cent discount basis, which works out at 9.72 per cent interest—said to be the lowest interest at which commercial loans of this character have ever been made. Exhibitors and other borrowers will have five years to pay off the loans.

Eligibility requirements for borrowers will be simple, the major requirement being that they have an assured income which will enable them to repay the loan, and either own or have an approved lease on the property they occupy. In the case of rented quarters, it will be required that the lease run at least six months longer than the term of the loan.

ginia, joined the attack, and Harry Hopkins, WPA Administrator, publicly admitted "ear-marking" between $50,000 and $60,000 for filming.

Other Administration pictures were turned out in 1936 as "trial balloons." Chief among them in point of attention attracted and criticism aroused was "The Plough That Broke the Plains," produced by the Resettlement Administration under Rexford Guy Tugwell and offered to exhibitors without charge.

At the same time the Department of Commerce came out with "Commerce Around the Coffee Cup," a one-reeler, with Lowell Thomas as actor and narrator, explaining details of international coffee commerce.

The New Deal had the Department of Agriculture make three films: "Stop Forest Fires," "Life of Plants" and "Norris Dam."

Elaborate Plans in 1936

The trade turned serious attention to governmental filming in July, 1936, when elaborate plans were revealed at Washington for dissemination of "information" through the screen—the Presidential campaign was in the making.

The Works Progress Administration revised its earlier filming program and decided on a series of 30 subjects, each to cost $6,000, for a total of $118,000; the Resettlement Administration again tried to get theatrical distribution for its "Plough That Broke the Plains," and the Federal Housing Administration called for bids for using "Better Housing News" in regular newsreel releases. Pathe News took this assignment, but apparently gave the subjects limited distribution.

Sydney MacKean, former newsreel man, was assigned by the WPA to supply the newsreels with WPA "footage." He spent $81,000 in 1936, and shot 200,000 feet, but the material just did not fit with current newsreel needs.

Pathe News again entered the Government film service under contract as a commercial producer, with "Making a Better Indiana," also for the WPA.

$90,000 by Records Division

In eight months of 1936 the Motion Picture Records division of the WPA spent $90,000, the greater part for operating expenses.

The WPA openly set out to buy its way to the theatre public in July, 1936, when it invited 40 producers and the newsreels, excluding Universal—"an oversight"—to submit bids for production of one WPA subject monthly, with a guarantee to release them "through the medium of a nationally-distributed newsreel." The newsreel idea died aborning, but the WPA did give Pathe a contract to produce an unlimited number of 600-foot subjects, at $4,280 each.

Open political warfare resulted from the WPA-Pathe contract, embroiling both Democratic and Republican parties. John D. M. Hamilton, Republican Committee chairman, said, "The money for these films comes from the taxpayers; it was for relief of human suffering." Regardless, WPA and Pathe continued with film production, and in November the WPA took to the air with a National Broadcasting hookup for a Federal Theatre Project vaudeville show, later extending its projects for public consumption to the production of Sinclair Lewis' "It Can't Happen Here" in 17 cities, after MGM had turned down the play for film production.

cause no specific appropriations for motion picture work are made by Congress. The film expenditures come out of appropriations for "informational" (publicity) services, in the case of some departments and agencies, and from other sources. Some agencies are operated on funds allocated by the President from unemployment relief appropriations, such as the WPA.

There are differences in the bases on which various departments produce motion pictures. The War and Navy Department have motion pictures for training purposes; they also have historical films—pictures taken during the World War, for instance—some of which are being kept in the archives.

Other departments have pictures designed to aid industries. In this group are the Department of Agriculture, with its films on farm problems; and the Interior Department, whose Bureau of Mines has produced films credited with publicizing methods of operating which have reduced fatalities.

"Institutional Advertising"

A third type of production is called "institutional advertising." An example is found in the Interior Department in the pictures produced to popularize the National Parks. The department has made pictures of Indian life, and a film on the Virgin Islands which increased the tourist trade.

The straight-out propaganda films are produced mostly by the New Deal emergency bureaus. Outstanding examples are the pictures produced by the WPA.

The New Deal agencies justify their film activities as providing an "historical record," although in some cases privately admitting that pictures of roads under construction are not particularly interesting from an historical point of view.

Propaganda Classified, Too

There are classifications even in propaganda. While the WPA pictures are criticized as for the glorification of the New Deal, films produced by the Federal Housing Administration are defended as showing the people how they can take advantage of opportunities offered by the Government. Criticism generally is directed at the wholesale manner in which the campaign was carried out.

Because of the several types of pictures produced, often two or more by the same department, ascertainment of expenditures is almost impossible. Officials of the agencies know, but in most instances they are not telling.

There are nearly 300 persons engaged in publicity for the departments, bureaus, administrations, offices and commissions which comprise the Federal establishment. Yet in not one appropriation bill is there any mention of "publicity" service, and Congress has ruled repeatedly that "press agents" are not to be employed.

Accordingly, there are throughout the Government directors of information, liaison officers, "special assistants" to various officials, and numerous other classifications of employees whose duties are regardless of title, publicity and propaganda, in press, radio and films.

Cost Reduction Sought

Efforts to reduce the cost of Government filming by concentrating all motion picture work in the Government Printing Office have been made in bills, introduced by Representative William T. Schulte (Democrat, Indiana) and Senator Elmer D. Thomas (Democrat, Oklahoma).

At present there are available for distribution in one way or another nearly 400 motion pictures in various government departments and agencies.

The Department of Agriculture has close to 200 of these, the Interior Department well over 100. The Navy Department has 24, all in both 35 and 16 mm., all in sound, and 20 of them also in silent prints. The Bureau of Mines has 54 subjects; Commerce Department, 6; Interior, 69; Mines, 54; Labor, 7, and Treasury, 4.

Of the pictures dealing directly with Roosevelt Administration activities, there are 17 pictures on the CCC alone; the Social Security Board has a number advertising its activities in various states; the Works Progress Administration has its pictures, the Tennessee Valley Authority has five, the Federal Housing Administration three; the Farm Security Administration has "The Plough that Broke the Plains" and now "The River," which Paramount is distributing to theatres.

Almost every conceivable subject under the sun is pictured in the Government reels. The Department of Agriculture has "Sage Making in Primitive New Guinea" and "Why Strawberries Grow Whiskers"; the Department of Commerce has some "swell" fishing pictures; Interior specializes in travelogues; the Labor Department has "What's in a Dress", announcement of which caused much speculation prior to exhibition; the Children's Bureau has "Sun Babies"; the Navy Department has some adventure films; the TVA made a picture of "Shell Mounds in the Tennessee Valley." Very few of the films get theatrical distribution, and not many more get theatrical exhibition, "The River" probably receiving more bookings and a better press reception than any film since the New Deal went into the film business.

Role of Films in Child Life Topic

Discussion of the role of the motion picture in the life of the school child concluded a two day conference on "Audiences of Tomorrow," held Friday and Saturday at the Lincoln School Auditorium of Teachers College, Columbia University in New York City. Educational groups, women's clubs and the film industry were represented. The gathering was sponsored by Junior Programs, Inc., in cooperation with the Parents League, the Radio Committee of the Child Study Association of America, the National Recreation Association and the Association for Arts in Childhood.

Participating in the informal discussion were Dr. Frederic M. Thrasher, technical director of the Metropolitan Motion Picture Council and professor of a course on motion picture appreciation at New York University, who was discussion leader; Mrs. Edmund Cahill, national chairman of motion pictures, Federation of Music Clubs; Eleanor Clarkson of Parents' Magazine; Mrs. Bettina Gunczy, managing editor of the National Board of Review Magazine; Rita Hochheimer, assistant director of visual education for the public schools of New York City; Hal Hode, assistant to the vice-president, Columbia Pictures; Mrs. Alonzo Klaw, schools motion picture committee; Mrs. James F. Looman, chairman of the Motion Picture Bureau of the International Federation of Catholic Alumnae; Joseph Lose, commissioner on human relations, and Mitzi Hochstadt, 15.

Subjects studied numbered juvenile film preference, frequency of child attendance at the theatre, a plea for film appreciation courses in school curricula, production of screen material for certain classes and sections of the country, and the obligation of the industry to educate as well as to entertain.

Hal Hode was of the opinion that children like the same kind of entertainment as adults, provided the films do not fall into a sex or sophisticated class of production. He said "The Awful Truth", one of the year's most successful films, for that reason did not arouse youthful approval. Mr. Hode added that the youngster chooses western films as his favorites because they project their personalities into the characters they admire.

Exception was taken by Miss Clarkson of Parent's Magazine, who expressed belief, founded on her experience, that "children like historical pictures." Mr. Hode replied that box office returns do not square with this claim. Mrs. Gunczy of the National Board of Review, reporting on her work with the group of Young Reviewers of the Board, said that rather than western films, such action stories as "San Francisco" were children's first preference, and films with child actors were not relished by them.

Miss Hochheimer said her conversations with pupils indicated that the majority of children average one visit a week at theatres. Some, she said, go four or five times a week. She called this symptomatic of maladjusted home conditions. Dr. Thrasher suggested as solution to have these make their own pictures.

When Mrs. Cahill said the industry had neglected to utilize the best of musical compositions in pictures, Mr. Hode quoted the comment of one exhibitor in MOTION PICTURE HERALD's "What the Picture Did for Me" department that if producers insisted on having grand opera, they should include Bing Crosby in the cast. He pointed out that small towns contribute the largest percentage of theatres.

When Mrs. Cahill asked why the motion pictures should not educate its audience, Mr. Hode emphasized that the main purpose of the screen was to entertain. He said he classed the record-making "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" as "pleasant entertainment." He declared that Columbia Pictures had lost $50,000 in the "Happy Hour" series of short subjects, but had accepted that loss in the interest of promoting goodwill.

Mrs. Looman urged that no one group should pick pictures for all classes. She considered the screen patron fortunate in that the industry is now providing product that is educational, artistic and moral. She decried parents' ignorance of proper standards for selecting youthful film fare.

Mitzi Hochstadt, whose fifteen years represented the "audience of tomorrow," called the screen "the most beneficial and entertaining kind of diversion in the entire world. It includes all arts, natural and artificial." She said that what displeases the younger contingent is pictorial representation of what is ridiculous or false.

Mrs. Dorothy L. McFadden, director, formed Junior Programs, Inc., four years ago as a non-commercial and non-profit organization, to select and produce operas, ballets, and plays suitable for presentation before young audiences.

J. Don Alexander has been reelected president of Alexander Film Company, Colorado Springs, Cal., by the board of directors following the annual stockholders' meeting there this week. Other officers reelected were: D. M. Alexander, vice-president; M. J. McInaney, vice-president in charge of sales, and J. T. White, secretary-treasurer. Sam T. Foster, Denver, and W. C. Theleman, Colorado Springs, were elected to the board.

Film Board Lists 3,088 Cases Filed

A total of 3,088 claims for $625,767.24 was filed against exhibitors in the New York distribution area in 1937 for enforcement of contracts, it was said by Louis Nizer, counsel to the Film Board of Trade, in his annual report to the members.

The report, made public Saturday, discloses that 93 per cent of the claims were collected by legal means, while only 197 claims, involving $42,086.48, were disposed of by arbitration. The total amount of the claims is about $100,000 less than in 1936, but this is no indication of any diminution in the number of disputes, since where a circuit is in default, one claim may cover a large amount, Mr. Nizer said.

The disputes chiefly involved nonfulfillment of contract, balances due and lost film. Claims were filed by all member companies of the Film Board with the exception of Monogram, which did not start distribution until the current selling season and therefore, it was said, had no claims covering this year's contracts.

Agfa Fixes Discounts On Films and Cameras

Maximum discounts for Agfa Ansco photographic films and cameras have been set in notices to 27,000 retail outlets in the 42 states which have fair trade statutes. Officials of the company declared that this action was an extension of the policy initiated three years ago.

Agreements sent to retailers provide for a standard 10 per cent discount on Superpan, Finopan, Fine Grain Plenachrome and Super-Plenachrome roll film. A discount of 15 per cent is permissible under the new contracts Shur-Shot and Shur-Shot special cameras in all sizes. The discount from list on Plenix folding cameras, Clipper cameras and Readyset cameras is 10 per cent. The minimum retail price on B2 Cadet box cameras is $1.39 and that on the D6 Cadet box cameras is $1.69.

F&M to Produce Musicals

Fanchon and Marco is entering the commercial film field, with a deal set for production of 13 musical one-reel short subjects in color. The pictures will be distributed through Caravel Films, which has recently been formed to handle product of this type. Stanley Neal, managing director of Caravel, said the films will be made for a sponsor, but did not disclose the company's identity.

Globe Office at GN Exchange

Ed Shanberg and Martin Finkelstein of Globe Productions, distributing "The Spirit of Youth" through Grand National, are making their headquarters at the Grand National Exchange in New York.

No further expansion in Europe is planned by Castle Films, producers of home films, Eugene W. Castle, head of the company, said on his return to New York this week from six weeks abroad.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of Pathe Film Corporation will be held April 27th.

ANIMATED CARTOON INVENTOR HONORED

On his 91st birthday last Thursday, 63 years after his invention of an animated screen picture device, Caspar W. Briggs of Philadelphia, received the distinguished service award of the Pennsylvania Arts and Sciences Society.

Mr. Briggs in 1875 marketed a device using the intermittent mechanism and shutter as employed on modern film projectors. For the pictures he put a series of drawings on the edge of a mica disk, which was turned rapidly in front of the projector lens. The first pictures were of a dancing skeleton.

A scroll presented to Mr. Briggs at his home in Germantown, suburb of Philadelphia, said that members of the society "had taken into respectful regard not only the creative ability of the recipient, but have considered as well the inspirational and beneficent influence which has been bestowed upon mankind through the exercise of these talents thus recognized."

Ohio Booking Organization Formed by Milton Mooney

Cooperative Theatres of Ohio, Inc., has been incorporated by Milton A. Mooney, former branch manager for Warner Brothers in Cleveland, to book, buy pictures and accessories for a group of more than 40 independent theatres of Cleveland and northern Ohio.

Mr. Mooney has leased office space in the Film Building and will have his organization in operation not later than April 15th. Associated with him is F. H. Hathaway, former Warner Brothers salesman.

Film Center Renewals Listed

Film Center Building Corporation, New York, through its agents, Cross & Brown Company, announces that renewals have been contracted with Mackler Everwear Film Process Company, Advance Film Exchange, Inc., Republic Film Exchange, Inc., Jack Rosenthal, Prudential Film Distributors Corporation, Joe Hornstein, Inc., and Tacme Film Service, Inc.

Hayman Dinner April 18th

A testimonial dinner will be given on April 18th to A. Charles Hayman, managing director of the Lafayette theatre, Buffalo, and owner of the Strand and Cataract, Niagara Falls, N. Y. The occasion will mark Mr. Hayman's 30th anniversary in show business. Nate Sauber, Universal manager, and Joe Miller, Columbia manager, are co-chairmen.

Savings Reported to Allied

A report by a consulting company on savings made through inspections of electrical installations and current bills was given at a meeting of Allied of New Jersey in New York this week. Individual members have retained the service.

4,000 Libraries Receiving Exhibits

Approximately 4,000 school, college and public librarians now are receiving research exhibits linked with current pictures of outstanding literary, historical or social significance, the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, said this week.

The present number of cooperating librarians represents a gain of more than 100 per cent over those participating one year ago. The activity was inaugurated only 18 months ago and in that time has aided in the exploitation of more than 100 features.

Research exhibits on individual pictures are sent by company home offices to all librarians requesting them. The MPPDA clears approved stills and displays to the participating libraries with which local exhibitors, thereafter, are free to effect tieups coincident with their bookings of the pictures.

Research cards on "The Buccaneer" and "Tom Sawyer" are now being distributed to the 4,000 participating libraries.

Connick Chief Director Of Western World's Fair

Harris D. H. Connick has been appointed chief director of the 1939 Golden Gate International Exposition. The fair, which will be held in San Francisco and which will open February 18, 1939, is half completed.

Mr. Connick was chairman of the finance committee for Famous Players Lasky Corporation from 1920 to 1922. Subsequently he became president and director of Associated Music Publishers, Inc., Breitkopf Publishers, Inc., and vice-president and director of Muzak Corporation of Ohio, Wired Radio, Inc.

Hake in Australia Post

C. V. Hake, Twentieth Century - Fox assistant foreign manager, has arrived in Australia to be managing director for that territory, succeeding Stanley Crick, resigned. Mr. Hake was managing director for Japan for nine years, then assistant to Walter J. Hutchinson, general foreign manager, for one and a half years at the home office. Mr. Crick, a native of Australia, joined the company in Sydney in 1919, and became managing director about two years later. His future plans are not known. Edward A. Lomba, formerly managing director in Spain and later central European assistant head, has assumed Mr. Hake's former duties at the home office.

Lieberman Opens Hartford Theatre

Fred Lieberman has opened the Proven Pictures theatre, Hartford, Conn., his nineteenth New England house. The 1,200-seat theatre, completely remodeled at a cost of $50,000, will play double features, three changes weekly, with admissions set at 15 to 25 cents. Mr. Lieberman has contracted for 20 spot announcements on local radio programs daily.

Cobian Opens Office

Ramos Cobian, president of United Theatres, Inc., Puerto Rico, has opened offices in the Paramount Building in New York.

U.S. FILMS 71 PER CENT OF TOTAL IMPORTED FOR RELEASE IN FRANCE

Review of the Year Shows 230 American Features Distributed; Rental of Old Films Seen as a Threat to Prestige

by PIERRE AUTRE
in Paris

During the calendar year 1937, 424 new feature films were trade shown and released in France, 111 French made and 323 of foreign importation.

Of the importations 230 were from the United States, 31 from Germany, 29 from Great Britain, 14 from Soviet Russia, five from Italy, three from Belgium, and one from Mexico.

According to the French quota regulations, films over three reels shown in France must be divided into two categories: those for general exhibition—French speaking films, or foreign films dubbed in French, which can be exhibited in all French cinemas, and those of restricted exhibition—spoken in foreign languages, with French sub-titles, of which each one cannot be shown in more than 15 theatres in the country, five in Paris and ten in the provinces.

Of the 424 feature films released in France during 1937 332 were classified for general exhibition. Others were films shown only in the original foreign speaking versions. As there are in France no more than 48 theatres specializing in the showing of foreign films in their original versions, of which 38 are in Paris, these 332 films for general exhibition really feed the approximately 4,000 French cinemas.

Although the number of films at the disposal of French exhibitors was about the same in 1936 and 1937, their composition differs a great deal. In 1936, the 331 films for general exhibition included 141 French talkers and 190 dubbings. In 1937, the 332 films included only 123 French talkers and 209 dubbings.

A total of 209 foreign feature films dubbed in French were released in 1937 compared with 190 in 1936. The increase in this number is due to the fact that for the first time French distributing companies released a large number of dubbed films. In fact, the 209 dubbings include 116 films released by the French branches of the American companies (MGM, Paramount, RKO-Radio, 20th Century-Fox, United Artists, Universal and Warner Brothers). The dubbed French versions of Columbia films are still distributed by French companies. Seventy dubbed films were released by French distributors, 15 by the French branches of German companies (Tobis and the UFA subsidiary, Alliance Cinematographique Européenne) and eight by distributors specializing in Russian films. The 70 dubbed films released by French distributors included 49 American films, nine British, seven German, three Italian and two others.

This release of so many dubbed foreign films by French distributors is a new and important problem for American companies. Up to now the majority of the dubbed films shown in France have been dubbed French versions of the biggest (and most suitable for the French market) films of the major American companies, many of which could compete with the French

FRENCH HALF YEAR QUOTA EXHAUSTED

The French Government board of censors officially has confirmed the fact that the film import quota for the first half of 1938 has been exhausted. The law provides that only 94 films over three reels in length may be imported in each six months.

The list of 94 imported includes 73 from America, nine from Germany, five from Russia, three from England and one each from Australia, Austria, Mexico and Czechoslovakia. The American dubbings include 47 pictures released by the French branches of major American companies. These were divided as follows: MGM, 13; Twentieth Century-Fox, 10; Universal, eight; Paramount, six; Warner Brothers, five; United Artists, three and RKO, two. In addition 26 American dubbings were released by French distributors including eight of Columbia's current product.

productions. But the double bill programs which have now become a regular feature in all French theatres, with the exception of first runs, have caused distributors to furnish the exhibitors with a supporting film, instead of shorts, cartoons, etc., which constitutes, with the French feature film, a complete program.

As a result, except for the first-run theatres and for some 120 minute films, short subjects—with the exception of the cartoons—have practically disappeared from French distribution.

These 49 American films bought by French distributors came from the following American companies: Columbia, 29; Republic, 5; RKO Radio, 3; Mascot, 3; Universal, 2, and one each from Burroughs-Tarzan, Puritan, Bayart, Reliable, Spectrum, Times Pictures and Du World. Many of these films are as much as five and six years old.

Old Pictures a Threat

It may be surprising to see films of major American companies, released in France so late, and by French companies. But, until 1936, RKO Radio had no distribution branch and no exchanges in France, and while the Paris office, itself, distributed original versions in English, for dubbing and for general exhibition productions were sold to French companies. Until 1934, the productions were sold to French intermediaries, who afterwards sold the films to different French distributors. The same is true of Columbia. Productions of this company were always sold to different French distributors, and that is why 29 Columbia dubbed films were shared, last year, by 17 French distributing companies.

This large number of old American program pictures, cheaply dubbed and released by French distributors as supporting pictures, is considered a threat to exhibition of the dubbed films of the major American companies. Firstly, these program pictures are likely to displace in some degree the big films of the American companies, in the number of dubbed films yearly allowed by the French cinema regulations.

Secondly, and perhaps more important, these old and often badly dubbed program pictures lower the reputation of American production in the eyes of the French public.

In 1937, French branches of the major American companies, Columbia excepted, distributed in France 110 American dubbed films and six British, chosen as the most suitable to the French market. These were divided as follows: 20th Century-Fox, 27; MGM, 24; Warner Brothers, 23; Paramount, 16; RKO Radio, 8; Universal, 7; United Artists, 5. In addition United Artists and Twentieth Century-Fox distributed respectively four and two British films.

During the year 237 foreign films were shown in the French specializing cinemas, in their original speaking versions, with French sub-titles. The number is smaller than in 1936's 263, with the same as in 1935, 237. Divided according to countries and the language spoken, they numbered: American, 185; British, 20; German or Austrian, 15; Soviet, 13; Italian, 3, and Mexican, 1.

More than half of these original versions were afterwards exhibited in dubbed French versions, the figure being 145 out of the total of 237.

Organization of Distribution

For distribution, France has been divided into seven regions: Paris, which includes Normandy, Brittany and the Provinces around Paris, with Rennes (Brittany) and Nancy (East) as sub-centers; the Northern region, of which the center is Lille; the Central region, with Lyons as keytown; the Southwestern region, with Bordeaux as keytown and Toulouse as sub-center; the Southeastern region, with Marseilles as keytown; the Alsace and Lorraine region, headed by Strasbourg, and North Africa, including Algeria, Morocco and Tunis, headed by Algiers, with Tunis and Casablanca as district centers.

The distributing organizations are based on two systems:

(1) The national organizations, with headquarters in Paris, which have their own exchanges in the six keytowns: Lille, Lyons, Marseilles, Strasbourg, Bordeaux and Algiers.

(2) The second system of distributing organizations are the regional distributors, with their own capital and their own salesmen.

There are no longer any French companies which both produce and distribute, with the exception of ACE, which makes French speaking films in Germany.

The independent French producers give their films to be distributed, either to the national distributors with exchanges in the French keytowns, for distribution throughout the whole of the French territory, or by regions to local distributors. There are, in the Paris region, 40 local distributors.

Government Collection Proposed

Among the many proposals advanced recently for the reorganization of the French cinema industry, one was that distributors were of no use and that the distributing companies ought to be replaced by a central distributing agency, charged with the transportation of films and their upkeep. A Federal bank would collect the percentage of the receipts and divide it among the film producers. The receipts of the cinemas would be collected in the theatres by the same State employees, who would come daily to collect the taxes. This scheme, at the time, brought vehement protests from the industry. Distributors, it was said, are absolutely necessary to the industry, especially in France, because of the independent production system where they are the liaison between producers and exhibitors.

Goldiggers in Paris

(Warner Bros.)
Musical Spectacle

Previous "Goldiggers" have made about everyone familiar with the expense to which the Warners go to stage the recurrent spectacular extravaganzas. All are aware of the glamour, music, beauty, dancing, artistic settings, type of motivating story, name value of the personalities to be seen; the entertainment and showmanship offered by each successive "Goldigger" release.

The occasion for this season's effort comes when a hot American night club dancing chorus is invited by mistake to appear in Paris in competition with the world's greatest ballet dancing ensembles.

For personalities to talk about, "Goldiggers in Paris" will offer Rudy Vallee with Rosemary Lane, Hugh Herbert, Allen Jenkins, Gloria Dickson, Melville Cooper, Mabel Todd, Fritz Feld, Curt Bois, Edward Brophy, Pedro de Cordoba, Victor Killian and Georges Renavant, and a horde of beauteous show girls.

Ray Enright, who never made a "Goldiggers" but did make "Ready, Willing And Able," "20 Million Sweethearts" and "Dames," is the director. Jerry Wald, Richard Macaulay and Maurice Leo concocted the original screen play. Music and lyrics were by Harry Warren and Al Dubin. The music-dance numbers were created and directed by Busby Berkeley.

Release date: About mid-May tentatively.

Four's a Crowd

(Warner Bros.)
Comedy-Romance

Although this story is to be told against a background of newspaperdom, its basic ingredient is comedy romance. Adapted from a stage play by Wallace Sullivan, its central figure is a go-getting editor. His overt purpose in attacking unsavory characters is to build circulation, but his real aim is to make such a nuisance of himself that the piratical old business nabob at whom he directs his most withering shafts will hire him as a publicity counsellor at a fat salary. He manages to stir his victim to fury, gets himself engaged to his target's daughter, terrify his publisher, bring sorrow to the girl who loves him, but in the climax, at a double wedding passes off the girl to whom he is engaged to the publisher and marries his reporter pal himself.

Errol Flynn and Olivia de Havilland again will be co-featured. Rosalind Russell, Patric Knowles and Walter Connolly are the supporting principals. The quality supporting cast lists Melville Cooper, Franklin Pangborn, Joe Cunningham, Joseph Crehan, Spec O'Connell, Gloria Blondell, Dennie Moore, Carole Landis, Al Herman, Charles Judels and Margaret Hamilton.

The screen play was completed by Casey Robinson, whose credits include "Tovarich," "Call It a Day," and "Captain Blood," which gave Flynn and Miss de Havilland their first big opportunity at screen fame. Maker of "The Life of Emile Zola," "The Story of Louis Pasteur" and "White Angel," William Dieterle was assigned to direct.

Release date: Not set as yet.

Female Fugitive

(Monogram)
Melodrama

The two best known personalities to be seen in this forthcoming production are Evelyn Venable, most recently in "My Old Kentucky Home," and Craig Reynolds, who for several years played supporting roles in Warner pictures. The other names, some of which are familiar, are Reed Hadley, John Kelly, Charlotte Treadway, Reginald Sheffield, Rafael Bennett, John Morton, Emmett Vogan, Lee Phelps and Martha Tibbetts.

The story is being produced to include the maximum amount of suspense and action. Discovering that her husband heads a high-jacking gang, his wife deserts him. As she is suspected by police as being the brains of the mob, she is hunted all over the country.

John T. Neville, who collaborated on the original screen play with Bennett Cohen, is known as one of Hollywood's most prolific authors of mystery yarns. His many credits include such films as "Raw Timber," "Tough to Handle," "Old Louisiana" and "Valley of Terror." Cohen's latest film contribution was "Wallaby Jim of the Islands." He also collaborated on "Border Patrolman," "Skull and Crown" and "Wilderness Mail." These films establish the general tone and character of "Female Fugitive."

William Nigh, who is directing, is remembered as the maker of "Atlantic Flight," "The Hoosier Schoolboy" and "The Thirteenth Man."

Release date: April 7.

The Saint in New York

(RKO Radio)
Melodrama

A brand new approach to the gangster idea of entertainment will be made in this production. Communities have adapted various means to rid themselves of undesirable elements; in a fictionary way, moving pictures have suggested countless others. In this, the law and order forces of New York tolerate a ruthless murderer, permit him to kill at will, so long as he kills the social enemies they desired eliminated.

The production is based on "The Saint" series of thrillers, written by Leslie Charteris and widely read on this Continent and in Europe. The screen play was written by Irwin Shaw and Charles Kaufmann, respectively credited with "The Big Game" and "Breakfast for Two" and "Saturday's Heroes." It is being directed by Ben Holmes, maker of "Maid's Night Out," "We're on the Jury" and "The Plot Thickens."

Louis Hayward, featured in the current "Condemned Women," will be seen as "The Saint." The one girl in the picture is Kay Sutton, presently in "This Marriage Business" and earlier seen in "Having Wonderful Time" and "Night Spot." Most of the other players, all of whom at one time or another, are principals in the action as they come into contact with "The Saint," are generally familiar. They are Frederick Burton, Eduardo Ciannelli, Jonathan Hale, Sig Rumann, Ben Welden, Charles Halton, Jack Carson, Paul Guilfoyle and Paul Fix.

Release date: April 22, 1938, (tentatively).

Law of the Underworld

(RKO-Radio)
Gangster Melodrama

The production is based upon the stage play "Crime," which was written by Samuel Shipman and John B. Hymer. When A. H. Woods produced the play in New York about ten years ago, Chester Morris, who is in the film version, Sylvia Sidney, Kay Francis and Douglas Montgomery were in the cast.

The story has been modernized, the time is the present and the locales are places in and about New York City. The romance of two youngsters, caught in the web of a gangster mob to be made participants in a fatal robbery, forms the story basis.

The screen adaptation was made by Edmund L. Hartman, who did "Hideaway," "Behind the Headlines" and "Wanted, Jane Turner," and Bert Granet, whose credits are listed in the description of "Go Chase Yourself." The director Lew Landers, handled some of RKO-Radio's most successful secondary pictures such as "Double Danger," "Danger Patrol," "Flight from Glory" and "Without Orders."

Morris, last seen for RKO-Radio in "Flight from Glory," will play the mob leader role; Eduardo Ciannelli, who made his film debut in "Winterset," later to be in "Marked Woman" and "Criminal Lawyer," is his rebellious aide, and Lee Patrick is the gangster girl. The youngsters who become involved are Anne Shirley, brilliant in "Stella Dallas" and seen in several RKO features, and Richard Bond, who played opposite Miss Shirley in "Condemned Women" and was seen in "Double Danger" and "This Marriage Business." Walter Abel, featured in "Portia on Trial" and other films, is the prosecutor. In support will be Paul Guilfoyle, Frank M. Thomas, Eddie Acuff, Jack Arnold, Jack Carson, George Shelley, Paul Stanton and Cecil Kellaway.

Release date: May 13, 1938.

The Lady in the Morgue

(Universal)
Melodrama

Under the production guidance of Irving Starr, and the direction of Otis Garrett, Universal is endeavoring to pack into a significant production a weird story of murder, missing corpses, attempted murder, rivalry between the professional police and private detectives, strange disappearances, assumed identities and sundry other explorations into criminal skulduggery.

A suicide turns out to be a murder; the body disappears from the morgue; the morgue keeper is killed and the police think that the private detective is trying to put something over on them. In the meantime a heiress has disappeared.

John Litimer concocted the original story, which was adapted by Eric Taylor and Robertston White.

The personnel who will endeavor to bring the yarn to screen realism consists of Preston Foster, Frank Jenks, Rowland Drew, Patricia Ellis, Tom Jackson, Morgan Wallace, Joseph Downing, Al Hill, James Robbins, Stanley Price, Gordon Hart, Gordon Elliott, Minerva Urecal and Rollo Lloyd.

Release date: April 21 (tentative).

The Girl of the Golden West

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

Lyrical Romance

"The Girl of the Golden West," fourth picture in which Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy have been co-starred, belongs in the company of "Naughty Marietta," "Rose Marie" and "Maytime." It should prove a crowd pleaser equalling the box office records established by that trio. In many cases, where showmen take full advantage of all the exploitation possibilities, it should exceed those grosses.

Not only do "The Girl of the Golden West" and Miss MacDonald and Mr. Eddy enjoy the prestige that comes from the preceding productions, but it is picturesque outdoor action and lyrical romance that ranks with the finest of this type of picture.

One attribute of "The Girl of the Golden West" that should not be overlooked is that it is both a prestige picture and a class-and-mass attraction. People should be talking about it during its playing time; they also should be talking about it for months to come.

For the masses it simply is hokum-packed "wild west" entertainment, embellished with music—two numbers of which, Franz Liszt's "Liebestraume" and Gounod's "Ave Maria," sung by Miss MacDonald—melodies most people know and love. For the classes it is David Belasco's famous stage play somewhat modernized, produced on a grand scale, finely staged, acted and directed, replete with charming music which, with the exception of two pieces retained from the stage version, are solo, duet and chorus numbers composed by Sigmund Romberg and Gus Kahn. To please both groups there is the spectacularly beautiful presentation of "The Mariachi," a Spanish fiesta sequence in which glamour, music and action are exquisitely balanced.

The story is the rudimentary, but expertly conceived, plot of the girl, the "Robin Hood" bandit, and the sheriff. It merges tender love interest with tense romantic conflict. With hokum evident but never overt, it adds stirring action, gleeful comedy, melodrama, taut suspense, and crowns all with a tiara of thrilling music.

The setting and time of "The Girl of the Golden West" is the mountainous California mother lode country in the gold rush days. About 90 per cent of the action takes place out-of-doors and thereby are made possible many striking pictorial effects which, as photographed by Oliver T. Marsh, emphasize the varying moods.

Pages could be consumed in detailing all the values of "The Girl of the Golden West." A reference to the records of those who are in the picture and those who were behind it should be sufficiently illuminating. As for Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy, practically all that is necessary is a reference to "Naughty Marietta" and "Rose Marie." Much may be said about Walter Pidgeon, Leo Carrillo, Buddy Ebsen (who does not dance), H. B. Warner, Brandon Tynan and all the rest. The public might be reminded that William Anthony McGuire, long the righthand man of the late Florenz Ziegfeld, the man who wrote "The Great Ziegfeld" and produced "Rosalie," is the producer. Folks might be reminded that Robert Z. Leonard, who directed "The Firefly," "Maytime" and "The Great Ziegfeld," also directed "The Girl of the Golden West." Supplement the importance of McGuire and Leonard as picture makers with information that Sigmund Romberg and Gus Kahn composed the music and lyrics; that "Liebestraume" and "Ave Maria" are included; that Herbert Stothart directed the score, and that Albertina Rasch created the festive dance episodes, and the enthusiasm for "The Girl of the Golden West" should be immediate.

The local trade and lay press strove valiantly to outdo each other in descriptive adjectives to reflect the quality of the picture. That MGM will give the picture a bang-up national campaign goes without saying. The market that exists for a Jeanette MacDonald picture will be expanded to its furthest limits.

Previewed in the Village theatre, Westwood, Cal. In the parlance of Film Rows all over the map, the picture "knocked 'em for a loop."—GUS MCCARTHY.

Distributed by MGM. Produced by William Anthony McGuire. Directed by Robert Z. Leonard. Screen play by Isabel Dawn and Boyce DeGaw. Music and lyrics (modern numbers) by Sigmund Romberg and Gus Kahn. Musical direction by Herbert Stothart. Dances arranged by Albertina Rasch. Cedric Gibbons, art director. W. Donn Hayes, film editor. Photographed by Oliver T. Marsh. P. C. A. Certificate No. 4096. Running time, when seen in Westwood, 120 minutes. Release date, March 18, 1938. General audience classification.

Island in the Sky

(Twentieth Century-Fox)

Murder Mystery

Sold M. Wurtzel, executive producer, addressed this swift metropolitan melodrama directly to that large and faithful sector of the population responsible for the consistent publication and wide sale of detective fiction. It would seem plainly indicated for showmen to do likewise. The reaction of the preview audience was of a kind to justify liberal exploitation use of the first-string adjectives.

Best marquee names are Gloria Stuart, Michael Whalen and Paul Kelly, the last of these coming into the picture late in the running but playing a pivotal role powerfully. Something might be made of the fact that the "Island in the Sky" from which the picture takes its title is a night club atop a 70-story Manhattan skyscraper, although it probably wouldn't be Hoyle to intimate similarity to the Rainbow Room atop the RCA building in Rockefeller Center, since the one in the picture turns out to be owned by the murderer in the picture.

The screen play by Frances Hyland and Albert Ray, from an original by Jerry Cady, concerns "Michael Fraser," assistant district attorney, and "Julie Hayes," his fiancée, who postpone their wedding to work on a murder case. "Michael" credits evidence which convicts "Peter Vincent" of murdering his father, but "Julie" digs more deeply into the family background, discovers that the dead man was not the boy's real father, locates the legitimate parent in prison and, with his aid, brings the murderer to justice.

The things that happen could and even may have. Characters are orthodox types and the long arm of coincidence is not stretched as painfully as in most affairs in kind. Herbert L. Leeds' direction is sound, confident and telling.

Fools for Scandal

(Warner-First National)

Continental Comedy

Carole Lombard's virtuosity in the field of light comedy, Fernand Gravet's well exploited Continental personality and Mervyn LeRoy's thoroughly documented fame as a producer of substantial cinema, are strong handles for showmen to take hold of in brandishing this swift and not too sophisticated farce before the wishful eyes of potential ticket shoppers. Other names useful in like connection are Ralph Bel-lamy, Allen Jenkins, Isabel Jeans and Marie Wilson, and the music by Richard Rodgers and Lorenz Hart may be expected to account for additional sales in this era of acute song-consciousness.

By way of general description in behalf of the numerous clientele insistent upon accurate definition, the picture may be compared loosely to those early fabrications in which the then oncoming Maurice Chevalier established himself as a master entertainer. Mr. Gravet sings less than he, speaking rather than intoning the dialogue-woven lyrics assigned to him, and his manner is a deal more on the gentlemanly side, as the phrase is interpreted in the States. The play is similarly conditioned to American tastes and standard, although the setting is Paris and London, and the plot may be said to turn more or less vitally upon whether or not a young man spends the night in a young woman's apartment. He does, but as a duly employed cook, one of several servants, and the matter is dealt with in a manner to incite not even the tenderest cheek to blush.

The original text is a play by Nancy Hamilton, James Shute and Rosemary Casey, "Return Engagement," from which Herbert and Josephine Fields devised the screen play. In this "Kay Winters," American screen star in Paris, meets "Rene," improvident boulevardier, for a lively evening before leaving for London, whence he follows to pay court. A plot kink places him in her service as cook, and while lady friends and newspaper men busy themselves with scandalous assumptions he wins her away from "Phillip Chester," her prosaic fiancé, to ultimate matrimony.

Ralph Bellamy's role as the unsuccessful suitor may be likened to his assignment in "The Awful Truth," although this is a less fruitful casting. Allen Jenkins' performance of a blundering American roughneck is typical of his best. A night club sequence staged by Bobby Connolly is far better than long. Production is on the high Mervyn LeRoy plane throughout.

King of the Newsboys

(Republic)

Comedy Melodrama

Familiar to the American magazine reading public is the famous correspondence school advertisement starting off:

"They laughed when I sat down at the piano." Drawing an analogy, when Republic releases "King of the Newsboys," which vapid title unfortunately belies completely the entertainment woven into the picture, the film may be expected to send surprised patrons away from theatres more than satisfied with the offering, praising the story, lauding the actors and giving the production great word-of-mouth publicity.

Selling the picture with the present title will be the hardest job of showmen, though it presents some exploitation possibilities.

The story is a fast moving delineation of a youth of the slums fighting his way to riches after his regeneration. Its background is the New York newspaper circulation field and the publication of horse race tips. Romance, action, comedy and suspense are neatly welded in the screenplay of Louis Weitzenkorn and Peggy Thompson, who adapted the original story by Samuel Ornitz and Horace McCoy.

Topping the cast are Lew Ayres, Helen Mack, Alison Skipworth, Victor Varconi, Sheila Bromley and Alice White, all of whom have considerable renown and several of whom may take a better lease on cinematic fame because of their characterizations herein. The picture auspiciously marks the debut in American film production of Bernard Vorhaus, who performed in the dual capacity of producer and director of "King of the Newsboys." His past experience has been in England.

"Jerry," slum bred youth, determines when "Mary Ellen," childhood sweetheart, rejects him for the favors of "Wire Arnold," wealthy track tipsheet publisher, to fight his way to the top, and does so via the route of building newspaper circulation. Then comes a reunion with "Mary Ellen," arousing the ire of "Arnold." "Jerry" publishes a rival tipsheet and wins out after a series of circulation battles with "Arnold's" men. In the meantime the renewed romance with "Mary Ellen" has hit the rocks. But everything turns out all right.

Previewed at the Forum theatre in Los Angeles, where applause from a packed house, drawn by a $1,050 Screeno game award, was uproarious. Despite the usual studio claque, there was every indication in other sections of the house that the plaudits were genuine.—VANCE KING.

Lou Gehrig Acts

Once upon a time, immediately a personality achieved fame or notoriety, he found himself (or herself) acting in pictures. The results in most cases were less than had been anticipated. Not until Sonja Henie came along was the practice successfully revived.

Sol Lesser always has had the celebrity bee in his bonnet. Months ago he made a great publicity to-do about the facts that he had signed baseball player Lou Gehrig and Olympic athletes Glen Morris and Eleanor Holm. Mr. Lesser would be very pleased if all and sundry would permit him to forget all about the all-around champion and the swimmer who were seen in "Tarzan's Revenge." But Mr. Gehrig's case is different. He is a topical personality, and though no great shakes as an actor, yet through him Mr. Lesser may write off earlier disappointments.

The Yankee star first baseman is simply "Lou Gehrig" in a fast-moving and exciting adventure story. Surrounded by capable performers, he's the main cog in busting up a "Cattleman's Protective Association," racketeer gang. His endeavors met with the approval of the crowd, mainly juveniles, that witnessed the Saturday afternoon preview of "Rawhide."

Mr. Gehrig is a person of great exploitation possibilities. Wisely his feature debut is accomplished with considerable topical significance. In the story he comes west for peace and quiet, to get away from the excitement of baseball. Instead, he runs into fighting, riding, pool-ball throwing that is vividly exciting.

Previewed in the Meralta Theatre, Culver City. The predominantly juvenile audience might have been a bit disappointed at not seeing Gehrig in a baseball suit knocking out a homerun or two in a crucial game. Even so, it was not unmindful of the ease and assurance with which he fitted into his role as a rooting, tooting cowboy hero.—G. M.

Flight into Nowhere

(Darmour-Columbia)

Aviation Action

"Flight into Nowhere" has elements of entertainment which should extend the appeal of the Jack Holt vehicle to a wide circle of action story fans.

With Holt are Dick Purcell, Jacqueline Wells, James Burke, Howard Hickman, Lotus Long and others. Larry Darmour gave new dressing by weaving into the story a blighted romance of a character other than Holt's.

William Bloom and Clarence Jay Schneider wrote the original story and Jefferson Parker and Gordon Rigby collaborated on the screenplay. Lewis D. Collins directed.

"Jim Horne" (Holt), chief pilot of a commercial airline, has given "Bill Kellogg," a pilot, innumerable chances to conduct himself properly. Incurable, "Kellogg" runs away with a plane, to get the credit for blazing a new trail across uncharted jungles, but is forced down by lack of fuel. "Horne," spurred on by "Kellogg's" wife, leads an expedition to find "Kellogg," but the young flier has married a girl in the tribe of Indians. "Horne" agrees to take him back to civilization, but "Kellogg" is killed by a native.

There's Always a Woman

(Columbia)

Comedy Melodrama

There is no indication that the public appetite for harum scarum comedy, through which a tight thread of mystery melodrama is woven, has been in any degree sated, and so the market for "There's Always a Woman" should be wide and enthusiastic. TRIPLE QUOTA PASSED BY LORDS' COMMITTEE

Amendments Carried Reintroducing Three for One Plan And Increasing Percentages

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

The three for one quota proposal which was howled down in the House of Commons again has become a topic for hot debate in the industry and in Parliament with its reintroduction, in slightly modified form, by Viscount Swinton, Government spokesman, in the House of Lords committee considering the new Films Act.

The Swinton amendments, providing that distributors availing themselves of the three for one privilege under which films costing £37,500 in labor expense on an approximate total cost of £75,000 may be counted for quota as three, must limit such films to 50 per cent, of the total footage required, was approved by a majority of the committee.

Also approved was a proposal by Lord Moyne that the distributor and exhibitor quotas start at 20 and 15 per cent, respectively, instead of 12½ per cent for exhibitors and 15 per cent for distributors as was provided in the bill as passed by the House of Commons.

The committee stage in the House of Lords concluded this week and debate on the floor of the House preceding the third reading and final vote was expected soon.

The 50 per cent limitation under the three for one quota plan was viewed as an effort to meet the objections of exhibitors that the plan would cause a product shortage but a vigorous fight by exhibitor interests was expected nevertheless. The Board of Trade appealed to exhibitors for passive support of the plan but without effect. It was pointed out that the Films Council, under the amendment, would have power to abolish the 50 per cent limitation after one year.

The amendment also set at £25,000 the figure at which films for the triple quota could be acquired outside the country. The minimum on films under the reciprocity clause was reduced to £15,000.

The trade was discontented with the Lords' increase of the renter and exhibitor quota schedules and it was the underlying belief that although the amendments were sponsored independently they represented a "punitive" state of mind on the part of the Government.

The report stage in the House of Lords was expected to be reached next Tuesday with the formal reading set for Thursday followed by reference back to the Commons for final ratification, the bill becoming law before April 1st.

American distributors were said to be pleased with the plan which tends to give them an advantage in fulfilling the numerical terms of their quota.

Change Seen in UA Negotiations

Following closely the announcement in New York by Miss Mary Pickford that Alexander Korda will revive negotiations for the purchase of the controlling interest in United Artists, Samuel Goldwyn this week said he would sail for England next Wednesday.

Mr. Goldwyn's decision led to widespread speculation in Hollywood, the principal assumption being that the recently abandoned Goldwyn-Korda plan to purchase United Artists stock held by Miss Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks and Charles Chaplin with British capital is to be revived.

Miss Pickford, in revealing that Mr. Korda has "changed his mind" about seeking to resume negotiations for the purchase of the stock, linked the British producer with the reported plan of David O. Selznick, John Hay Whitney and Mr. Goldwyn to buy control of the company.

However, Mr. Goldwyn's announced intention of sailing for London next week led to the belief in Hollywood that plans had been revised. Spokesmen for Selznick International took the position that the Whitney-Selznick deal was never affirmed as a concrete possibility and cannot, therefore, be commented on as abandoned or continuing as a prospect.

On his trip to England, Mr. Goldwyn will be accompanied by Mr. Fairbanks.

A United Artists board meeting was to be held Tuesday, but was postponed until Thursday because of lack of a quorum.

Loss of Austrian Market Feared Following Coup

Heads of foreign distribution departments have accepted the realization that the annexation of Austria by Nazi Germany, accomplished this week, will mean serious curtailment of the market for American screen product in central Europe.

The first announcement of Adolph Hitler's coup over the weekend did not convey specific information as to the form of the new Austrian Government but reports later in the week indicated there will not even be a pretense of maintaining a separate government and that motion pictures companies, therefore, could expect that present and future restrictions on film imports and distribution in force in Germany would apply without change to what hitherto has been the Austrian market.

In the past year 128 American films were released in Austria by American film companies, compared with 165 in 1936, according to a recent report of the film bureau of the Vienna Chamber of Commerce. There were certain restrictions on the release of revenue from the Austrian market to the United States but they were not considered an insurmountable obstacle to trade.

In Germany restrictions on the release of funds have been prohibitive and at the same time German censorship has been so rigid that comparatively few American pictures have been approved for release there. The Nazi censorship authorities have a record of accepting or rejecting pictures indiscriminately and often without explanation for rejections. Approximately 50 American pictures were released in Germany during 1937.

A small amount of dubbing was done in Austria during 1937 but none in Germany.

Only three American companies maintain offices in Germany, Paramount, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Twentieth Century-Fox, while Warner Brothers, Universal, Columbia, United Artists and RKO have withdrawn entirely from the market there. Complete withdrawal of all American participation in the German market has been advocated by Harry M. Warner.

Quebec Drops Two Juvenile Cases

Two of the 22 actions by the city of Montreal against exhibitors for alleged admission of juveniles under 16 years of age, were dismissed this week on a technicality because city officials had neglected to secure authorization of the Provincial Attorney-General for the prosecutions. Hearing of the 20 other cases has been deferred pending the outcome of negotiations for reduction of the age limit.

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

The army of newspaper, magazine and trade publication reporters in Hollywood who have been watching the press-agentings of Bob Taplinger, at Warners' studio, frankly do not know what to expect next.

Mr. Taplinger left quite a position in radio, last year, to go out to Warners in California and give a showmanship twist to the worn-at-the-heels glamor hoopla that had marked most of the publicity events of Hollywood's pictures and personalities. Many a choice piece of press agency has emanated since from the direction of the Warner Studio at Burbank.

Only last week 150 newspaper and trade writers out that way received in their morning mail an invitation to go over to the Warner studio and play with a toy train being used by Errol Flynn in "Four's a Crowd," now filming.

"Do you lose yourself in the intricacies of the electric train you just bought for the kid?" queried the invitation. "Haven't you found that the boy's cries of disappointment because you got there first have cramped your style? Have hindered your complete concentration on switching a freight train to let the crack express through?"

Well, advised the Warner press agents, "The day of liberation is at hand! The dawn of independence is here for the parlor-floor railway engineer."

"On the set of 'Four's a Crowd,'" they continued, "on stage 22 on the Warner lot, Friday, at noon, you will be allowed—unfettered and uninterrupted—to play, examine and experiment with almost a mile of track, newest type locomotives, cars, switches, tunnels, grades, bridges, sidings, water tanks, automatic signals and other appurtenances. It's the largest indoor railroad in the world."

And 150 newspaper and trade writers in Hollywood became Casey Joneses.

Mary Carlisle, in Hollywood, says that movie stars out there receive on an average of 16 proposals of marriage a year.

PATHETIC STATE OF AFFAIRS DEPARTMENT: VALLEE CALLS JUDGES UNFAIR TO ACTORS

The Associated Press dispatch which carried the foregoing headline from Hollywood told how Rudy (the fierce) told the Hollywood Bar Association, at a dinner, that judges had a tendency to comment unfavorably on stage and screen stars who appear in court. Vallee worked himself up to such a pitch that he bursted out a charge that "Judges go out of their way to remind actors and actresses they are just like anyone else."

Typical of what the harassed-by-judges actors have to go through these days was the terrible incident suffered by Constance Bennett only the other morning at the hands of Judge Charles Burnell, in his Supreme Court in Los Angeles. Miss Bennett had sued GB Pictures for breach of contract, and, on the witness stand in her own behalf, became a little too quick on the trigger with her answers to questions propounded by GB's attorney. Judge Burnell interrupted Miss Bennett to inform her, "Remember, you are not here as a movie star. You're here just as the common, ordinary garden-variety witness. Just sit there and look pretty."

EXTENSIVE AS IT IS, the research department of Quigley Publications was unable to unearth the information requested by one Cleo Chester Smith, and so Mr. Smith agreed that his questions should be propounded in this department with the thought that the answers might be forthcoming from some old-time readers in the field.

Mr. Smith, by the way, presents his questions on a most unique letter-sheet. At the top appears his picture, clothed in college cap and gown, together with the engraved information that he is the "World's greatest memory artist," that he "Answers over 50,000 000 questions from memory," that his is "The only act of its kind in the World," and that it is "Ideal for theatres, chautauquas, clubs, amusement parks, circuses, carnivals and museums." Some of the questions to which Mr. Smith says he has ready answers are set down in two neat little panels also at the top of his letterhead. They include: "What is the population of Miami?" "Where is the Plains Hotel, and how many rooms?" "What is the county seat of Weber County, Utah?" "Who invented the first telephone?", etc., etc., concluding with a "Ask Him; He Knows."

To get back to the questions for which Mr. Smith now seeks answers: "Will you kindly inform me as to who was the first motion picture actress to ever wear these PAJAMAS in gay beautiful colors, out on the beaches and the streets? Where was her home located? Who was the first motion picture actress to ever, on any occasion, dress like BOYS and young men, in their clothes, trousers, overalls? Where was she living at the time?"

"Who was the first motion picture actress to ever smoke CIGARETTES, either in pictures, or in private life, or both? What was the name of the first SILENT moving picture ever produced, in which any girl or actress was seen smoking a cigarette?"

Mr. Smith asks identical questions pertaining to sound pictures. In both cases he also desires the name of the cigarette-smoking actresses, their addresses, when and where the films were produced, and by whom.

It may all be poppycock, but the story is around that there is fierce competition among the newsreels to be the first to bring back pictures of ex-filmiter and now Ambassador to England "Joe" Kennedy, standing in knee breeches and long stockings somewhere in the Court of St. James. Mr. Kennedy really should give his old Pathe News first break.

The Fort Scott (Kansas) Tribune passes along George Jean Nathan's conclusion that all the exercise a Broadway city man needs is opening the door of a taxicab and crawling inside. Personally, we prefer the less rigorous system followed by Hollywood's William Powell. He keeps fit by rising early every morning, staring hard at his swimming pool for three minutes, and then diving back into bed.

Despite the general burdensome restrictions, propaganda-instillments and supervisory influences inflicted these days on motion pictures in parts of Europe, some of the film industries over there really are making progress. Brussels, for example, now has "the only English cinema weekly" in those parts. And, not to be outdone by the star-rating system employed by some publications in this country, the Belgium paper, called "The Filmgoer," has adopted a rating system which, at least, is unique. An "outstanding feature" gets 0000 in "The Filmgoer"; a "very good feature" gets 000; a "good feature" gets 00, and "average entertainment" gets 0.

In the same Belgium "Filmgoer" we found the answer to our wonderment over the manner in which some of those foreign film stars acquire such a "brilliant" knowledge of the ways of Hollywood long before they are imported to these shores, as so frequently expressed by them to ship news reporters on their arrival in New York harbor.

The medium of enlightenment is a letter from Jessie Ralph, 62-year-old screen trouser in Hollywood, to the readers of the "Filmgoer," on the subject of how to attain success as an actress in California movies. It runs along the following lines:

"Success in motion pictures for a young and ambitious actress means more than a pair of slacks.

"Don't wear slacks too often. Woman never was built for slacks.

"Don't lose your femininity. After all, it's your greatest charm.

"Don't go in for severe wardrobes. Men still like fuffs.

"Don't try to be 16 if you are 60. You deceive nobody but yourself. You don't deceive yourself unless you are an idiot. If you are an idiot you will never succeed.

"Don't keep late hours. Don't ever remember you are pretty. The beauty you know you won't have for always is destined to fade.

"Listen to your director. He may be wrong, but he is your director."

pense and surprise have been welded in expert fashion.

Undoubtedly the "Thin Man" series and their commercial and entertainment success inspired "There's Always a Woman." This subject should not suffer in comparison with its popular predecessors. The appeal is to both class and mass audiences. The crime solving addicts, whether or not appreciative of semi-slapstick comedy, should find it worthy of their attention.

In the capable hands of Joan Blondell and Melvyn Douglas, who are the leads, Mary Astor, Frances Drake, Jerome Cowan and Robert Paige, the menaces, and Thurston Hall, Pierre Watkin, Walter Kingsford and Lester Matthews, who at various times and in devious situations come within range of the conflicting parties, the show is a breezy, refreshing thing that sparkles with crisp dialogue and involves a cycle of intricate situations while moving along at chain lightning speed. Laugh generating comedy, a feature of even the suspenseful mystery and melodrama, is the keynote. There's a killing or two, but without blood and thunder theatricals.

When "Reardon" flops as a private detective and gets a job in the district attorney's office, all he asks of his wife "Sally" is that she stay home, mind her business and let him alone. Such a request is anathema to "Sally." The stage properly set, "Fraser" is murdered, "Reardon" proceeds to investigate, and "Sally" gaily injects herself into the mess. Comedy balancing melodrama and intricate mystery, "Sally" is several times in danger of having "Reardon" make mince meat of her, but after she survives a ridiculously burlesqued third degree she stumbles upon clues that make husband "Reardon" appear a super Sherlock Holmes.

Wilson Collison's original is a slick yarn. In transcribing it to the screen, Gladys Lehman preserved the slickness, with William Perlberg providing class production. Alexander Hall directed so that all showmanship content is made readily available.

The comedy acting responsibilities are taken care of with aplomb and eclat, and the heavier stuff is done in workmanlike style. Supporting players fit into respective parts as if they had been made to order for them.

Tip-off Girls

(Paramount)

Melodrama

Whatever methods have been found successful in the past for notifying the populace that a sizzling hour of high explosive melodrama is on tap at a given cinema, are the ones to use in behalf of this fast, factualistic and staunchly fabricated treatise on the subject of overland highjacking. What the picture lacks in dynamic marquee personalities it more than makes up for in forceful performance of unfanciful and hard driven characterizations.

The title is misleading to the extent that it suggests a feminine emphasis, whereas the three girls in the picture play parts wholly incidental to a preponderantly masculine story.

The original screen play by Maxwell Shane, Robert Yost and Stuart Anthony has Lloyd Nolan in the unaccustomed role of FBI agent "Anders," who joins "Deegan's" highjacking mob by way of getting evidence against "Valkus," boss of the ring. The picture takes its title from Evelyn Brent's portrayal of "Rena," who poses as a hitchhiker to locate rich cargoes carried by overland trucks. "Anders" finally baits a trap for the mobsters and quite a lot of convincingly exciting events occur before right conquerers might.

Associate producer Edward T. Lowe kept his feet and the picture firmly on the ground, and director Louis King left never an inch of ineffective or extraneous footage in the finished product. The place is California, but could be any part of the country where bulky vans lumber thunderously through the quiet night and men's avarice overrides their caution. The time is now and the picture is wholesomely treated. J. Carrol Naish surpasses his best previous malevolence as the gangster-in-chief.

Law of the Underworld

(RKO Radio)

Gang Melodrama

A sequel to the gangster picture cycle, "Law of the Underworld" has action, suspense, love interest, and the requisite number of murders. It concerns an advertising man who moves in society circles while directing the activities of a gang of thieves, who entangles two youngsters in a crime and frees them at the cost of his own life.

The first consideration of the showmen exhibiting this RKO picture appears to be the cast. Top roles are taken by Chester Morris, Ann Shirley, Eduardo Ciannelli, Walter Abel, and Paul Guilfoyle, all of whom have considerable followings. Others are Richard Bond, Lee Patrick, Frank M. Thomas, Eddie Acuff, Jack Arnold, Jack Carson, Paul Stanton, George Shelley and Anthony Warde.

The title has its points for exploitation, being the studio name for "The Lost Game," story and Al H. Woods stage production, by John B. Hymer and Samuel Shipman. Bert Granet and Edmund L. Hartmann wrote the screen adaptation. Lew Landers directed and Robert Sisk produced.

"Gene Fillmore," genteel head of the gang, forces "Annabelle" and "Tommy," two youngsters planning to marry, to aid his criminal operations. "Rocky," his lieutenant, is desirous of taking over command and "Fillmore" kills him. Meanwhile "Rogers," special prosecutor has been given a tip by "Dorothy," sweetheart of "Rocky," that "Fillmore" is the gang chief and he closes in. "Annabelle" and "Tommy" are arrested, but keep silent. Faced with the thought that the youngsters may get the chair, "Fillmore" makes a deal to confess to "Rogers" for the pair's freedom.

Mr. Moto's Gamble

(20th Century-Fox)

Comedy Mystery

The latest of the Twentieth Century-Fox series starring Peter Lorre has a background of prize fighting, an unusual murder of a boxer, and suspicion pointing to a number of persons. Humor is interspersed by Keye Luke, Maxie Rosenbloom and Harold Hubler.

Also in the cast are Dick Baldwin, Lynn Bari, Douglas Fowley, Jane Regan and George E. Stone. Charles Belden and Jerry Cady wrote the original screen play from J. P. Marquand's characters. James Tinling directed.

When a boxer dies mysteriously after a bout on which large sums of money have been wagered, "Moto" takes over the case. Complications with a gambling ring arise, and attacks are made on "Moto's" life, but he outwits them.

This Marriage Business

(RKO Radio)

Comedy-Romance

In many places, especially those communities where an intimate neighborly spirit exists, "This Marriage Business" may develop into a surprisingly popular attraction. Its down-to-earth, wholesome amusement is strongly appealing to the patron who may have grown weary of more pretentious offerings. Its personnel, particularly Victor Moore, the theme and amplifying details, the comedy, intriguing romance and volatile if theatrical melodrama which they develop, together with quality of production and significance of the incident, are geared to inspire showmen to unique campaigns.

Trailing elopers bring reporter "Bennet" to Middletown. There he meets "Jud Holcomb," county clerk, who boasts that in all his years of issuing marriage licenses none of his "customers" has ever been divorced. Sensing a big story, he publicizes "Jud," couples flock to the town, which becomes prosperous, and the clerk becomes its leading citizen. A night club, run by New York racketeers, is the town's black spot, and to remove it, "Bennet" suggests that "Jud" run for mayor on a reform ticket. The earlier fun turns to bizarre but comic melodrama as gangdom takes a hand in the campaign, tries to frame "Jud" and finally does have him suspected of murder. Meanwhile "Bennet" is following up his romance with "Jud's" daughter, "Nancy." In the climax, he gets the incriminating evidence on "Selby," "Frisbee" and the whole crooked lot. "Jud" is elected and wins "Nancy's" consent to marriage.

Balancing dialogue, action, situations and characterizations intelligently, the film wastes no time on inconsequentials, moves speedily and puts its entertainment right up where it belongs on the screen, for all to enjoy without having to exercise a too great amount of mental gymnastics.

Previewed at the United Artists theatre, Inglewood. The audience, composed of oil industry workers, small town business men, clerks, farmers, a scattering of retired residents and suburbanites, seemed to be of the opinion that "This Marriage Business" had been made especially for it. The professional Hollywood contingent in attendance was enthusiastic in praising the film.—G. M.

The Painted Trail

(Monogram)

Western

A swiftly paced, hard riding, gun shooting western of the old school, this production should find much favor with the clientele on a Saturday afternoon or for that matter whenever western fans gather to see their favorite diversion. The setting is on the Texas side of the border and the story deals with the activities of a smuggling gang and the manner in which the "law" cracks down on the outfit.

Tom Keene is starred in the role of a United States marshal who disguises himself as an outlaw as a means of joining the gang, and features Eleanor Stewart as the romantic interest. Others in the cast include LeRoy Mason, Walter Long, Jimmy Eagles and Forest Taylor.

"Tom," commissioned by his superior to apprehend the smugglers, poses as "The Pecos Kid," is accepted by the gang and joins them in rustling cattle across the border. The sheriff and his deputies catch "Tom" red-handed but he convinces the sheriff that he is on the side of the law.

When G-Men Step In

(Columbia)

Melodrama

An interesting story capably directed makes this a better than average film in the G-Men cycle. The protagonists in this are brothers, one a G-Man and the other a racketeer, who have genuine devotion for each other. There is an ever so slight romantic tinge and a sprinkling of comedy.

The cast fit the roles and include Don Terry, Jacqueline Wells, Robert Paige, Gene Morgan, Paul Fix and Edward Earle, C. C. Coleman, Jr., directed from a story by Arthur T. Horman and Robert C. Bennett.

"Frederick Garth" (Don Terry) is head of a gang operating several rackets behind the screen of a printing company. His younger brother, "Bruce" (Robert Paige), has become a member of the Federal Bureau of Investigation instead of joining "Frederick's" organization as its lawyer and is unaware of "Frederick's" racketeering. Practically every clue leads indirectly to "Frederick," and after finding conclusive proof in the printing shop "Bruce" accosts his brother with the truth. "Frederick" overpowers "Bruce," but hides him when two members of the gang appear. Later at the printing shop, where the gang have turned against their leader, "Bruce" arrives with the police, but "Frederick" has been killed.

"The Dybbuk"

(Irving Geist)

Tragic Folk Tale

In 1920 S. Ansky wrote the play from which this screen story of Jewish folk way, superstition and young love has been adopted. In the years following its initial presentation, the work has been performed in practically every large city of the world and has grown to become a classic in the field of Yiddish dramatic art. New York theatrical circles have viewed four different versions of the play.

In the translation from stage to screen as coming from the studios in Warsaw, Poland, the dramatic power, the religious customs and atmosphere of the supernatural have been moulded into an expert and complete reproduction, faithful to the letter and the spirit of the original. The acting, somewhat removed from the present day style, is nonetheless powerfully effective, a musical score creates an appropriate background, and there is competent technical handling of direction, lighting and set mounting. The running time is rather long but the dramatic impact of the story draws unflagging interest.

With dialogue in Yiddish but set with an excellently worded compilation of English titles, the production will receive the greatest amount of endorsement from Jewish theatre goers, but general audiences that respond to the exceptional in screen material should find matter here for study and enthusiasm.

The Moth and the Flame

(RKO-Disney)

Variation on a Moral

Victims who have had their precious wearing apparel ravished by hungry moths will be disconcerted to see in this latest fantasy from the Disney penmen that the "mothy" termites are really rather nice and romantic folk at heart. Concerned with a "boy moth meets girl moth" theme, the excursion into whimsy follows the amorous insects as they cavort in the company of their fellow bugs around what would be paradise for their peculiar appetites, a second hand clothing store. The use of color to paint the shades of burning material is striking.—Running time, eight minutes.

The subject has been exceptionally well shot with magnificent panoramic sights of seas and skies.—Running time, 10 minutes.

MEXICO REJECTS PLAN TO BAR FOREIGN FILMS

Senatorial Bloc Says Ban Would Be Severe Blow to Country's Business As Whole

by JAMES LOCKHART
in Mexico City

Some encouragement for the foreign phase of the industry in Mexico is seen by the action of the permanent senatorial bloc roundly rejecting the proposition of the national cinematographic workers' alliance to ban or at least drastically restrict imports of pictures in English and other alien languages. The bloc told the league that it does not in the least agree with its contention that banning foreign language pictures would further the interests of the domestic industry. The solons asserted that such prohibition would hit not only the industry very hard but would be a severe economic blow to Mexico as a whole.

Banning or hampering English and other alien pictures would work a grave hardship upon thousands of Mexicans who depend upon the film industry for a livelihood, the bloc asserted. Such hampering would be most disadvantageous for Mexico, as its picture industry has not been developed to the extent of that of the United States, the senators held.

The eight major American companies—Paramount, Twentieth Century-Fox, Columbia, RKO, Universal, United Artists, Warners-First National and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer—see this as indicating a favorable trend of the Mexican government toward the film situation. The distributors' general sentiment is that they have had plenty of labor, tax and legislation grief and that if any more labor and tax (legislation has been quiet for some little time) trouble develops they will stand pat to the extent of quitting Mexico. Such action, however, it is pointed out, would be entirely up to the distributors' home offices. This sentiment has drifted to the film workers' union, which have the distinction of establishing the Confederation of Mexican Workers and Farmers, Mexico's strongest labor organization, and has inspired much deep thought.

Government Aid Indicated

More government aid is in the offing for the Mexican picture industry. President Lazaro Gardenas has docketed the most ambitious of these plans, that for founding a state bank to finance the industry, for hearing at the extraordinary session of congress which is to open late this month or early in April. This bank is to have a capital of 100,000,000 pesos (approximately $28,000,000), supplied on a 50-50 basis by the government and the industry.

The other plan is the institution of a national council to regulate the industry. This measure is before the permanent senatorial bloc and action on it is expected before Easter.

Individualism instead of standardization is the new objective of Mexican film producers.

They have harkened to complaints from at home, and to some extent from abroad, that one Mexican made picture is much like another. This standardization is beginning to have a detrimental effect on trade. So, the new pictures are being made along different lines. Producers are giving more attention to plot. They are lining up the best playwrights, authors and scenarists in the country; they are also going after really good technicians and players.

The newest producing company here, FAMA, is following the individualistic trend and aiming at international appeal in three pictures to be released this spring, "Refugees in Madrid," "Santa Ana, His Private Life," and "Asuncion."

Another out of the run of the mill Mexican picture is "Noches de Gloria" ("Glorious Nights"), produced by J. Luis Bueno and starring Esperanza Iris, Mexican comedienne who has a cinema named for her in Mexico City, that is soon to have its premiere at the Cine Teatro Alameda, Mexico City.

Technical facilities for Mexican films have been improved with the establishment in Mexico City by Jose Garcia Moreno of a large and modern laboratory that is equipped with American apparatus. He is to build a large studio.

The first circuit of Mexico City, operated by Jose Echeverria and Company, has started to modernize its 14 houses, starting with the Cine Granat. The work is to occupy six months and includes decorating and adding several patron comfort facilities.

Investment of Spanish capital in the Mexican film industry is being arranged by Ricardo Urgoiti, general manager of Filmofono, S. A., of Madrid, which presented the first made in Mexico picture in Spain. The deal is to be on the basis of a mutual distribution of Mexican pictures in Spain and Filmofono productions in Mexico.

First All-Child Cast

Mexico has made her first picture played entirely by children, with a girl of eight years in the lead. It is "Alla en el Rancho" ("Way Down on the Little Ranch"). The picture is to have its premiere in Mexico City soon.

The Mexican government has started to strictly enforce regulations governing commercial and amateur radio stations. There were numerous complaints from the public about violations of the code.

Radio merchandizing has been hard hit by the new tariffs which greatly increase duties on transmitters, receivers and bulbs. Most Mexico City dealers are limiting themselves to disposing of stocks that were on hand when the tariffs went into effect and to apparatus that was ordered by customers at or immediately before then. Many dealers have canceled orders with American and other firms abroad for goods that they would have to sell.

$605,755 Net For 1937, Report Of Consolidated

Report of Consolidated Film Industries, Inc., and subsidiaries for year ended December 31, 1937, certified by independent auditors, shows a net profit of $605,755 after depreciation, interest, provision for doubtful accounts, federal income taxes, surtax on undistributed profits, etc., equivalent to $1.51 a share on 400,000 no-par shares of $2 cumulative participating preferred stock, (on which dividend arrears amount to $2,400,000).

Loew's Inc., earnings for its 16-week period ended March 12th are estimated by the Wall Street Journal at approximately $2.25 a share for the 1,599,053 shares of common stock outstanding. Sentry Safety Control Corporation reported a net loss of $463 after all charges and depreciation and Crosley Radio Corporation reported a net loss of $376,914 for the year ending December 31, 1937, after deducting depreciation charges of $233,153.

Consolidated income account for year 1937, compares as follows:

ANSWER TO QUESTION NO. 104

F. H. RICHARDSON

Question No. 104 was: (A) What is a "brush," as applied to a motor or a generator? What purpose does it serve? (B) What is meant by "brush loss"? To what is it chiefly due? (C) What is meant by brush pressure? What should be its limits?

The following made acceptable answer to question No. 104: S. Evans and C. Rau; G. E. Doe; J. R. Prater; R. and K. Wells; C. Oldham; L. Cimikoski; G. Thompson; E. H. Toedte; W. H. Edmonds; J. Morton; W. Limmroth; O. H. Schmidt; L. F. Hayes; M. and J. Devoy; J. A. Zachritz; L. S. Kelley; H. Bunker; J. J. Petersen; C. A. Whitlock; R. Feasel; R. W. Croton; W. Schoeneman; Kiva Theatre (Name not given); F. H. S. and P. Dalbey; R. R. Robbins and W. Winkler; A. D. Lonby; T. and W. Turk; G. T. Vieller; L. E. Dodson and H. T. Todd; M. D. McGuire; E. F. and M. Wentworth; L. F. and G. Brown; K. Erwin; T. W. Redhouse; M. F. Robinson and L. A. Beachwood; R. R. Jacobs and B. B. Hornstein; L. B. S. Hewitt; B. and M. Walker; C. H. Lowrie; D. and W. Porter; R. Davis and F. M. Brown; L. Johnson; E. F. and M. Wentworth; S. L. Maxwell; L. D. Tomlinson; B. L. Kent; W. R. Davis and B. L. Bunt; P. and L. Felt; D. A. Shea and H. T. Plum; W. B. Myers and L. G. Dillon; D. Coates; L. R. Whitmore; E. Exline; G. L. Goss and Son; M. Samuels and O. L. Goldstein; J. J. Robinson and R. E. Bullard; F. D. Scanlon; F. E. Dorp and H. A. Ames; B. L. Simson; T. D. Williams; L. J. Rubin; Q. G. Rolton; P. F. Maxwell and S. U. Lamont; L. G. Simmons; A. Leonard and G. T. Jones; H. T. Rainer; R. H. Carter; H. T. Randolph; N. S. Reid and H. T. Watkins; A. W. Baxter and J. M. Kelner; J. R. Davidson and W. R. Matthews; R. L. Sampson; F. W. Brandenburg; H. M. Jackson and W. V. Henderson; C. L. Brant; L. and F. L. Saylor; R. M. Schnider.

Leo Cimikoski replies to Section A as follows: "As applied to a motor generator, a 'brush' may be strips of metal, a formed bundle of copper wires, slit plates of metal, or a block of carbon. However, since presumably we are considering motors and generators used in theatre projection work only, we may say the brush is a block of carbon designed to bear upon the commutator of a d.c. generator or the slip ring of an alternator, and to supply constant contact as between the commutator or slip ring and the wires of an external circuit, which latter is the purpose the brush serves.

"There are many sizes and varieties of brushes, each designed for duty in different conditions and circumstances. Because the

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL Question No. 110

(A) What is the correct method of fitting brush ends to commutator surface?

(B) How should commutators be brushed each day and why?

(C) How may a commutator surface be cleaned right down to the copper when such cleaning is required?

(D) After sanding a commutator, what should be done before it is put into operation?

(Note: Remember, this is a Bluebook school and the answer to all save possibly some social questions can be found in that book.)

use of a brush that is unsuitable may set up loss in any one of several directions, including damage to the commutator or slip ring, it is advisable that the projectionist study composition and functioning of various types of brush, to the end that he be in position to select proper brushes for the motors and generators under his charge."

(B) E. H. Toedte says, "A brush offers resistance to the flow of current, but the term 'brush loss' applies chiefly to loss at its point of contact with the commutator surface, the amount of such loss depending upon (a) condition of commutator, (b) amount and steadiness of contact as applies to entire contact surface of brush, and (c) amount of pressure per unit area of brush upon commutator. If the commutator be smooth, clean and perfectly round; if the brush contact surface be clean and of proper curvature; if the contact pressure be correct (from 1.25 to 1.50 pounds per square inch of contact surface); if there be no sparking, the brush loss will then be at minimum, assuming of course that a brush of correct dimensions and composition be used. If, on the contrary, any or all the above named points be lacking, the loss will be in proportion to the sum of the faults at the points named."

(C) O. H. Schmidt replies, "The term 'brush pressure' signifies the pressure at which brushes are held to the commutator, or slip ring (if it be an alternator), said pressure being supplied by a spring. The pressure must be just sufficient to insure good electrical contact when both brush and commutator, or slip ring, surfaces be smooth and clean. It should never be less than 1.25, or in excess of 1.50 pounds per square inch of contact surface."

R. W. Groton replies, "Brush pressure is the force with which a spring causes a brush to bear upon the commutator bars in a generator or a d.c. motor. The pressure should be 'just-rite' which means about $1\frac{1}{4}$ pounds to $1\frac{1}{2}$ pounds per square inch of contact surface. Good electrical contact is necessary to insure smooth operation and utmost economy."

May I add to this the thought that many projectionists do not pay the close attention to brushes the importance of their function demands. A brush a bit too hard or with a bit too much contact pressure soon cuts or wears grooves in the commutator surface, prevents the slight end motion of the armature that is so desirable, thus making too frequent dressing down of the commutator necessary. A brush that is too soft tends to wear off rapidly and fill the undercuts with carbon dust, thus inducing unnecessary sparking. A brush with excessive lubricating quality not only will kill the commutator gloss that is so essential to good operation, as well as tend to fill up the undercuts, with resultant excessive sparking. Brush contact surface should be calculated exactly and its amount posted on the wall beside the machine. The pressure of each brush should be tested once each week. Springs often weaken either gradually or quite suddenly. I have found them with twice the pressure they should have; others with only half normal pressure. In fact I have quite often found a very great difference between brushes on the same generator. Brushes are matters well deserving of careful care and regular, periodic testing.

George Pal and Dave Bader Leave New York for Coast

George Pal, creator of a new cartoon process employing puppets instead of drawings, and David A. Bader, who arrived in New York from London with Mr. Pal recently, left Monday night for the coast. Mr. Pal will attempt to interest studios in his development.

Mr. Pal held a demonstration on Monday afternoon of three of his films, which were produced in his studio at Eindhoven, Holland, for the advertising field. He said that about 3,000 individual figures are used in an eight minute subject and that it takes about a month to make. The sets used are 15 feet wide and the cost of a subject is $15,000, he said.

Joe Goetz, manager of the RKO Paramount theatre and founder of the Cincinnati Bookers Club, was reelected president for his third consecutive term last week.

SURBURBAN BRONXVILLE ASKS TWO HOUR SHOWS

Exclusive Village Canvasses 902 Families and Finds It Gets Too Much Entertainment

Residents of that exclusive village of Bronxville, a Westchester County community, 30 minutes by rail from Grand Central Station in New York City, say they know what they want in the way of film fare and are determined to get it.

After about three years of activity during which various demands were met by the management of the 1,207-seat Bronxville Theatre, the villagers, under the banner of the Bronxville Motion Picture Council, this week aired their latest desires—a two-hour program on Saturday afternoons with intermissions between performances and without trailers advertising future attractions.

One of the greatest problems films present to parents, the council contends, is that of getting children out of theatres once they have seen a complete show. Dinners are forgotten and parents are forced to sit twiddling their thumbs, waiting for their offspring to return home after an afternoon at the theatre, the council complains.

Based on Poll

The group bases its demands on a recent poll. A total of 902 families, with 1,003 children, were sent questionnaires and 80 per cent of the recipients filed replies. "There is an overwhelming demand for the feature picture that the entire family can enjoy," Mrs. Edna K. Denman, public relations counsel for the council, reported.

She described the council as made up of representatives of "clubs, schools, churches and every other organized group" in the village. William H. Van Dusen, father of three children, is president.

About "once a year," Mr. Van Dusen said, the council takes some action in regard to films. At the offices of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, it was recalled that the council successfully demanded Saturday morning children's programs some time ago. On one other occasion, it was explained, Bronxville was observing "humanity week" and the council decided it would be fitting to have the local house, which is now operated by Skouras Theatres, show "Sequoia" on its program. The fact that the film was no longer being distributed caused the council no concern, the MPPDA office explained.

The film was shown at the theatre.

Prefer "Less Entertainment"

But, as for the current demands of the council, Mrs. Denman said "a large number of parents prefer less entertainment for the money that the movie house now hands out. A two-hour program is quite enough, the majority of parents say."

Mrs. Denman stressed the point that the council does not look upon itself as a censor and claims no censorship functions.

As for the types of films preferred adventure pictures are the first choice and as an example, the council cited "Captains

TRAILERS TERMED TOO EFFECTIVE

A complaint that trailers advertising future attractions are too effective was voiced by the Bronxville Motion Picture Council this week. The council plans to request the management of the Bronxville theatre to omit trailers from Saturday matinees and this is the reason:

"So effective is the selling capacity of previews (trailers) that with each showing a tacit future date is made with the theatre by the young spectator. So parents in Bronxville prefer that previews be left out of the Saturday matinee programs."

Courageous." "There is a mighty cool reception in Bronxville for thrillers like the once popular 'Dracula,' 'Frankenstein,' and 'King Kong,'" Mrs. Denman said. "Gangster and crime pictures, too, are frowned upon, such as 'Alcatraz,' and many parents do not want sophisticated drama like 'Dreaming Lips' and 'Back in Circulation' for the eyes and minds of the youthful.

"Strange as it may seem," she continued, "the plays built around the popular juvenile stars do not go over so big with Bronxville parents."

Like Comedies

The community, according to the council, has little or no interest in social problem pictures. High on the list of likes, however, are comedies such as "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," historical films such as "Victoria the Great," and "picturized classics" like "Romeo and Juliet" and "David Copperfield."

"Westerns, slap-stick and Charlie Chans," Mrs. Denman said, "are not so acceptable, according to the poll."

In the field of short subjects, the council points to newsreels as its first choice and these are followed, in order, by travel films, animated cartoons and then educational pictures. However, Mrs. Denman pointed out, many parents find their partiality for the newsreel modified by the recent preponderance of war shots.

Executives on Fund Committee

O. Henry Briggs, Leo Spitz, Frank C. Walker, Leo Brecher and Gilbert Miller have been appointed to the sponsoring committee of the Greater New York Fund, an organization for the financing and coordination of more than 800 private health and welfare agencies which seeks to raise $10,000,000 for its work.

Richmond Theatre Opened

The new Westhampton theatre, Richmond, Va., has been opened under the management of Stewart Tucker. The house is the 21st in the circuit, Neighborhood Theatres of Virginia.

Artists Ask Aid Of Petrillo In Recording Fight

James Petrillo, president of the Chicago local of the American Federation of Musicians and leader of the organization's fight with theatres and broadcasters, arrived in New York this week to consider an offer to become president of the National Association of Performing Artists.

Under the terms of the offer, Mr. Petrillo would receive an initial fee of $100,000 to head the NAPA's battle against radio stations and slot machine owners who use recordings without paying royalties.

In an address before the executive board of the NAPA, Mr. Petrillo branded those who use the records for profit and then fail to pay royalties as "chiselers" engaged in a "lousy racket." Mr. Petrillo, in his speech, also took occasion to denounce motion picture studios. They have put 22,000 musicians out of work and replaced them with 300, he charged.

"We're not going to allow that kind of treatment any longer," Mr. Petrillo declared. "The American Federation of Musicians is just about ready to say 'stop this racket' to the studios and when the AFM says 'stop,' the studios will stop, or else."

Reverting back to the NAPA's fight to halt the use of recordings by radio stations and other interests which derive a profit from the use of the recordings without paying the artists, Mr. Petrillo estimated that $5,000,000 to $6,000,000 is the annual loss to the musicians through the practice.

The AFM's license for transcription and recording companies will help the NAPA, Mr. Petrillo predicted. He then estimated that there are about 300 independent stations which are now "chiseling" on musicians. Unless these stations sign the AFM agreement within the near future, he declared, the union will stop completely the supply of music to them. He expressed confidence that 90 per cent of the independent station owners would sign the agreement.

Although he did not give the association a definite answer on their offer to engage him, he said he would give it serious consideration.

Maurice J. Speiser, counsel for the association, reported that the performing rights of the artist have been recognized in Argentina, Brazil, Ecuador, Uruguay and Chile and in France, Czechoslovakia and Italy.

The NAPA has a membership of about 500, principally band leaders. It was organized several years ago by Fred Waring. Among the band leaders who attended the meeting this week were Paul Whiteman, Ben Bernie, George Olsen, Phil Spitalny, Benny Goodman, Don Voorhees, Isham Jones, Xavier Cugat, Emil Coleman, Ruby Newman, Harold Stern, Walter Damrosch and Fritz Reiner.

RKO Radio has exercised its option on Robert F. Sisk's producing contract. The producer current assignment is "Law of the Underworld," with Chester Morris and Anne Shirley. This will be followed by "Girl from Mexico."

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

DEVIL IS DRIVING, THE: Richard Dix, Joan Perry—Get behind this with all you have, in line with reckless driving. The picture will back it up. Good human interest story and a lot of truth to it. We had some compliments and no complaints. Played February 11-13.—Ruff Bros., Mainstreet Theatre, Logan, Kansas. General patronage.

GAME THAT KILLS, THE: Charles Quigley, Rita Hayworth—This picture packs a lot of punch and will please all. But it is entirely too short, so get plenty of good shorts to support it with running time. This has the old gambling racket in games, but will go over. Well acted and fast. Running time, 56 minutes. Played March 4-6.—Ruff Bros., Mainstreet Theatre, Logan, Kansas. General patronage.

I'LL TAKE ROMANCE: Grace Moore, Melvyn Douglas—A very good Grace Moore picture but, oh, the business. "Ouch."—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

IT'S ALL YOURS: Madeleine Carroll, Francis Lederer, Mischa Auer—Pretty good. Connie Boswell was advertised on window cards as being in this. She wasn't. Some people complained.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

LOST HORIZON: Ronald Colman—One of the few great pictures that Columbia makes that failed to click at the box office. A magnificently made picture in every respect. Business average. Running time, 118 minutes. Played February 13-16.—Walter Currell, Gem Theatre, Logan, Utah. Small town and general patronage.

LOST HORIZON: Ronald Colman—They didn't know whether they liked it or not, although did good business. Advertise it big and you're OK.—L. W. (Les) Krueger, Viking Theatre, Cranfills Gap, Texas. Small town patronage.

OUTLAWS OF THE PRAIRIE: Charles Starrett—This is a fair western that will appeal to all western fans. We have had better westerns but not for some time. Unless they start spending more time and money on westerns there will be no demand for westerns in a short time. Played January 21-23.—Ruff Bros., Mainstreet Theatre, Logan, Kansas. General patronage.

TROUBLE IN MOROCCO: Jack Holt, Mae Clarke—Good picture. Jack Holt always was a good drawing card here and this is no exception. Posters on this are good. Running time, 62 minutes. Played February 25-26.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Nova Scotia. General patronage.

WIDE OPEN FACES: Joe E. Brown—My ushers all quit because they were afraid to stay alone in the dark.—Happy Hasselo, State and Grand Theatre, Worthington, Minn. General patronage.

WOMEN IN PRISON: Wyn Cahoone, Scott Colton—Played this on a Friday-Saturday and dressed box office up like a prison and did the folks eat this up. Did very good business.—L. W. Krueger, Viking Theatre, Granfills Gap, Texas. Small town patronage.

First National

DEVIL'S SADDLE LEGION, THE: Dick Foran, Anne Nagel—If your patrons like westerns, this is an exceptionally good picture for them. In fact, I never played a bad western with this star. Most of my patrons do not care for this type of picture and business is usually off when I play them. Running time, 56 minutes. Played February 16.—F. L. Clarke, Cozy Theatre, Hazen, Ark. Small town patronage.

GOLD DIGGERS OF 1937: Dick Powell, Joan Blondell—Very good and pleased 100 per cent. Can't understand it. Our patrons don't go for this class of stuff in a big way and yet the picture pleased all who came to see it. Guess it's westerns and action pictures they want nowadays. Played February 21-22.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Sydney, Nova Scotia. General patronage.

GOLD IS WHERE YOU FIND IT: George Brent, Olivia de Havilland, Claude Rains—A good one for Friday and Saturday run. Did good business and gave the two-gun patrons a thrill in the end. Running time, 96 minutes. Played February 25-26.—B. J. Aylesworth, Lyric and Connellee Theatres, Eastland, Tex. General patronage.

What the Picture Did for Me
MOTION PICTURE HERALD
Rockefeller Center, New York

HOLLYWOOD HOTEL: Dick Powell, Benny Goodman and his Orchestra, Ted Healy, Johnnie Davis—A fair musical that did not live up to expectations. The number Benny Goodman plays nearly ruins his reputation. Everyone was glad when it was over. Paige's orchestration was wonderful. As usual, Ted Healy, and we will miss him greatly, was the whole show. The musical numbers as a whole were very good. Not nearly the picture that "Varsity Show" was. Running time, 109 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

MR. DODD TAKES THE AIR: Kenny Baker, Jane Wyman—Business very poor. Also fair musical. Lots better if Alice Brady had been left out. Warner's musicals always have good ending, but very slow start. Give us less film and no dull moments. Musical pictures are getting like western pictures; when you see one, you have seen all of them. Running time, 90 minutes. Played February 24-25.—Ouida Stephano, Grove Theatre, Groveton, Texas. Small town patronage.

MR. DODD TAKES THE AIR: Kenny Baker, Jane Wyman—Good picture. Good entertainment. Running time, 68 minutes. Played February 23-24.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

SH! THE OCTOPUS: Hugh Herbert, Allen Jenkins—Played on Bargain Night; keep house in uproar. Picture just a fair program.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

SH! THE OCTOPUS: Hugh Herbert, Allen Jenkins—See report on Warner Bros. "Expensive Husbands."—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

SH! THE OCTOPUS: Hugh Herbert, Allen Jenkins—Not so good. Silly in spots. Business fair. Will do on double program. Hugh Herbert is not so funny as leading player. Running time, 54 minutes. Played February 22-23.—Ouida Stephano, Grove Theatre, Groveton, Texas. Small town patronage.

SUBMARINE D-1: Pat O'Brien, George Brent—Grand. Real good. Give it your best playing time. At last I have played a good picture from Warner Bros. this year. Running time, 105 minutes. Played February 27-28.—Ouida Stephano, Grove Theatre, Groveton, Texas. Small town patronage.

GB Pictures

DR. SYN: George Arliss—Another flop. Arliss good in a part that evoked some question as to good taste. Part of dialogue so thick you could not get it through the soundhead. No business; no wonder. Running time, 81 minutes. Played February 16-17.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

Grand National

SOMETHING TO SING ABOUT: James Cagney—Fair program picture. I think the title hurt this picture more than it did good. Running time, 92 minutes. Played February 24-25.—W. M. Pinckard, Princess Theatre, Carthage, Tenn. Small town patronage.

TROUBLE IN TEXAS: Tex Ritter—One of the biggest busts ever registered. Played two and that was two too many. Sounds too much like a run-down phonograph and would advise Grand National to try winding him up. We run Tex Ritter on the days when the fish are at their best. To be very brief and to the point, it held up like snow on the Fourth of July. Running time, 63 minutes. Played January 13-15.—Walter Currell, Gem Theatre, Logan, Utah. Small town and general patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BAD MAN OF BRIMSTONE: Wallace Beery, Virginia Bruce—Played this on a three day run starting with a Sunday matinee. As a rule, we never play westerns on these days, but felt this justified an experiment. It did, with business above average and patron reaction all to the good. Running time, 89 minutes. Played February 13-15.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

BAD MAN OF BRIMSTONE: Wallace Beery—"Bad Man" just another western that was lifted by beautiful photography and swell acting by the one and only Beery. Box office a little above average. Played February 20-21.—Ide Hables, Reel Joy Theatre, King City, Cal. General patronage.

BROADWAY MELODY OF 1938: Robert Taylor, Eleanor Powell, George Murphy, Buddy Ebsen—This picture can't fail to drag 'em in with all the stars. But is not as good as billed. However, the patrons liked it fine. Running time, 110 minutes. Played February 21-22.—W. M. Pinckard, Princess Theatre, Carthage, Tenn. Small town patronage.

CONQUEST: Greta Garbo, Charles Boyer—Another one of Metro's marathons. Held off playing this until forced to and got it on two week days. The only business I got was the high school because I gave them a rate and they got out of school two hours early and received three credits for going. The rest of the people wanted to know what was on in the next town. Running time, 112 minutes. Played February 22-23.—B. J. Aylesworth, Lyric and Connellee Theatres, Eastland, Tex. General patronage.

CONQUEST: Greta Garbo, Charles Boyer—Garbo and Boyer do a fine job but the costume stuff is ancient history in the film business, especially in small towns. Ticket seller almost went to sleep. Played February 23-24.—Ike Hables, Reel Joy Theatre, King City, Cal. General patronage.

DOUBLE WEDDING: William Powell, Myrna Loy—Personally, I thought this one the poorest I have ever run from this popular pair, William Powell and Myrna Loy, but the patrons seemed to disagree from me, according to the laughs. As always, they give a wonderful performance, ably assisted by Jessie Ralph, Mary Gordon and Edgar Kennedy. Goofy story but excellent cast and lots of comedy pleased. Running time, 87 minutes. Played February 25-27.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

DOUBLE WEDDING: Myrna Loy, William Powell—Good sophisticated slapstick, if you can figure that out. Played February 13.—Mrs. O. A. Jensen, Silver Hill Theatre, Oshkosh, Neb. Small town patronage.

DOUBLE WEDDING: William Powell, Myrna Loy—MGM's lion doesn't seem to hit the box office. This was an amusing show that pleased those that came. Powell swell but Loy a bit miscast. Played February 13-14.—Ike Hables, Reel Joy Theatre, King City, Cal. General patronage.

EVERYBODY SING: Judy Garland, Allan Jones, Fanny Brice—A dandy. This picture is what I call a good comedy and everyone else seemed to think so. From now on they better never put a comedy out like "Nothing Sacred," "True Confession" and pictures of that type, as Metro has put one out with some truth to life sense and make the stars in the other pictures mentioned look like a bunch of fools as far as acting goes. Running time, 90 minutes. Played February 18-19.—B. J. Aylesworth, Lyric and Connellee Theatres, Eastland, Texas. General patronage.

FIREFLY, THE: Jeannette MacDonald, Allan Jones—Swell show that flopped at the box office. Show a little too long but well done. Running time, 130 minutes. Played February 27-28.—Ike Hables, Reel Joy Theatre, King City, Cal. General patronage.

WOMEN

WAYWARD · ANNE SHIRLEY

... these women who once knew kisses and care and kindness — these sisters and sweethearts and mothers of men!... these outcasts from a society always ready to cast the first stone!... See it all in this daringly sensational picture that takes you right behind the walls of a prison for women and exposes its bitter secrets!... A TERRIFICALLY REAL AND TREMENDOUSLY BITING DRAMA OF HEARTS IN BONDAGE ... OF WOMEN AGAINST A RELENTLESS LAW ... OF WOMEN GOADED BY HATE AND FEAR AND CONFINEMENT TO JAILBREAK AND RIOT!

this for a long time and apparently it was just the opportune time to play it. Did extra business and pleased most. Running time, 81 minutes. Played February 25-26.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

LAST GANGSTER, THE: Edward G. Robinson—A somewhat better than average gangster story. However, we didn't do any more than usual on it. Played February 26.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

MADAME X: Gladys George, Warren William—Did average single day business to the latest and best "Madame X." Swell tear jerker that will please. Played February 22.—Ike Hables, Reel Joy Theatre, King City, Cal. General patronage.

MADAME X: Gladys George, Warren William—A very sad story and the ladies all came out crying. After one peek at the box office take I also burst right out crying. A complete flop. Played March 1.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

MAN PROOF: Myrna Loy, Franchot Tone, Rosalind Russell—And the Lion roars, so will the exhibitor when he gets this one, and he will probably out-roar the lion. Talk, talk and more talk with Mr. Joan Crawford (Franchot Tone), who has always been a wet smack in this house. Myrna Loy certainly picked up a load when she drew this combination. I could get along very nicely without either Tone or Crawford after her last three pictures, and we haven't a customer that ever says a good word for Tone. It is the other way around. This type may be okay for the larger situations, but we find that a picture that has no action, all dialogue, is whipped at the start. They may come the first day, but the picture dies the death of a dog, as this one did, on the second day. I and the theatre cat almost had to sit in to make a quorum.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

MAN-PROOF: Myrna Loy, Franchot Tone, Rosalind Russell—I was glad to see Tone get a good role at last. I think he is a surprisingly good comedian. I liked the picture a lot and thought it quite clever. I can't see why but I have to admit it did not do the business I expected from it. Running time, 75 minutes. Played February 26-28.—R. D. Leatherman, Rialto Theatre, Denison, Texas. Railroad town patronage.

MY DEAR MISS ALDRICH: Maureen O'Sullivan, Edna May Oliver, Walter Pidgeon—Good for midweek. Played February 16.—Mrs. O. A. Jensen, Silver Hill Theatre, Oshkosh, Neb. Small town patronage.

NAVY BLUE AND GOLD: Robert Young, James Stewart, Florence Rice—Proving that a good picture played late beats a mediocre picture played close to release date. This clicked beautifully to splendid business and pleased the patrons in a big way. Running time, 94 minutes. Played February 11-12.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

NAVY BLUE AND GOLD: Lionel Barrymore, Robert Young—An excellent picture that should do good anywhere. Played February 19.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

PARADISE FOR THREE: Frank Morgan, Robert Young, Florence Rice—Names mean nothing here but what a honey of a show. Dust off your exploitation books, shake the cobwebs off the brain and let your patrons know you've got a show in town. Hit the ceiling with all the old ideas you've ever used and manufacture a few new ones. You've got to sell this one. Not big enough for a Sunday show but what a sweet heart of a program. What this world needs more than anything else is a good five cent cigar and more like "Paradise for Three." There's a laugh in every flicker.—Happy Hasselo, State and Grand Theatre, Worthington, Minn. General patronage.

PARNELL: Clark Gable, Myrna Loy—This went over fine and did fair midweek business. The patrons were pleased with everything but the finish. If I had played this picture sooner, it would have done better at the box office. Running time, 118 minutes. Played February 10-11.—W. M. Pinckard, Princess Theatre, Carthage, Tenn. Small town patronage.

ROSALIE: Nelson Eddy, Eleanor Powell, Ray Bolger, Frank Morgan—Proved a surprise but not a pleasant one, since this was on percentage. Did extra business and pleased the patrons. Personally thought it too long and too spectacular, but who am I to criticize? Running time, 122 minutes. Played February 27-March 1.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

TARZAN ESCAPES: Johnny Weissmuller, Maureen O'Sullivan—I played this on Saturday only, to record breaking business, even if it is old. Played February 12.—W. M. Pinckard, Princess Theatre, Carthage, Tenn. Small town patronage.

THOROUGHBREDS DON'T CRY: Judy Garland, Mickey Rooney, Sophie Tucker—As pleasing a picture as any we've shown for some time. Patrons were well pleased. Mickey Rooney is box office and he certainly turns in a swell performance in this one. Running time, 80 minutes. Played February 26-27.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

THOROUGHBREDS DON'T CRY: Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland—A dandy down-to-earth picture from Metro without a fortune spent on it.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

ADD THESE EIGHT TO REPORTERS

Seven states and a Canadian province are represented by the eight new contributors to "What the Picture Did for Me" in the last fortnight.

Reporting for the first time are these:

George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Sydney, Nova Scotia.

R. D. Leatherman, Rialto Theatre, Denison, Texas.

A. Goldson, Ideal Theatre, Chicago, Ill.

Happy Hasselo, State and Grand Theatres, Worthington, Minn.

L. W. Krueger, Viking Theatre, Cranfills Gap, Texas.

Returning to reportorial service after a year's absence are:

Warren L. Weber, Deluxe Theatre, St. John, Kansas.

Walter Currell, Gem Theatre, Logan, Utah.

Mary Hayes Davis, LaBelle Theatre, LaBelle, Florida, and Clewiston, Theatre, Clewiston, Fla.

Read the reports of these showmen in the columns of the department.

THOROUGHBREDS DON'T CRY: Mickey Rooney—Packed them in on this one. In fact, many came back to see it the second time. Mickey Rooney was particularly outstanding in his role. A honey of a picture. Played February 23.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

YANK AT OXFORD, A: Robert Taylor, Maureen O'Sullivan, Lionel Barrymore—In this one, Metro shows that it is possible to make a picture in England that can be shown in American theatres, without the manager having to go hide in the office before the picture is over. Do not be afraid to show this one on your weekend dates, for it's a great picture that has none of the faults of the pictures we have been getting from the other side. My patrons said it was Taylor's best to date. Running time, 90 minutes. Played March 4-6.—Steve M. Farrar, Orpheum Theatre, Harrisburg, Ill. General patronage.

Monogram

BRIDE FOR HENRY, A: Anne Nagel, Warren Hull—A pip of a feature comedy with charming Anne Nagel back again for new honors. Due to brevity of feature it will likely find its way to a double feature program. But do not let that 58 minutes running time fool you. There's plenty of laugh dynamite packed into the footage.—Harry M. Palmer, Temple Court Theatre, Washington, Ind. General patronage.

PARADISE ISLE: Movita, Warren Hull—As delightful a picture as anyone could ask for. Lends itself excellently to exploitation including a Hawaiian front. In many spots will stand alone and in others worthy of top billing on double feature bill. Running time, 73 minutes.—Harry M. Palmer, Temple Court Theatre, Washington, Ind. General patronage.

ROMANCE OF THE ROCKIES: Tom Keene—Tom Keene is so sincere in the portrayals of his roles that he is rapidly regaining the prestige he allowed to lapse during that period of inactivity. This production shows care in preparation of script, excellent photography, and is a great relief from the westerns where the head cowboy lugs a "guitar" around with him wherever he goes. Running time, 60 minutes. Played February 25.—Harry M. Palmer, Temple Court Theatre, Washington, Ind. General patronage.

WEST OF RAINBOW'S END: Tim McCoy, Nora Lane—Good western. Hope the other Monogram-McCoy's are as good. George Cooper as "Happy" very good.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

Paramount

ARTISTS AND MODELS: Jack Benny, Ida Lupino, Richard Arlen—Some like it, some didn't. The rainmaker and his partner was the highlight of the picture. Not much story and badly disconnected, so it is hard for many to follow. Had average business for Sunday-Monday date. Running time, 97 minutes. Played February 13.—F. L. Clarke, Cozy Theatre, Hazen, Ark. Small town patronage.

BLONDE TROUBLE: Eleanore Whitney, Johnny Downs—Good average program picture that seemed to please. Can't report drawing power as I used it on my Cash Night. Running time, 67 minutes. Played February 23.—F. L. Clarke, Cozy Theatre, Hazen, Ark. Small town patronage.

BLOSSOMS ON BROADWAY: Edward Arnold, Shirley Ross—At this moment I do not know just which picture is going to win the motion picture award but I do know the winner of the worst picture of the year: "Blossoms on Broadway."—A. Goldson, Ideal Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

BORN TO THE WEST: John Wayne, Marsha Hunt—A fair western. The Zane Grey stories don't have any particular pull anymore. Did average business. Played March 2.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

BUCCANEER, THE: Fredric March, Franciska Gaal, Akim Tamiroff, Margot Grahame—Grand picture in any spot. Extra playing time. Good story, plenty action, classy produced, and what else could you want? Step on it; it's hot. Running time, 115 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Me. General patronage.

DAUGHTER OF SHANGHAI: Anna May Wong, Charles Bickford, Philip Ahn—Played this on a double bill with "Breakfast for Two" and did not expect much from it, but the audience comment was very satisfactory. The title, as so often happens, was very misleading. Producers should not indulge in such practices and expect complete satisfaction from the audience. A well made and directed mystery drama, with Ahn a top notch actor. Running time, 60 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

DOUBLE OR NOTHING: Bing Crosby, Martha Raye—A good picture that pleased everyone and did very well at the box office. Running time, 94 minutes. Played February 14-15.—W. M. Pinckard, Princess Theatre, Carthage, Tenn. Small town patronage.

HIGH, WIDE AND HANDSOME: Irene Dunne, Randolph Scott—This picture don't seem to click for some unknown reason. However, there is considerable action in it and the best spot for it is on the weekend. Bad weather cut our gross, but do not think it will draw much better than a program picture, though Paramount put plenty of money in it. Running time, 97 minutes. Played February 19.—F. L. Clarke, Cozy Theatre, Hazen, Ark. Small town patronage.

HOLD 'EM NAVY: Lew Ayres, Mary Carlisle—A dandy feature that did okay. The cash customers all liked it and enough of them came to make the box office statement cheerful reading. Played February 16.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

INTERNES CAN'T TAKE MONEY: Barbara Stanwyck, Joel McCrea—A slightly larger than normal attendance found this strong picture much to their liking. Played February 12.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

LIVES OF A BENGAL LANCER: Gary Cooper, Franchot Tone, Richard Cromwell—This reissue didn't do any business at all. Of course, it's a wonderful show. Stars fine.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

PARTNERS OF THE PLAINS: William Boyd, George Hayes, Gwen Gaze—Good. Not as good as many of his previous ones. His leading lady did not help the show. Not suited for westerns. Running time, 62 minutes.—P. G. Held and Son, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

SHE ASKED FOR IT: Wm. Gargan, Orien Hayward—Just another film that means absolutely nothing at the box office. Gets by as number two on a double feature. Played February 15.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

TEXAS TRAIL: William Boyd, George Hayes—Good western picture with plenty of action. Running time, 62 minutes. Played February 26.—Ouida Stephano, Grove Theatre, Groveton, Texas. Small town patronage.

THIS WAY PLEASE: Charles Buddy Rogers—Good program which failed to draw with extra advertising on the radio stars. Played February 12.—Mrs. O. A. Jensen, Silver Hill Theatre, Oshkosh, Neb. Small town patronage.

THIS WAY PLEASE: Charles "Buddy" Rogers, Betty Grable, Ned Sparks—Betty Grable, Buddy Rogers and a good cast made this one of the most entertaining pictures we have shown this season. As a cheer-upper Rufe Davis chases Ole Man Dull Care from highbrow and lowbrow equally. This inexpensive, unheralded little picture evens up a loss or two we have taken lately on much higher priced films, that didn't even make friends for us. I have just bought a dead small town movie which I am trying to resurrect, and believe me I know definitely a few small (?) things about village life and its reactions.—Mary Hayes Davis, LaBelle Theatre, LaBelle, Fla., and Dixie Crystal Theatre, Clewiston, Fla. Small town patronage.

Judy Canova, Ben Blue, Johnny Downs—This is a very pleasing comedy that I should have played two days. But had to use it on Bank Nite, sorry to say. Running time, 74 minutes. Played February 23.—W. M. Pinckard, Princess Theatre, Carthage, Tenn. Small town patronage.

THRILL OF A LIFETIME: The Yacht Club Boys, Judy Canova, Ben Blue, Eleanore Whitney—Absolutely perfect from every angle. The music is grand, the comedy great, audience reaction immense. What more could you ask for? Paramount has a great comedy team in Judy Canova and Ben Blue. More pictures like this will build the show business. Get behind it for all you are worth and clean up. Running time, 72 minutes. Played February 27-28.—F. L. Clarke, Cozy Theatre, Hazen, Ark. Small town patronage.

TRUE CONFESSION: Carole Lombard, Fred MacMurray—A very good comedy that pulled in a little more than average business. Played March 3.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

WAIKIKI WEDDING: Bing Crosby, Bob Burns, Martha Raye, Shirley Ross—Take one of Bing Crosby's best, add a dash of Martha Raye's hysterical antics, plus a drop or two of Shirley Ross's sweetness and a helping of Bob Burns' droll humor, mix all of this with four song hits the nation is singing, some Hawaiian dances, scenery, and musical background, and you get a Paramount cocktail that will entertain and amuse your movie patrons for an hour and a half. It's a little old, but it's good. Running time, 90 minutes. Played March 5.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

WELLS FARGO: Joel McCrea, Frances Dee—Paramount produced a real hit both at the box office and for the patrons. Good for any day and as much running time as possible in a small town. Played February 16-18.—Ike Hables, Reel Joy Theatre, King City, Cal. General patronage.

WELLS FARGO: Joel McCrea, Frances Dee—The best picture we have had in a long time. Box office good for conditions. Played February 20-23.—Mrs. O. A. Jensen, Silver Hill Theatre, Oshkosh, Neb. Small town patronage.

WELLS FARGO: Joel McCrea, Frances Dee—Correction: Done twice as much business as "You're a Sweetheart."—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

Republic

DUKE COMES BACK, THE: Allan Lane, Heather Angel—A pleasing picture of the action type, this one was made to suit the action fans and it will. A clean story, well acted and well produced and above the average in sound and photography for Republic productions. Running time, 64 minutes. Played February 25-26.—R. V. Rule, Gym Theatre, Beaverton, Mich. Small town and country patronage.

MELODY TRAIL: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—Business is always pretty good on these Autry pictures. He is well liked by the mass of the people. He doesn't appeal to the highbrows but their money is no better than the farmers'. Smiley Burnette always gets lots of laughs. Played March 2-3.—Lester H. Smith, Liberty Theatre, Quinton, Okla. Small town patronage.

PORTIA ON TRIAL: Frieda Inescort, Walter Abel—The poor recording spoiled an otherwise swell picture. Frieda Inescort as a woman attorney is grand, but you have to guess at about one half of the conversation because of the hollow talking in an empty room sound. Business below normal. Running time, 67 minutes. Played March 4-5.—R. V. Rule, Gym Theatre, Beaverton, Mich. Small town and country patronage.

PURPLE VIGILANTES: Three Mesquiteers—We consider this one of the poorest of this series we have ever had and I hardly think anyone liked this Hooded Horsemen Mystery Western. Running time, 56 minutes. Played February 25-26.—R. V. Rule, Gym Theatre, Beaverton, Mich. Small town and country patronage.

RED RIVER VALLEY: Gene Autry, Frances Grant—Gene Autry is tops here. Played this picture on a return engagement and packed the house. When Autry plays we sit back and smile. Although this is no outstanding hit, it makes a much bigger hit with my patrons. Running time, 6 reels. Played February 17-19.—Walter Currell, Gem Theatre, Logan, Utah. Small town and general patronage.

SPRINGTIME IN THE ROCKIES: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—Better than average from this pair. Business above normal and they liked this one. Too much credit is given to Autry in these pictures and too little to Burnette, because without the latter these westerns would be just another Western. Autry can be replaced but Burnette will still give the picture the punch that will put it over. Running time, 60 minutes. Played February 11-12.—R. V. Rule, Gym Theatre, Beaverton, Mich. Small town and country patronage.

WRONG ROAD, THE: Richard Cromwell, Helen Mack—Just ordinary program. Running time, 62 minutes. Played March 2-3.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

RKO Radio

ANNAPOLIS SALUTE: James Ellison, Marsha Hunt, Harry Carey—A very enjoyable picture. Something different in this one.—L. W. Krueger, Viking Theatre, Cranfills Gap, Texas. Small town patronage.

ANNAPOLIS SALUTE: James Ellison, Marsha Hunt—Good little program picture that pleased the majority. Running time, 65 minutes.—P. G. Held and Son, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

BIG SHOT, THE: Guy Kibbee, Cora Witherspoon—Good program. 'Way down at the box office, possibly because of counter-attractions during week. Played February 26.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

BREAKFAST FOR TWO: Barbara Stanwyck, Herbert Marshall, Glenda Farrell—Lively comedy drama with Stanwyck again demonstrating her ability in this type of a role. Herbert Marshall always good. Eric Blore sputtering around as usual, and providing many funny spots in the film. Good enough to stand alone. Running time, 64 minutes. Played February 27.—Harry M. Palmer, Temple Court Theatre, Washington, Ind. General patronage.

BREAKFAST FOR TWO: Barbara Stanwyck, Herbert Marshall—Another nice program picture by RKO for the small town exhibitor. Right up our alley and enjoyed by most of the audience. Stanwyck has lost none of her charm, but RKO should give her better material as she is capable of fine performance. Eric Blore is a knockout. Running time, 65 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

BRINGING UP BABY: Katharine Hepburn, Cary Grant—As Hugh Herbert would say, "Woo-Woo." This picture has got what it takes. Insane, delicious, delightful and goofy.—Happy Hasselo, State and Grand Theatre, Worthington, Minn. General patronage.

DANGER PATROL: John Beal, Sally Eilers, Harry Carey—Entertaining program. Gets by nicely. Running time, 60 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Me. General patronage.

DANGER PATROL: John Beal, Sally Eilers, Harry Carey—A very pleasing program picture; one capable of supporting the second half of a double bill in most theatres. You'll not be disappointed in this picture. Harry Carey is capable of pulling most any picture through. He is a troupier if there ever was one. Running time, 70 minutes. Played February 23.—Harry M. Palmer, Temple Court Theatre, Washington, Ind. General patronage.

DANGER PATROL: John Beal, Sally Eilers—Good program picture that drew quite well. Running time, 75 minutes.—P. G. Held and Son, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

FIT FOR A KING: Joe E. Brown, Helen Mack—As good a comedy as Brown ever made. This one is a knockout. Brown is one actor who shows he can put it across, no matter who his producer or director is. His bicycle ride and hayrack stunt is tops. Running time, 73 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

HIGH FLYERS: Wheeler and Woolsey—Despite the fact that this picture was somewhat of a let-down from previous pictures, we are all sorry to see the split of this comedy team. This community has always been more or less receptive to their pictures and it is with regret we witness the passing of another one of the original screen comedy teams. Running time, 70 minutes. Played February 20.—Harry M. Palmer, Temple Court Theatre, Washington, Ind. General patronage.

HITTING A NEW HIGH: Lily Pons, Jack Oakie, John Howard—I didn't think the picture was so bad, but it did not draw for me and did not please those that came, with the exception of a very few. Second night we ran to a practically empty house. Running time, 85 minutes. Played February 20.—F. L. Clarke, Cozy Theatre, Hazen, Ark. Small town patronage.

MAKE A WISH: Bobby Breen—Exceptionally good business on this one. By all means play it.—L. W. Krueger, Viking Theatre, Cranfills Gap, Texas. Small town patronage.

MEET THE MISSUS: Victor Moore, Helen Broderick—With the world mad about prize contests, this picture hits the nail on the head. Swell entertainment. Running time, 64 minutes. Played February 25-26.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

QUICK MONEY: Fred Stone, Dorothy Moore—A decided improvement over Stone's previous picture, "Hideaway." Homespun drama of the type that appeals to the midweek business.—Harry M. Palmer, Temple Court Theatre, Washington, Ind. General patronage.

RIDING ON AIR: Joe E. Brown, Florence Rice—This was one swell picture in every detail. Business was not quite up to standard but was no fault of the picture. It seems as though Joe E. always has a bunch of surprise gags that really click. He is always a favorite with the kids. Played February 25-26.—Lester H. Smith, Liberty Theatre, Quinton, Okla. Small town patronage.

SHE'S GOT EVERYTHING: Gene Raymond, Ann Sothern—Good program picture that did fair at the box office.—P. G. Held and Son, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

STAGE DOOR: Katharine Hepburn, Ginger Rogers, Adolphe Menjou—Only fair. No business due to bad weather, and back stage don't go over so good here.—L. W. Krueger, Viking Theatre, Cranfills Gap, Tex. Small town patronage.

THERE GOES THE GROOM: Burgess Meredith, Ann Sothern—Pretty good comedy.—P. G. Held and Son, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

"Swan Song," and I hope it will be Cantor's swan song as far as pictures are concerned. The box office was mistaken for the morgue. All the cash customers were Republicans, and even they did not like the picture. Played January 25-26.—Mary E. Lind, Ute Theatre, Rifle, Col. Small town and rural patronage.

ALI BABA GOES TO TOWN: Eddie Cantor, June Lang—Personally, I thought this was a swell production from beginning to end, but we had more unfavorable comment on it than any picture for a long time. Judging by this and other musicals of the same type I have come to the conclusion that people like more realism and less imaginary or fairy tale stuff. The gags in these musical comedies are sometimes old and silly. Played February 27-March 1.—Lester H. Smith, Liberty Theatre, Quinton, Okla. Small town patronage.

BIG TOWN GIRL: Claire Trevor, Donald Woods—A dandy B picture and one of the best in this group.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

CHANGE OF HEART: Gloria Stuart, Michael Whalen—Double bill caliber. Delmar Watson stole the picture; a homely kid that was the foil for the stars. Just a fair program picture; no raves, no kicks.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

CHARLIE CHAN AT MONTE CARLO: Warner Oland, Keye Luke—Not as good as some of the previous releases in this series. At best, the tag end of a double bill. No pull and patron reaction just fair. Running time, 71 minutes. Played February 18-19.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

CHECKERS: Jane Withers, Stuart Erwin, Una Merkel—The old perennial is with us again with the Number Six star as the lead. The picture is well produced and, of course, Jane does her stuff, ably supported by Stu and Una. Jane has been making personal appearances and I understand that she stepped out of bounds and irked Mrs. Temple with her take-off of Shirley. Funny business, this jealousy. Well, of the two, Jane holds her end up, and the rest of the cast are not subordinated to her, as they are with Shirley, not detracting from that little lady either.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

CHECKERS: Jane Withers, Stuart Erwin—Hit just the right spot with us. Can use a picture of this type every month or two. There seems to be a goodly crowd of patrons that enjoy this type of homey story, and I myself am one of them.—L. G. Tewksbury, Opera House, Stonington, Me. Small town patronage.

45 FATHERS: Jane Withers—Withers is a honey and can be counted on for extra business. She is making up for some of the other poor pictures released by Fox this season. Too bad she did not get a chance to step out in front a couple of years ago. Fox had a good bet in her but could see nothing but Temple. Running time, 71 minutes. Played February 20-21.—Mary E. Lind, Ute Theatre, Rifle, Col. Small town and rural patronage.

HANDY ANDY (Re-Issue): Will Rogers—Even the rain didn't keep 'em away. Will Rogers keeps his hold on the fans. Played a matinee for this, but most of them waited for the night performance. Played March 5.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

HANDY ANDY (Re-Issue): Will Rogers, Robert Taylor—Of all the reissues in this series, this was the first to make a showing at the box office. Played midweek to exceptionally good business and with all around splendid results. Running time, 82 minutes. Played February 9-10.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

HAPPY LANDING: Sonja Henie, Don Ameche, Ethel Merman, Cesar Romero—The sunny little prima donna of the ice still holds the public. A happy show with a good cast and Romero and Merain in the comedy roles.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

HAPPY LANDING: Sonja Henie, Don Ameche, Ethel Merman, Cesar Romero—This one was one of the best light pictures put out this year or any other. A clean-cut picture spoiled by the singing of "I'm Hot and Happy Because I Am In Love." I do not have a reformer's attitude, but why does a producer put out a good, clean-cut picture both for young and old and spoil it all for the manager of the theatre, who gets a lot of strong church-goers in because of the clean type of picture it is supposed to be, and then spoil it all by a cheap song like that and disgust them? Running time, 101 minutes. Played February 20-21.—B. J. Aylesworth, Lyric and Connelley Theatres, Eastland, Tex. General patronage.

HAPPY LANDING: Sonja Henie, Don Ameche, Ethel Merman, Cesar Romero—A "Happy Landing" for all exhibitors. Big time stuff; swell story. Extended running time in all spots. Bear down, McDuff. Running time, 101 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Me. General patronage.

HAPPY LANDING: Sonja Henie, Don Ameche, Ethel Merman, Cesar Romero—Third straight hit in a row from this little star. She is the only foreign star that ever made a cent for us. Beautiful star, beautiful production, beautiful cast, beautiful box office. What more could you ask?—L. G. Tewksbury, Opera House, Stonington, Me. Small town patronage.

HEIDI: Shirley Temple—This is the best Temple picture ever made. She may be slipping, but not here. This picture broke Temple house records. Let's have more. Running time, 88 minutes. Played February 28-March 1.—W. M. Pinckard, Princess Theatre, Carthage, Tenn. Small town patronage.

HEIDI: Shirley Temple—Very good. If we only had more like Shirley, small town exhibitors might live. Played February 8.—Mrs. O. A. Jensen, Silver Hill Theatre, Oshkosh, Neb. Small town patronage.

INTERNATIONAL SETTLEMENT: Dolores Del Rio, George Sanders, June Lang—Could have been much better and then, too, could have been much worse. That makes it just another picture and as such it did business to the extent it deserved and pleased to just about the same degree. Double bill it and let it go at that. Running time, 84 minutes. Played February 23-24.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

LANCER SPY: Dolores Del Rio—Midweek date. Not much to it. Played February 9.—Mrs. O. A. Jensen, Silver Hill Theatre, Oshkosh, Neb. Small town patronage.

LIFE BEGINS IN COLLEGE: Ritz Brothers—This created a lot of interest around town and I myself thought it very fascinating. A great variety of entertainment all the way through.—Ray Raeburn, Grand Theatre, Lemmon, S. D. General patronage.

LIFE BEGINS IN COLLEGE: Ritz Brothers—Ritz Brothers very silly but you can't expect anything else. They are supposed to be that way. Played this on Friday-Saturday and box office said OK.—L. W. Krueger, Viking Theatre, Cranfills Gap, Texas. Small town patronage.

LOVE UNDER FIRE: Loretta Young, Don Ameche—Good show. No business. Walter Catlett wasted in this.—Samuel Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

ROLL ALONG COWBOY: Smith Ballew—Not worth playing. Did not please and will not please.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Me. General patronage.

ROLL ALONG COWBOY: Smith Ballew, Cecilia Parker—Even the little kids could tell that he wasn't a real cowboy. Made the mistake of playing this with a western short subject which had riding and cowboy stunts that made the feature look sick. Played February 3.—Mrs. O. A. Jensen, Silver Hill Theatre, Oshkosh, Neb. Small town patronage.

TARZAN'S REVENGE: Glenn Morris, Eleanor Holm—When they make a poor one it is poor. A couple of amateurs that Fox was trying out on the dog.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

THANK YOU, MR. MOTO: Peter Lorre, Jane Regan—Entertaining program. Gets by nicely. Running time, 65 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Me. General patronage.

THIN ICE: Sonja Henie, Tyrone Power—Fine picture. Played too old to do business.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

THIN ICE: Sonja Henie, Tyrone Power, Joan Davis—This is great. Everyone pleased.—Ray Raeburn, Grand Theatre, Lemmon, S. D. General patronage.

WIFE, DOCTOR AND NURSE: Warner Baxter, Loretta Young, Virginia Bruce—This picture was well liked by about 95 per cent of our paid customers. Loretta Young and Warner Baxter make a swell team and those certain sentimental scenes were touched up just right to suit our hard-to-please lady patrons. Played February 20-21.—Lester H. Smith, Liberty Theatre, Quinton, Okla. Small town patronage.

WILD AND WOOLLY: Jane Withers—Good for weekend. Running time, 64 minutes.—Mrs. O. A. Jensen, Silver Hill Theatre, Oshkosh, Neb. Small town patronage.

WILD AND WOOLLY: Jane Withers—Be sure and play this one. It will perk up your gross.—L. W. Krueger, Viking Theatre, Cranfills Gap, Texas. Small town patronage.

WILD AND WOOLLY: Jane Withers—excellent attraction for this coming star. Hope Fox continues to give her good stories and support. She is getting quite a following, and this is what we need to keep our shows open. There is lots of comedy in this and a good story. The drawing power is way above average. Running time, 64 minutes. Played February 26.—F. L. Clarke, Cozy Theatre, Hazen, Ark. Small town patronage.

WILD AND WOOLLY: Jane Withers, Walter Brennan—Great entertainment along the line the small town patrons like. The incomparable Jane is ably supported by Walter Brennan, "Alfalfa" Switzer, Jack Searl and Berton Churchill and with plenty of excitement and comedy this one pleased them all. Running time, 64 minutes. Played February 23-24.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

United Artists

DARK JOURNEY: Conrad Veidt, Vivien Leigh—What a prophetic title. The patrons were in the dark most of the time as to what it was all about. Just a maze of scenes and dialogue stuck together with little regard for proper sequence and smooth story telling. Running time, 82 minutes. Played February 18-19.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

DEAD END: Sylvia Sidney, Joel McCrea, Humphrey Bogart, Allen Jenkins—The local chapter of the Moose Lodge supported this picture and helped me to put it over. It had everything, and the receipts more than justified the extra effort of selling it to the public. The audience reaction was enthusiastic. Running time, 93 minutes. Played December 28-29.—Mary E. Lind, Ute Theatre, Rifle, Col. Small town and rural patronage.

DODSWORTH: Walter Huston, Ruth Chatterton, Paul Lukas, Mary Astor—This is really a fine production. All dialogue and not draggy. The story is so human and well played that you have everything it takes to please an audience. Lots of compliments on this one. Don't forget good shorts for the kiddies with it. Played January 28-30.—Ruff Bros., Mainstreet Theatre, Logan, Kan. General patronage.

GAY DESPERADO, THE: Nino Martini, Ida Lupino—The only business we had on this one was the first night. Some didn't even stay for the whole show. Our people don't go for Martini's long singing, and the foreign language is hard to understand. Let's play pictures that people can understand. Played February 18-20.—Ruff Bros., Mainstreet Theatre, Logan, Kan. General patronage.

HURRICANE, THE: Dorothy Lamour, Jon Hall, Mary Astor—Guess everyone around here had been saving up for this one. At any rate, we were mobbed. Taking stock after the passing of the big wind and water spectacle, we found new records to shoot at in the future. Sure, it's a great picture. Patrons said so and meant it and we join in the chorus. Running time, 102 minutes. Played February 20-22.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

HURRICANE, THE: Dorothy Lamour, Jon Hall, Mary Astor—This picture is the biggest surprise I have played in a long time. I expected extra business, but had no idea how much extra it would do. I spent an extra half hour checking the cashier's report as I could not believe the record-breaking figures. The stars and direction were as near perfect as any picture I have ever shown. Count on this one to pep up a sick box office. Running time, 95 minutes. Played February 13-14.—Mary E. Lind, Ute Theatre, Rifle, Col. Small town and rural patronage.

HURRICANE, THE: Dorothy Lamour, Jon Hall, Mary Astor, C. Aubrey Smith—Terrific; the most spectacular storm scenes that have ever crossed our screen. It is a great picture, but we had a number of the ladies that could not take it. The way they lashed Terangi was terrible, apparently, and that is where they got weak hearts. You got to hand it to Goldwyn; he doesn't do things half way. Realism is his meat, and he had it plenty in this picture. The entire cast was great, all of them, and the picture did business, which, with this so-called recession, was very welcome.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia, Ind. General patronage.

HURRICANE, THE: Jon Hall, Dorothy Lamour—One of the most spectacular productions it has ever been my extreme pleasure to witness. The hurricane scenes are gripping in their intensity of drama. I watch a large house sit on the edge of their collective seat and grip the arm in tense emotional strain; then the wind subsided, they breathed a sigh of relief and settled back in their seats for the first time. The man who had the idea of the clanging bell deserves a sweet bonus check. It added atmosphere a plenty. Excellent! Running time, 102½ minutes. Played March 5-7.—R. D. Leatherman, Rialto Theatre, Denison, Texas. Railroad town patronage.

STAND-IN: Joan Blondell, Leslie Howard—I thought Howard did well in his part as a comedian. Blondell is a real trouser and turns in a good performance. I am not familiar with the story upon which this one is based, but my audiences commented that the story was far ahead of the screen play. I don't know myself. Running time, 90 minutes. Played March 1-2.—R. D. Leatherman, Rialto Theatre, Denison, Texas. Railroad town patronage.

STELLA DALLAS: Barbara Stanwyck, John Boles, Anne Shirley—Just a good program picture sold as a special. Anne Shirley steals the show. Barbara Stanwyck for some reason don't mean a thing any more at the box office. Business only fair. Running time, 111 minutes.—P. G. Held and Son, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

WALT DISNEY'S ACADEMY AWARD REVUE: Five Award Winners—This was a "honey." Our patrons just can't wait for the new Mouse and Symphony releases, so we repeat on all these cartoons. I spent a dollar for penny postcards and a couple of hours typing a short message, personally addressed to the mothers of small children, apprising them of the date of this all-cartoon revue. Also that we would play a matinee for them. Result, a packed house of mothers, fathers and kids, and the happiest audience I have ever seen. They loved every one of them.—Mary E. Lind, Ute Theatre, Rifle, Col. Small town and rural patronage.

WALTER WANGER'S VOGUES OF 1938: Warner Baxter, Joan Bennett—A beautiful picture. The best in color I have seen to date. A nice little plot, which keeps things moving along very nicely. We didn't do much at the box office, but it was no fault of the picture. Played January 16.—Ray Raeburn, Grand Theatre, Lemmon, S. D. General patronage.

FINE grain, solver of many a photographic problem, has finally overcome the problem of duplicating. Eastman Fine Grain Duplicating Films are capable of making "duplicates" that cannot be distinguished from originals. Now the original in the laboratory and the duplicate in the vault can be actually equal in quality. Eastman Kodak Company, Rochester, N. Y. (J. E. DUPLICATING FILMS

Universal

BLACK ACES: Buck Jones—The picture was satisfactory, but fell down at the box office. Played February 19.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

BOSS OF LONELY VALLEY: Buck Jones—Only a fair program western. Buck Jones is getting a little old. The usual good fight was lacking. Running time, 58 minutes.—P. G. Held and Son, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

BOSS RIDER OF GUN CREEK: Buck Jones—As good as any Buck Jones we have played, if not better than any of his pictures. Good Saturday western.—L. W. Krueger, Viking Theatre, Cranfills Gap, Texas. Small town patronage.

CALIFORNIA STRAIGHT AHEAD: John Wayne, Louise Latimer—Plenty of action here and pleased. Used this on a double program and was satisfied. Don't think it strong enough to stand up without other feature. Played March 4-5.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Sydney, Nova Scotia. General patronage.

CARNIVAL QUEEN: Dorothea Kent, Robert Wilcox—Poor. This is supposed to be a comedy, but for some reason it never gets started. Running time, 66 minutes.—P. G. Held and Son, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

IMITATION OF LIFE: Claudette Colbert, Ned Sparks, Warren William—Be sure and pick up this reissue and watch the shekels klink in the till. They came out crying. Even grown men had tears in their eyes. It's the best picture that has ever been played here. It built up the second night to capacity business.—L. W. Krueger, Viking Theatre, Cranfills Gap, Texas. Small town patronage.

MAN WHO CRIED WOLF, THE: Lewis Stone, Tom Brown, Barbara Read—This is a very good crime picture. Sixty-six minutes of good entertainment.—L. W. (Les) Krueger, Viking Theatre, Cranfills Gap, Texas. Small town patronage.

MERRY-GO-ROUND OF 1938, THE: Bert Lahr, Alice Brady—Supposed to be good, but don't expect too much. Advertise it for laughs and the customers will say it was good.—L. W. Krueger, Viking Theatre, Cranfills Gap, Texas. Small town patronage.

ROAD BACK, THE: Richard Cromwell, John King, "Slim" Summerville—This is the kind of picture that I and patrons go for in a big way. Give us more of these war pictures. A picture that gives us a timely warning. Let's hope it hits home. Business above average. Running time, 103 minutes. Played January 30-February 2.—Walter Currell, Gem Theatre, Logan, Utah. Small town and general patronage.

WHEN LOVE IS YOUNG: Virginia Bruce, Kent Taylor—This one is not so good. It will let you by if you use plenty of shorts. Played February 4-6.—Ruff Bros., Mainstreet Theatre, Logan, Kan. General patronage.

WINGS OVER HONOLULU: Wendy Barrie, Ray Milland—This one will go in any spot with several shorts to make the program longer. It moves fast and is well played. Played February 25-27.—Ruff Bros., Mainstreet Theatre, Logan, Kan. General patronage.

Warner Brothers

ANTHONY ADVERSE: Fredric March, Olivia de Havilland—Got the surprise of our lives when the crowd started piling in to witness this outstanding production, and want to say this picture made us more money than any other three specials put together, thanks to Vitagraph. Saw this picture was quite old and had a chance to book it reasonable, so booked it and went after it big. Results: drew big crowds and made good. Running time, 15 reels. Played February 15.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Sydney, Nova Scotia. General patronage.

BLACK LEGION: Humphrey Bogart, Erin O'Brien-Moore—This picture is quite old, so picked it up and drew big houses. Pleased all and heard many comments. Played March 2-3.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Sydney, Nova Scotia. General patronage.

EXPENSIVE HUSBANDS: Beverly Roberts, Patric Knowles—If the producers want to keep the public at home, they should produce a few more like this, and the "Octopus." When you get a pair like this, the exhibitor is wasting playing time. If you didn't know different, you would think that they were producing in a nut house.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

FOOTLOOSE HEIRESS: Ann Sheridan, Craig Reynolds—Very good picture. Our patrons liked this very much. Running time, 62 minutes.—P. G. Held and Son, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

KID GALAHAD: Edward G. Robinson, Bette Davis, Wayne Morris, Humphrey Bogart—If you want action in a picture, here it is. A knockout, just what the doctor ordered for the weekend. Drew big. Another surprise from Vitagraph. Advertising on this not so hot. What's the difference, if the crowd piles in and packs your house. Play it. Running time, 101 minutes. Played February 4-5.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Sydney, Nova Scotia. General patronage.

SLIM: Pat O'Brien, Henry Fonda—Very good and pleased. Drawing power fair. Guess the title kept many away. Nevertheless, did not lose money on the picture. O'Brien is well liked here and a favorite. Running time, nine reels. Played February 16-17.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Sydney, Nova Scotia. General patronage.

Shorts

Columbia

AIR HOSTESS, THE: Color Rhapsodies—Very good color cartoon.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

CITY OF THE GOLDEN GATE: World in Color—Very good. Running time, nine minutes.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

GOOFS AND SADDLES: Three Stooges—These boys are the hit of the show. Played this to a week-end audience and after the first hour found I was playing to a packed house. You will make no mistake when you book this one. Running time, 17½ minutes.—Walter Currell, Gem Theatre, Logan, Utah. Small town and general patronage.

GRACIE AT THE BAT: Andy Clyde—A top notch comedy. Will please. Running time, 18 minutes.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

OH WHAT A KNIGHT: Herman Bing—Our folks got a lot of laughs from this one. Running time, 18 minutes.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

Educational

BUGS BEETLE AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Terry-Toons—Average for these black and white cartoons.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

HOW TO DANCE THE SHAG: Song and Comedy Hits—Good. Be sure and play it. The young folks sure will advertise it.—Ouida Stephano, Grove Theatre, Groveton, Texas. Small town patronage.

MGM

BLUE MONDAY: Captain and the Kids—A very poor cartoon. Made in sepia brown, not color. No story, nothing, just slapstick. They will have to improve greatly before they will even satisfy.—G. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

BOSKO AND THE CANNIBALS: Harman-Ising—The poorest one of this series. Running time, 10 minutes.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

BOSKO IN BAGDAD: Harman-Ising—No good; a waste of time and money.—Ray Raeburn, Grand Theatre, Lemmon, S. D. General patronage.

FISHY TALES: Our Gang—Our Gang is there with the laughs, as always. Running time, 10 minutes.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

FRAMING YOUTH: Our Gang—Very good comedy. Running time, 11 minutes.—W. M. Pinckard, Princess Theatre, Carthage, Tenn. Small town patronage.

FRAMING YOUTH: Our Gang—This picture is the poorest Our Gang comedy we have run. Nothing to it and entirely too short. Just poor. Running time, nine minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

GLIMPSES OF PERU: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—These FitzPatrick travel talks are the leaders in travel series. Their coloring so far outshadows the others that it is quite noticeable. Very interesting and educational. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

JUNGLE JUVENILES: Pete Smith Specialties—A couple of chimpanzees and a baby make merry. Excellent.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

KING WITHOUT A CROWN, THE: Historical Mysteries—Only fair. Rather dull entertainment.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

KING WITHOUT A CROWN, THE: Historical Mysteries—The first of this series we have run and it is extra good. Interesting and educational. Not quite up to the Floyd Gibbons series of Warners, but a close second. Running time, nine minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

NATURAL WONDERS OF THE WEST: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—A fine colored travel reel. Visiting the National Parks. Very interesting and educational.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

NEW AUDIOSCOPIKS, THE: Special—I cannot say too much for or praise this one too highly. It was so far ahead of last year's edition that you forget it completely. I have never seen a more powerful audience reaction than I witnessed Sunday and Monday from a packed house on the unforgettable feature, "The Hurricane." These two fit together perfectly. Book 'em together. Running time, 7½ minutes.—R. D. Leatherman, Rialto Theatre, Denison, Texas. Railroad town patronage.

OUR GANG FOLLIES OF 1938: Musical Comedies—Very, very good. The best yet. Running time, 18 minutes.—Ouida Stephano, Grove Theatre, Groveton, Texas. Small town patronage.

PERFECT DAY, THE: Laurel and Hardy—One of the Laurel and Hardy reissues and a riot. Play it and give it your best time. Good slapstick comedies are very rare.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

well—I admit I was a little disappointed in this one. Usually, Metro gives us more to sell. I must give some credit to Miss Boswell for a good performance, but would comment that I feel that a few more as lacking in interest as this one would be rather hard to overcome in the audience's mind. Played with "Stand-In" Tuesday-Wednesday. Running time, 10 minutes.—R. D. Leatherman, Rialto Theatre, Denison, Texas. Railroad town patronage.

Paramount

BALL TOSSERS: Grantland Rice Sportlights (New Series)—Swell short on basketball. Running time, nine minutes.—W. M. Pinckard, Princess Theatre, Carthage, Tenn. Small town patronage.

CALIFORNIA GIANTS: Paragraphics—My idea of a short subject suitable to any program and any day of the week. Scenic beauty and pleasing style of presentation make it quite enjoyable. Was well received and drew favorable comments from a Sunday-Monday audience. I class these subjects far ahead of Travel Talks. Has little box office, but can be developed. Played this with "Man-Proof." Running time, 10 minutes.—R. D. Leatherman, Rialto Theatre, Denison, Texas. Railroad town patronage.

COWBOY SHORTY: Paragraphics—Pretty good. Running time, eight minutes.—P. G. Held and Son, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

COWBOY SHORTY: Paragraphics—Booked on Tuesday-Wednesday with "Stand-In." If other managers are of the same opinion as I, Shorty's days are numbered. He was okay at first, but I feel that the novelty of his shorts has worn off to my audiences he is now just another monkey. This one was as good as the rest. I am tired of the lot. Running time, 10 minutes.—R. D. Leatherman, Rialto Theatre, Denison, Texas. Railroad town patronage.

EDUCATED FISH: Color Classics—Good one-reel color subject.—Mrs. O. A. Jensen, Silver Hill Theatre, Oshkosh, Neb. Small town patronage.

FOUR SMART DOGS: Grantland Rice Sportlights (New Series)—Another Grantland Rice headliner. This short pictures a dog that retrieves fish, one who catches thieves, a pair of hunting dogs and finally a shepherd dog that brings sheep to the fold. It's odd and interesting and swell entertainment. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

FOXY HUNTER, THE: Betty Boop Cartoons—One of the best cartoons we have ever shown. Just a good picture for the kids. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

GOOD LOOKING WINNERS: Grantland Rice Sportlight with Ted Husing—Not quite up to standard. Careful, Ted and Grantland, don't slip now after the wonderful start you gave us. A little draggy and not enough action as we had before. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

IT'S A GOOD STUNT: Paragraphics—A thrill a minute in this short. Pictures daredevils of the air, human fly, fire-eater, man who crossed the East River on a cake of ice, an ax thrower, flagpole Kelly on top of an airplane, stunt men and others. It's a natural for any theatre. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

LET'S CELEBRATE: Popeye the Sailor—Popeye goes to town doing the shag. Running time, seven minutes.—W. M. Pinckard, Princess Theatre, Carthage, Tenn. Small town patronage.

LITTLE LAMBY: Color Classics—A good little colored cartoon enjoyed by all. Play it any day of the week. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

MAGIC ON BROADWAY: Screen Songs—Fair. Running time, nine minutes.—P. G. Held and Son, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

MEET THE MAESTROS: Headliners—Very good.—P. G. Held and Son, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

NEW DEAL SHOW, THE: Betty Boop Cartoons—Fair. These black and white cartoon comedies don't mean a thing any more. Running time, seven minutes.—P. G. Held and Son, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

PARAMOUNT PICTORIAL, NO. 3 (New Series): This Pictorial of Czechoslovakia and the colored sequence of the Southwest is very good. The showing of styles for women is entirely too long and spoils the entire reel. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

YOU TOOK THE WORDS RIGHT OUT OF MY HEART: Screen Song—One of the poorest Screen Songs we ever played. Can't give this one much credit. I'd skip this one next time. I used it with "Man-Proof," but was sorry of it. Running time, 10 minutes.—R. D. Leatherman, Rialto Theatre, Denison, Texas. Railroad town patronage.

I think your "What the Picture Did for Me" department is a big benefit for us small town exhibitors.

I have a 200 seat house in a town of 250 population.—
L. W. (LES) KRUEGER,
Viking Theatre, Cranfills Gap, Texas.

RKO Radio

DUMMY OWNER, THE: Leon Errol Comedies—A good Leon Errol comedy. Not his best, but okay.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

EDGAR AND GOLIATH: Edgar Kennedy Comedies—Good two-reel comedy. Running time, 19 minutes.—P. G. Held and Son, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

FROZEN AFFAIR, A: Condor Musicals—A dandy skating reel that will please all.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

HAWAIIAN HOLIDAY: Mickey Mouse—I am decidedly a Disney fan. Walt has always given us something to sell that we were sure would click. This one was up to his standard of all Disney subjects. Our audiences watch for his subjects like they do weather reports. They are the top money getter of all cartoons, no doubt. Weekend with "Everybody Sing." Running time, 9½ minutes.—R. D. Leatherman, Rialto Theatre, Denison, Texas. Railroad town patronage.

MARCH OF TIME, NO. 6: "Inside Nazi Germany, 1938"—Here is a short that will be brought back again for a repeat. Ministers, business men and the laymen all want it re-run for a special showing. A fine reel that every American should see. Tie it with your churches, schools, American Legion and business clubs. Running time, 18 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

MORNING JUDGE: Edgar Kennedy Comedies—One of the best Kennedy subjects I ever saw. Audiences liked it immensely. Sell this one along with your feature and I promise a big reception from any audience. We had this one with "Blossoms on Broadway" and were thankful we had something to offer since the feature decidedly did not please. Running time, 17 minutes.—R. D. Leatherman, Rialto Theatre, Denison, Texas. Railroad town patronage.

MORNING JUDGE: Edgar Kennedy Comedies—A nice little comedy that will help out on any program. No kicks and no comments. Running time, 18 minutes.—Walter Currell, Gem Theatre, Logan, Utah. Small town and general patronage.

MURDER IN SWING TIME: Condor Musicals—A very good single reel musical. Colored band and singing.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

RHYTHM WRANGLERS: Ray Whitley and Six Bar Boys—Here is a real reel. Folks stayed two shows so they could hear the hill billy music and see these boys perform. Come on, RKO, let's have some more of these. Running time, 20 minutes.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

TRAILING ALONG: Gene Austin—Good. Running time, 18 minutes.—P. G. Held and Son, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

BONE BENDER PARADE, THE: Adventures of the Newsreel Cameraman—Personally, I thought this the most tiresome and insane short I ever ran, and I think most of the ladies agreed with me. However, judging from the laughs, it pleased the masculine portion of the audience. Running time, 10 minutes.—Gladys McArdele, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

DUDE RANCH, THE: Magic Carpet Series—Good entertaining one-reel. Beautiful scenery.—Mrs. O. A. Jensen, Silver Hill Theatre, Oshkosh, Neb. Small town patronage.

United Artists

DON DONALD: Mickey Mouse—One of the best of the Mickeys. Played this second run in our theatre and it pleased.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

MICKEY'S RIVAL: Mickey Mouse—A very good color cartoon. Can be played any day of the week and please young and old.—Ray Raeburn, Grand Theatre, Lemmon, S. D. General patronage.

Universal

BARGAIN MATINEE: Mentone Musical Comedies—Terrible. Running time, nine minutes.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

MYSTERIOUS JUG, THE: Oswald Cartoons—A very fine Oswald and will please.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

STRANGER THAN FICTION: This series of single shorts might be classed with the news. There is very little difference, and while they are both educational and instructive, they could be improved by changing the music occasionally. We have heard this same music for the past three years and it gets tiresome. Running time, eight minutes.—R. V. Rule, Gym Theatre, Beaverton, Mich. Small town and country patronage.

Vitaphone

ALL AMERICAN DRAWBACK: "Charlie McCarthy," Edgar Bergen—Very good. Running time, 11 minutes.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

CLEAN PASTURES: Merrie Melodies—A swell cartoon and that's something.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

DAY AT SANTA ANITA: Sybil Jason—Very good two-reel color subject. Better than the other Sybil Jasons.—Mrs. O. A. Jensen, Silver Hill Theatre, Oshkosh, Neb. Small town patronage.

ENRIC MADRIGUERA AND ORCHESTRA: Melody Master—Ten minutes too short. One of the best band reels we have had from this company in several years. We felt that this series had been slipping badly, but this one lifts its head again and we hope they continue to improve. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

HOTEL A LA SWING: Broadway Brevities—A terrible sigh of relief from the audience when it was over.—Ray Raeburn, Grand Theatre, Lemmon, S. D. General patronage.

JAN RUBINI AND ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—Very good. Beautiful music.—Ray Raeburn, Grand Theatre, Lemmon, S. D. General patronage.

KICK ME AGAIN: Joe Palooka—Our audience fails to discover the humor in the "Joe Palooka" series. However, this one is worth playing.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

MYSTERIOUS CEYLON: Colortour Adventure—Fair.—Ray Raeburn, Grand Theatre, Lemmon, S. D. General patronage.

ONE ON THE HOUSE: Broadway Brevities—This is very funny and contains lots of entertainment.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

PICTORIAL REVIEWS, NO. 1: If the other five are like this one, it will be just a waste of time and patience seeing them.—Ray Raeburn, Grand Theatre, Lemmon, S. D. General patronage.

PIGS IS PIGS: Merrie Melodies—Very good. Running time, nine months.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. General patronage.

PLENTY OF MONEY AND YOU: Merrie Melodies—Smart colored cartoon. These never fail to make a hit with customers from six to sixty. Play it.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

PURE FEUD: "Charlie McCarthy," Edgar Bergen—Good.—This drew a little extra business.—P. G. Held and Son, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

Serials

DICK TRACY: Ralph Byrd, Kay Hughes—One of the best serials we have ever played. On the twelfth chapter and still going strong. This fellow Byrd seems to be the right type for this part. He is a smooth actor and is bright and alert. Too many other serials are ruined by some dumb cluck playing the title role. Running time, 15 chapters.—Lester H. Smith, Liberty Theatre, Quinton, Okla. Small town patronage.

Sharples to do Music Scores

Winston Sharples has resigned as managing director for Filmusic, Inc., to do a series of musical scores for Castle Films, Andre LaVarre and other producers.

Ross with Imperial

Nathan Ross, former salesman for Grand National in Boston, has been engaged by Harry Segal of Imperial Pictures of New England.

Paramount Plans National Campaign for "Jungle Love"

Paramount's forthcoming color release, "Her Jungle Love," co-starring Dorothy Lamour and Ray Milland, will be the subject of a national advertising campaign modeled after the campaign on "Ebb Tide." The campaign will utilize full back page ads in both the "American Weekly" and "This Week" in four colors, but in addition to the cities and papers served by these newspaper magazines, several newspaper color roto sections and national magazines will carry ads.

This general national direct-to-the-public campaign will be supplemented by a trade paper campaign in color patterned on the recent "Buccaneer" schedule. Special reproductions of these trade ads will be available as display pieces to theatres playing "Her Jungle Love."

Loew's Books Serial

What is said to be a record booking for a serial in the New York metropolitan area was given by Loew's this week to "The Lone Ranger," Republic, which will play in 60 of the circuit's houses. The serial will play with the regular shows in all situations. The first episode is holding a second week at the Criterion theatre in New York, along with the rest of the program.

St. Louis Law Closing Six

Six St. Louis, Mo., theatres which will require alterations before they can conform with the newly established safety regulations will be closed for 10 days to enable them to make the proper changes, it was said this week by Director of Public Safety George W. Chadsey. Mr. Chadsey did not divulge the names of the theatres affected. Thirty theatres have agreed to comply with the law.

Tri-Guild Affair in April

The Screen Actors, Screen Writers and Screen Directors guilds are planning a tri-guild dinner dance in late April. The arrangements committee consists of John Grey, Charles Brackett, James Cagney, Chester Morris and two others to be appointed by the directors.

Rushing Joins Monogram

Everett Rushing, formerly with Republic Pictures-Midwest, has joined Monogram as salesman for the southern Iowa territory. L. O. Ringler, Monogram franchise holder for Iowa and Nebraska, has moved to Omaha and will make that city his headquarters.

Baker Still President

George Baker, who recently resigned as manager of the Electric theatre in Kansas City, Kan., called a meeting of the Theatre Owners Association of Kansas City, Kan., for the purpose of resigning as president. The TOA refused to accept his resignation.

Solon S. Negranou, executive director of the 55th Street Playhouse, New York, since its reorganization in October, 1936, has assumed the post of managing director, succeeding Martin J. Lewis, no longer connected with the theatre.

The Brazil censor ban on "They Gave Him a Gun" has been lifted, after almost 60 feet had been cut from it and several translations had been changed.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

*An international association of showmen meeting weekly
in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress*

YOUR STAFF

Great progress has been made in recent years concerning the smooth functioning of theatre staffs. Ushers, doormen and cashiers are all usually carefully groomed; shoes shined, collars clean, uniforms properly pressed, etc. They are all generally well versed in the method of courtesy and service due patrons, also.

In their minds, you as the manager, are the "big boss", "the chief". We are of the opinion that theatre operation can be better attained by not stopping at the point of the appearance and service of a theatre staff.

Your crew is composed of humans. That they should regard you with the proper degree of respect is, of course, a prime requisite. However, we believe it a wise procedure to let these subordinates know that you notice them, and their work. An occasional pat on the back, a friendly smile or word, is bound to have an effect on them. Their work becomes more interesting to them; they hit a new high in efficiency.

Furthermore, records reveal that service staff meetings, held weekly by managers who encourage the idea of these people for exploitation, service, and other matters pertaining to the functioning of their houses, have been productive of excellent results.

These youngsters are not just automatons. They all have heads on their shoulders, and more often than not, with a lot in them.

NOTHING IS IMPOSSIBLE

Salutations to Manager Howard Burkhardt of Loew's State Theatre, Providence, Rhode Island, in the division of H. M. Addison.

Providence, with its narrow streets, stringent municipal laws and "tough to crack" newspapers, has long been a bogey for theatremen. Exploitation men have always approached an assignment to this city with a slight shudder and a prayer.

Street parades have always been forbidden there. Also, never to our knowledge has the State of Rhode Island extended a visiting star the honor of acting as Governor For a Day.

On a recent personal appearance of Judy Garland to his theatre, Howard not only arranged a parade, but had an 85-piece band lead it. Further, Miss Garland was afforded all the honors of State, and no less a personage than the Governor himself was on hand to greet her along with 7,000 other people, including the Mayor of Providence.

Burkhardt garnered reams of free newspaper space, in what we know from actual experience, are journals exceptionally cold to news of the theatre. He also arranged for Miss Garland to be recipient of the honor to sing at a High Mass, another feat which has never been accomplished in that city.

How did he do it? You better ask the gentleman himself, for frankly we don't know. What we do know, however, is that the accomplishments of Burkhardt prove one thing, as has oft been shown before; namely, if sufficient enterprise is properly applied, "It Can Be Done."

KIDDIES BRING ADULTS

Many managers throughout the country realize the importance of attracting children's trade. Special kiddies' morning shows, at which time extra "shorts" are shown, a wide variety of "clubs" for children, and numerous other noteworthy angles have been employed to increase this business.

It is our thought that merely getting these children into your theatre for the sake of the revenue it brings at the moment, is not all that is accomplished by their attendance.

Invariably, when a child returns home from the movies, his parents ask him what he had seen. Often the child does not wait to be asked. He is so enthusiastic he needs no urging to keep talking about it.

We have been shown that although the kiddies are not necessarily accompanied by an adult at any given performance, they serve as a splendid word-of-mouth advertiser for you. As such they cannot afford to be slighted; even though they may only be paying a dime to enjoy your presentations.

Let's Hear From You.

Round Table in Pictures

What proved to be a crowd-stopper was street gag used by Sam Gilman, Loew's, Harrisburg, Pa., for "Goldwyn Follies." Services of a local ventriloquist were engaged and man was planted on platform in front of theatre with Charlie McCarthy doll. Rapid-fire conversation, consisting of picture plugs, was engaged in. Below, tying up with leading local photographer, J. E. Poynter, Lido, Los Angeles, for "Awful Truth" used lobby easel on which were tacked ace photographs and "a perfect picture" tie-in copy.

Harry Storin, Paramount, Springfield, Mass., wove a practical exploitation gag from the old expression "fall in the aisles from laughter." As part of his "Bringing Up Baby" campaign, Storin planted pillows at head of aisles with copy to the effect that they were there for the convenience of patrons.

1937 Quigley Grand Award Winners

Jules Seltzer, publicity director for Warner Theatres in Philadelphia takes the 1937 Quigley Bronze Grand Award for his excellent campaign on Warner's "Emile Zola." Manager Maurice K. Gable, aided on the campaign. Mr. Seltzer won the monthly plaque last October. Arrangements are now getting underway for the presentation of these Grand Award plaques in Hollywood.

Shown at right is lobby display conceived by Manager Meyer Schutzer and assistant Phil Arbeit for "Flash Gordon" serial. Electrodes under 1-sheet emitted crackling sparks and replica of television receiving set was planted at side. . . . Below is shot of window secured by W. Fuchs, MGM exploiter in Stockholm for the opening of "Conquest."

To Ted Kirkmeyer, Rio Theatre, Helena, Montana, will go the 1937 Quigley Silver Grand Award plaque for his outstanding campaign on David O. Selznick's "A Star Is Born." Kirkmeyer took down the monthly plaque last July, which made his entry eligible for the Grand Awards. The winners will be transported to Hollywood early in May via United Airlines.

Attractive indeed is the lobby setpiece constructed for the opening of "Everybody Sing" at the Wilmer and Vincent Colonial Theatre in Allentown, Pa., by Manager Charles Bierbauer and his assistant Nick Todorov. Title and cast were done in flitter, as were cutout stars atop the entire display. Inserted in the display were oversize scene stills.

QUICK REPORTS FROM THE FIELD

Telephone Calls

Nice stunt worked by John McManus, Loew's Midland, Kansas City, and W. P. Bernfield, U. A. exploiter, on "Goldwyn Follies" was to have a boy call every dentist and physician's office in the city and tell them to keep their copy of Life on top of the magazine pile. This was the issue featuring the "Follies." Boy worked five days before opening on the job.

In addition Postal Telegraph's 20 branch offices had "Follies" windows with theatre credits; Jenkins Music a special window featuring the show's songs, etc.; Kresge's featured the Charlie McCarthy magazines in windows and the "Follies" music in the music department. Parkview Pharmacies (eight stores) had Max Factor windows tied in with the show. Several stores featured McCarthy dolls and Standard Brands used banners on each side of 16 delivery trucks as they toured the streets.

Coverage

As part of his "Boy of the Streets" campaign at the Granby Theatre, Norfolk, Leo Trainor paraded newsboys around town carrying sandwich boards with picture copy. Safety cards with "drive carefully, watch out for the boy of the streets" were tacked all over town and cards in shape of violation tickets were distributed, lower half of ticket contained merchant's ad which paid entire cost of the idea.

Papers were generous with their breaks, teaser ads were used week ahead, and serialization planted in the Norfolk Globe.

Radio Slants

R. T. La Marre, manager of the President, San Francisco, is having much success with his innovation "Questions the Audience Asks and Answers with Major I. Q. Ratings." This is a quiz type of broadcast from the stage, using members of the audience to compete for the cash awards. The questions are taken from those sent in by the audience.

La Marre is using the radio to reported great advantage for exploiting his theatre. He has a radio giveaway every Thursday night, a 15 minute news broadcast from the stage every week night and his Major I. Q. Rating each Sunday afternoon. The showman also expects to remodel his marquee and call the President "The San Francisco Theatre of the Air."

ISSUES "SNOW WHITE" SOUVENIR PROGRAM

Dignified and impressive is the fourteen page souvenir program printed on glossy stock and created for the premiere of "Snow White" by Manager Jay Golden at the RKO Palace Theatre, Rochester, N. Y.

Cover carried a message over signature cut of Walt Disney; fly leaf included picture copy and inside spread contained cooperating leading merchants' ads in addition to pages devoted to stories on various picture sequences with art work on the different animals depicted in the opus.

That's Cricket

With the powerful grip that cricket has on folks over in Australia, Alan G. Craft, Capitol Theatre, Mildura, Victoria, took advantage of its popularity and gave cash and consolation prizes for competitors most nearly estimating the team selected to go to England for the 1938 series of Cricket Tests. The 6d per entry went entirely to charity and the contest was tied in to his date of "A Star is Born."

Assistants Week

The Fox Topeka Theatres, Topeka, Kansas, recently conducted an "assistant managers' week" and assistants at each of the four theatres handled the entire managing job. The men were Ed Allison at the Jayhawk; Jessie Corbet, Grand; Albert Pokarek, Orpheum and Stanley Williams at the Gem. Lawrence Breuninger, Fox Topeka manager, offered two cash prizes for the best showing.

"Snow White Week"

Mayor John Boyd Thacher, Albany, N. Y., designated a "Snow White Week" as part of that campaign at the Fabian Palace Theatre there. Officials of the circuit distributed pamphlets to all school kids, blew up the Mayor's message on large billboards and placed them in libraries, department store windows, etc. School teachers cooperated by teaching the children the fairy tale and urging that all attend the showing.

Stories were run in all local newspapers, and leading merchants cooperated in celebrating "the week."

Teaser Ads

To sell "Stella Dallas" at the Kiowa Theatre, Hobart, Okla., Joe Stribling week ahead underlined his ads with short catch lines. Using a series of "action" pictures of man running with coattails flying and large grin on his face, headed by one word "okay," "come on," "let's go," etc. up to the last day of the ad which was a two column cut of the same man with lady holding his arm headed by the copy "everybody's going to see" etc., etc. One of these ads ran on each page of the paper.

Large trunks were placed in lobby ahead with signs reading "Her luggage has already arrived, 'Stella Dallas' will arrive Sunday." Telegrams were sent to bridge clubs reading "It is our pleasure to offer you an additional prize for your party. A guest ticket to 'Stella Dallas.' We hope the winner receives as much pleasure from seeing the picture as she did in winning your prize." Imprinted crying towels were distributed, Mrs. Roosevelt's comments on the picture were mailed to teachers and post cards mailed to a special list.

Mock Wedding

Reported as proving highly effective was Scott Robert's mock wedding of 12 year olds in connection with his opening of "Double Wedding" at the Comique Theatre, Camden, Maine. Advertising that there would be no advance in price, the theatreman announced a double wedding to be held opening night, inviting all who cared to bring gifts for the newlyweds. It wasn't until the show really got underway that the patrons discovered it was a mock wedding of kiddies, but Robert reports it went over very well judging by comments.

Kid Shows

Free tap dancing lessons is the Fox Theatre's latest attraction in Atlanta at their Saturday morning kiddie shows. In addition to the dancing lessons, given free from the stage by local dancing teacher, the shows include community singing, led by Homer Knowles at the organ console and well rounded screen fare.

An orchestra of boys and girls under 14 plays during intermission, and the shows have taken on so well that there is a reported attendance of approximately 2,000 kids each week since they started two months ago.

Theatremen Report

' Fargo ' Activities

From the Field

Through cooperation of the Dramatic and Public Speaking teachers of local high-school, David Dallas, Grand Theatre, Holdenville, Okla. had staged a 15 minute prologue in the chapel day ahead of opening. Dramatic script was obtained for use in this program with students coached by instructors and date at theatre thereby receiving plenty of plugs.

Through the local express agent, Dallas obtained old "Wells Fargo" express bills of lading, old handstamps, pads and other forms and pictures of the pioneer times of that city when all shipments were made by Wells Fargo, entire memorabilia used for a lobby display. Special feature stories of the agency with historical scene cuts of that day and people connected with the company were published in an edition of the Holdenville Daily News. Dallas further made talks before the highschool student body tracing the history of the motion picture and its progress and comparing it with the example as shown in the completed opus.

FREMONT, NEB.

Bill Mack at the Express Theatre celebrated "Pioneer Day," so proclaimed by Mayor Fred Dew, who received congratulatory wires from Bob Burns, Frances Dee and Joel McCrea for his cooperation. Box-office was converted into likeness of Wells Fargo ticket office and for lobby display, Mack planted large glass case containing relics of early days, including pony express stamp and case was backed with Navajo blankets to ceiling with hand painting of early express rider. Chamber of Commerce also devoted window display to relics; shoe stores displayed old riding boots, clothing stores, old time dresses and suits of the 1800's and leading restaurant a photographic display of cafe's progress since early days.

For his street ballyhoo, Bill promoted use of two Union Pacific model trains—streamliner and old freight, carrying "Wells Fargo" banners. Greeting ceremony for express rider was held in front of theatre with speeches by Mayor and oldest settler in county. Uniformed band greeted the rider and men on horseback dressed in western garb were included in the parade.

PECOS, TEXAS

Tying up local baker, Gene Hendon, Grand Theatre, promoted enough doughnuts to allow him to serve them free with promoted coffee which was served during engagement from an old "chuck wagon" in front of theatre, thus attracting the citizenry.

George secured the services of "Chief Red Thunder," typical Sioux Indian Chief to ride streets on pony in full regalia, copy on picture was imprinted on blanket covering horse. Entire front of house was converted into log cabin effect on which were planted scene stills and four-sheets. All music played over the public address system in front of house were old-time tunes and labelling week of showing "Pioneer Week," Hendon invited as his guests, all old-timers in the entire West Texas area as his guests to showing.

Newspaper Ad Aids

"Swing Your Lady"

Novel laugh contest helped the Norva Theatre, Norfolk, Va., draw business on "Swing Your Lady," with the theatre inserting an ad in a local paper reading as follows:

"Wanted—Norfolk's Four Champion Sour Pusses to attend a screening tonight of our huge all-comedy program opening tomorrow. Whoever they may be we don't believe they can sit through this show without laughing right out loud. We want the four gloomiest, cheerless, most despondent looking individuals in Norfolk! There are five dollars in it for each one of the four who completes the test!" As a result of the ad the theatre received 175 telephone calls.

Harrison Inaugurates

"Opportunity Nite"

When Ed Harrison, Opera House, Waterville, Maine, started his "opportunity nite" little did he expect that it would catch on so well that it would run for nine weeks. Advertising in advance that he would hold these shows each Monday night, Ed offered three cash prizes, first $10, second $5 and third $2.50 with a grand prize of $25.

Ed received enough entrants to last nine weeks. On the tenth week all the third prize winners appeared, the winner of this night appeared the following Monday night with all the second prize winners and the winner of that night appeared the following Monday night with all the first prize winners for the grand prize.

SPRING AND EASTER ACTIVITIES BEING PLANNED BY THEATREMEN

Elaborate Floral Exhibitions,
Easter Egg Hunts, Contests,
Style Shows, All Being Set
For Start of New Season

by JACK GOLDSTEIN

Round Tablers throughout the country have already signified elaborate plans for the coming Spring and Easter Season. Set down on this, and the following pages, are creative and ingenious ideas by managers designated to start off the new season with enthusiastic enterprise.

Representative of the many flower and fashion shows is that which is planned annually by Loew's Cleveland Theatres by publicity director Milt Harris, under arrangements made by division chief Col. Harry E. Long and Manager Everett A. Steinbuch of Loew's State Theatre. From District Manager Dick Wright of the Warner Ohio Theatres, comes an Easter Bonnet Contest which has been put over yearly by him with great results.

The Cleveland floral display, to occupy the entire center of the spacious lobby at the State Theatre is arranged with the cooperation of the Halle Bros. Department Store and the Cleveland Electrical League. An idea of the beauty and magnificence of this display may be had by the photo to the right of this page.

Harris reports that plans are being completed for a mammoth Loew's Scoring Hit Parade, announcing a flock of outstanding screen productions during the Spring season, via appropriate and attractive trailers on the screen, posters in the lobbies, decorative streamers in front of the theatre, etc. Potent selling qualities were incorporated in these ads. The streamers in front of theatre in conjunction with newspaper contest inviting the readers to name the last three pictures that the stars appearing in the Spring Season hits appeared in previous to these and who the leading man or woman was to play opposite them or co-star in the picture.

Also included among the energetic Loew's Theatre men campaigns in Cleveland is an egg-coloring contest for children in a tieup with the Cleveland Press. Children are asked to color eggs and send them to the promotion manager of the paper. The most colorful eggs are displayed in the window of one of the leading department stores along one of Cleveland's busiest streets.

For Easter Week a huge Spring style show is planned for one section of the lobby. This show is presented twice daily, one at 3 P. M. and the other at 9 P. M. One of the finest stores in town stages this show, furnishing mannequins, latest Spring creations and aids in lighting and decorating the platforms. Music is furnished by an electric victrola near the style-show platform and the space is roped off for spectators to stand and watch the show prior to or after seeing the regular screen show.

Contest with the Cleveland Plain Dealer has readers submit letters telling what they like for an Easter Gift, how they plan to dress and write of the origin of Easter.

GARDEN SHOW AND ELECTRICAL EXHIBIT IN LOEW'S STATE LOBBY

WINDOW DISPLAY FEATURING WRIGHT'S EASTER BONNET CONTEST

Other excellent Spring and Easter activities for the Cleveland Loew houses include an annual Easter Egg hunt in conjunction with a local newspaper. This is done in one of the large city parks. Prizes are promoted from merchants and guest tickets for Loew's Theatres.

Personal appearance of popular local woman harpist, playing appropriate Easter songs or music from the center of the gorgeous floral display in lobby has proven very popular.

At Loew neighborhood theatres several bunnies are displayed in the lobbies. The patrons are invited to name the bunnies and the winners receive the bunnies they have named. The bunnies are promoted from local pet shops.

The first 100 women attending the Easter Day matinee at all four Loew Cleveland Houses receive an Easter Rose or Easter Lily in a tieup with the Cleveland Florist Association.

Dick Wright in Ohio reports that his annual Easter Bonnet Contest proves to give him more space in the newspapers than any other contest. This idea is to tie in with a local department store in the search for the funniest old-fashioned Easter Bonnet that might have once been the last word in fashion.

Contestants are instructed to bring their entries to the store and register them at a specially provided booth. Ten days before Easter a committee of judges will select 12 hats that strike them as being the funniest. These are then displayed in the window of a prominent store, a week before Easter. The store to further interest the public, invites them to pick from these hats the one which they consider the funniest and tell in 25 words why they made their selection. Photo on this page illustrates window display.

On Wednesday night preceding Easter, announcements of the winners of the window contest and presentation of the prizes takes place from the stage of the theatre. A complete Easter outfit for the lucky woman winning the first prize is awarded with various accessories as prizes for the runners-up.

Department store benefits from the tieup by pulling people inside its store for the "Old Bonnet" registration. Theatre benefits by additional patronage on one night during Holy Week when the winners are determined, plus the tremendous amount of publicity received. The store publicizes the contest through the mediums of paid up newspaper space, radio, store's own shopping circulation and window displays in festive attire.

Wright has a new twist to this Easter Bonnet angle. The idea is a contest for designing hats for women. A drawing of one of the women stars appearing in current pictures is submitted and contestants are asked to design a hat which in their opinion will be most becoming to the drawing opposite. They may use any color they like or as many colors as they choose. Apart from the hat contest it is possible to submit a sketch asking contestants to fill in with a dress which the contestant would like to wear, preferably a party dress suitable for all around use. Tieup could include prize of choice of dress from one of the leading department stores.

Wright's district is concentrating on their bookings for the week of April 10th. This is the week that most of the kiddies in his sections are out of school on spring vacation, and bookings are made of attractions which will have a special appeal to them.

Radio home talent broadcasts from the theatre stage, kiddie Popeye shows, tieups for benefit of ticket shows with women's organizations, are all factors that boost receipts for Wright's Ohio district.

Rabbit Matinee to Be Repeated by Limerick

On Saturday morning previous to Easter Sunday, George Limerick, Yale Theatre, Cleburne, Texas, will have his annual live rabbit matinee for kiddies. At this time a special kiddie show will be held in connection with the giveaway of about 30 live bunnies to holders of lucky numbers. In addition every child attending the show will receive a prize of some nature—candy, toys, etc. George reports that last year approximately 1,000 kids attended the morning show, which is advertised week ahead. In front of theatre in cage with proper copy, the bunnies are displayed.

SPRING COTTON FROLIC CLICKS FOR LIMERICK

Style show which George Limerick says appeals to the masses will be held at his Yale Theatre, Cleburne, Texas, with local department store cooperating. Few nights ahead of Easter Sunday what he labels a "spring style show and cotton frolic" will get underway. The presentation of this show is unique in that only garments made out of cotton are shown and no garment displayed sells for more than $3.00 Merchant plugs the show in the store and in newspaper ads and Limerick cooperates with lobby, program and herald mentions.

Egg Rolling Contest Stressed in Boston

From the steps of the State House in Boston to the bandstand on the Common is the route laid out by Joe PiPesa, publicity director of Loew's Theatres there, with the kids rolling eggs for promoted prizes. Gag is tied up with the Boston newspapers and has the cooperation of State officials.

Mothers' Day, which always offers angles for tieups finds DiPesa distributing carnations to the first 100 mothers attending matinee at Loew's State. Cooperating florist is supplying the blooms. And not forgetting the men on Fathers' day, this showman has arranged for the distribution of 300 cigars, though we can't quite figure out why the men rate 200 more gifts than the ladies.

Through tieups with local fur house, a fashion parade will be held on stage with audience selecting the most perfect model. This contest is sponsored jointly by the theatres and newspapers. Not overlooking the opening of the local baseball season, arrangements have been made for the distribution of season's schedule at both parks inscribed with institutional theatre copy. Lobbies will be dressed in new Spring garb, advance trailers will carry copy and editorial comment on new season product will be planted with local dailies.

Reported as one of the best Spring gags is theatre's entry of two runners in the annual B.A.A. Marathon, which is said to be the running classic of the East. All runners get their official numbers, which are pinned on front of their shirts and on their backs they carry the inscription "We're running to see Joan Crawford in Mannequin at Loew's State and Orpheum." The boys are viewed by approximately 250,000 persons along the route of the run.

All campaigns were put over under the supervision of Division Manager H. M. Addison, with Fred Greenway, manager of the State and George Jones, manager of the Orpheum assisting.

Dannenberg Inaugurates Search for Talent

Unique and surefire box office is the Search for Talent contest conceived and executed by Sid Dannenberg, Advertising and Publicity Director for Warner's Ohio zone theatres, and sponsored by Station WTAM.

As reported by this dynamic showman, the details are: Local auditions will be held one night each week in all Warner towns for a period of three weeks. The weekly winners will compete on the fourth week for the big finals, which will be staged as follows: Each town presents one winner. If, for example, there are eight towns, eight winners will be formed into a unit and will play each one of the eight, where the audience will, by applause, decide their final choice.

The contestant showing the greatest popularity with the audiences (as indicated on an applause machine) will be awarded first prize, which will be an audition at Radio City and a screen test at the Warner Brooklyn Studios. Newspaper stories with art, are of course run ahead and daily during entire course of the contest.

Still another outstanding activity in the Ohio zone is their "sales-drive-for-bigger-grosses" contest, which will be based on the best results by any individual manager against a quota figure during the present quarter. As first prize, Nat Wolf, zone manager, is offering a trip to California, all expenses paid, and a cash prize of $250. The second prize will be a trip to New York and $200, in cash. The third and fourth prizes will also be cash awards.

Easter Day Parade Arranged by Charninsky

Another theatremen to plan a "mixed" style show on his stage is Louis Charninsky, Capitol Theatre, Dallas, Texas. On Easter Sunday at both the matinee and night shows, Louie will have his Easter parade in which both the local women and men will have a chance to display the latest sartorial habiliement. Local celebrities will act as judges and the winners presented with prizes promoted from cooperating merchants. Winners' pictures will be run in papers.

This Spring, Charninsky is scouting around for a boy and girl who intend getting married during the holidays. Tying up with the Dallas Dispatch and local merchants, the couple will be "hitched" on the Capitol stage and presented with food, clothing, furniture, etc., secured from the cooperating stores. Search will start immediately, with stories running in the Dispatch on the progress of the theatremen in finding the proper couple.

A special booking schedule has been arranged for the month of March which is labeled "The March of Spring Hits." This booking schedule is publicized in the newspapers, in the lobby and with a de luxe trailer. The theatre itself will be given a Spring-like atmosphere by decorating with promoted artificial flowers and vines.

BUNNIES TO BE GIVEN AS PRIZES

Man-on-Street Idea To Be Used by Dinerman

For Easter Sunday, E. V. Dinerman, director of advertising and publicity, RKO Theatres, Cincinnati, is planning on using a "man-on-the-street" gag, with microphone in lobby of the Palace Theatre to interview well-dressed passersby. Tickets will be given to those who agree to be interviewed.

Another slant which Dinny expects to use will be a newspaper contest for the 10 best decorated eggs done by school children, with prizes offered by the theatre and tied in with the most likely picture booked for that week. For lobby display, an Easter Greeting sign-board, signed by all the stage ensemble of the Shubert Theatre will be addressed to the City of Cincinnati.

Another highlight of the campaign planned by this theatremen will be what he calls a "Spring Success Night" with the Mayor acting as master of ceremonies and dedicated to the forward moving spirit of the Queen City of the Midwest. A spring fashion show will also be held and sponsored by the town's leading department store on the stage of the Shubert.

Bunny Easter Parade Planned by Smith

Reported as surefire boxoffice at the Paramount, Hot Springs, Ark., is Clyde Smith's tieup with dancing schools to present pupils in a "Bunny Easter Parade" on theatre stage. Tots present a short play which is labelled a "Bunny Revue" and Smith usually works up a nice cooperative page in connection with the show, tying in with florists, costumers, etc., etc.

Another tieup which Clyde plans is a style show in which local society girls and prominent men of the city act as models. Stories are run in paper, local orchestra which has been promoted supplies the music and the usual cooperative ad pages and extensive selling campaigns are to be used.

Through tieup with local florist, an attractive horticultural lobby display is planned, with Hot Springs Garden Club cooperating, assuring the theatremen of newspaper breaks. An attractive lobby display of promoted rabbits and chicks together with promoted candy Easter eggs will be used by Clyde, the eggs to be given to the children as prizes. Art work with Easter atmosphere and decoration shall be employed.

Bicyclists Plug "Yank" for DiPesa

For the opening of "Yank at Oxford" at Loew's State Theatre, Boston, publicity director Joe DiPesa admitted as his guests the first fifty bicyclists under sixteen years of age who rode to the theatre on their bikes, which were properly bannered with picture copy. Thus did the showman insure a moving advertisement for the date as part of his advance ballyhoo. Another gag was chap in college cap and gown who rode through the principal streets of town, copy tying in with the opening.

LEIGHTON DISTRIBUTES BASKETS TO NEEDY

Figuring that there are just as many needy kids at Easter as there are at Christmas, Bert Leighton, Grand Theatre, Lancaster, Pa., has arranged with head of city's policewomen through cooperation of the Kiwanis Club for the distribution of baskets to be gathered from patrons and all other folks anxious to contribute.

Bert will arrange a huge Easter basket in lobby with large rabbit as the receiving station for the foodstuffs, girl in attendance getting names and addresses of those requesting donations.

Easter Egg Hunt Will Be Staged by Saunders

One hundred papier-mâché eggs, each containing a guest ticket for current show, will be buried in Bridgeport's largest park by Matt Saunders, Loew's Poli Theatre staff. Additional eggs will contain bright new pennies and the school children of the city will participate in the hunt, which will be announced in advance. The Times-Star, sponsors the Annual Easter Egg Hunt and thus Saunders receives a great amount of free publicity. Last year there were front page breaks daily for one week prior to the event and the hunt itself will exploit the theatre's current attractions with the art and stories.

Matt says the idea involves city officials and creates enthusiasm throughout the city from which the theatre reaps abundant goodwill.

Monster Easter Egg Hunt in Rochester

An annual affair conducted most successfully by Les Pollock, Loew's Rochester, Rochester, N. Y., is his Easter egg hunt, sponsored by the Rochester Times-Union and for which cash and ticket prizes are awarded youngsters.

All children entering contest must fill out and bring to the hunt, coupon run in paper and only those wearing the official egg hunt tag are eligible for the prizes. Hunt was and will be held in leading park with grand cash prize going to the youngster who locates the golden egg. Stories are run in paper together with art work of theatre staff shown coloring the eggs; winners' pictures are also run.

Window Broadcast Sells Leighton's Easter Show

Week ahead of Easter, Bert Leighton, Grand Theatre, Lancaster, Pa., will plant a trio from local radio station in window of leading store to put on a broadcast. Store pays for the radio time, station gets special plug and Bert gets theatre and attraction credit for giving the merchant idea of drawing crowds to window for Easter bargains.

Bunny Show in Lobby Offered by McBride

Offered yearly by Ed McBride, Loew's State, Syracuse, is his lobby display consisting of a platform with fence around, inside of which are live bunnies with many colored Easter eggs around. In center of the pen is a house built with openings on all sides permitting the rabbits to enter. Potted lillies and other blooms are displayed and bottom of pen is draped with cheap bunting in Easter colors.

Tying in with local paper, McBride intends repeating his egg-rolling contest which is held in city park. Theatre furnishes colored eggs to children, with prizes going to kids rolling eggs farthest distance without breakage. Prizes will also be offered to youngsters bringing most attractive basket of colored eggs; local boys' bands play during contests and flashes are made by local cameraman for showing on screen following week.

Deerings Sells Theatre Air Cooling Plant

Along about this time of the year, Francis Deering, Loew's Theatre, Houston, Texas, starts his campaign to plug the formal opening of his cooling plant. In return for a lobby showing of new styles in electric refrigeration and air conditioning systems, the cooperating newspaper publishes a special section of from eight to twelve pages, fifty per cent of which is devoted to publicity on the theatre's summer bookings. A thirty-minute radio program is broadcast each day from the lobby during this "air conditioning" show.

By Easter time it is usually pretty hot down in Houston, so Deering takes the holiday occasion to break his entire force out in their summer uniforms—white tuxedo jackets with black trousers. The theatre interior, lighting, decorations and furnishings take on their summer time hues of greens and blues.

Francis also plans a candid camera gag for Easter Sunday, giving suitable prizes in the names of the stars appearing in his Easter picture, to the best dressed man and woman in the Easter parade. And, of course, this showman expects to have the usual Easter egg hunt which has been an annual affair these past five years.

Attractive Lobby Featured by Troups

In New Orleans, Rodney Troups at Loew's State will have a large Easter egg planted in his lobby. Measuring about five feet in length, made of wire and plaster, highly colored and spotted with metallics, the center of the egg on its broadside will be broken to show three chicks emerging. Center chick holds suspended from its beak a card carrying star and title of picture which is to be the Easter attraction. Two end chicks hold a long ribbon draped around front of egg with copy reading "Easter brings joy and happiness to the world—Loew's, too, brings joy and pleasure to its patrons by presenting," etc., etc.

*Lyda Roberti Dies;
Rites in Hollywood*

Funeral services for Lyda Roberti, who died of a heart attack in Hollywood Saturday, were held Tuesday at Forest Lawn Cemetery there. Miss Roberti was 32 years old. She was the wife of Hugh Ernst, who was at her bedside when she died.

Miss Roberti was born in Poland. She came to this country by way of China, where she was stranded when her father's circus broke up. Her father was Roberti, a well known European circus performer. Miss Roberti appeared on the musical comedy stage and then went to Hollywood, where she was featured in "Dancers in the Dark," "Million Dollar Legs," "Three Cornered Moon," "College Rhythm," "The Big Broadcast of 1936" and "Torch Singer" for Paramount; "The Kid from Spain," United Artists, and "George White's Scandals of 1935," for Fox. She was last seen in two reel comedies produced by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, in which she was co-featured with Patsy Kelly.

Melville Stoltz

Melville Stoltz, pioneer theatre man, died in St. Louis March 9th at the age of 79. He was the former manager of the Shubert-Jefferson and American theatres there.

J. F. Howard

J. F. Howard, 71, prominent in theatre business in Wilmington, N. C., since 1906 died there last week. He successfully established the Bijou, Grand, Victoria and Royal theatres. At one time he operated all four, besides conducting the old Academy of Music.

Milton J. Winn

Milton Jay Winn, manager of the Osage, Kansas City, Kan., died there March 7th. Mr. Winn was a brother-in-law of R. R. Biechele, secretary of the Kansas-Missouri Theatres Association and chief barker of the Variety Club.

FLEXIBLE PARTICIPATION LOTTERIES, by Francis Emmett Williams. St. Louis: Thomas Law Book Company. 6 x 9. 414 pp., and index. Price $7.50.

The author sets out to make a case against flexible-participation lotteries such as "bank night" and kindred prize-drawing schemes, as used principally by motion picture theatres, and his presentation is quite complete. Their legal existence, he concludes, "are without actual foundation either in reason or fundamental authority and are contrary to the statutes."

The term, "flexible participation," is coined to include all those lotteries in which the rules permit non-cash patrons to participate along with cash patrons, in the distribution of prizes, distinguishing the flexible-participation game, as used by theatres, from the closed-participation type where the game is limited to cash patrons.

While the author gives some attention to "every argument either for or against" the legality of flexible-participations, citing 200 cases and 100 miscellaneous authorities, the evidence he presents is preponderantly against the practice, representing a virtual "expose" of theatre games "which have exacted millions of dollars from theatres throughout the United States upon representations that were not true."

Mr. Williams calls upon the American Bar Association to state its attitude with respect to those attorneys who devise, project and promote "lottery schemes and devices for the purpose of defying, defeating or evading the anti-lottery laws." In order to "guide" both Bar and Bench out of the "great confusion" over the legal complexities of chance games, he presents in his book documentary evidence in some 21 chapters, running from "The Origin and Spread of Lotteries," in chapter one, to "Reasons for Anti-Lottery Legislation" in chapter 21.

The author has been interested in a number of lottery cases, about eight of which have found their way to the Supreme Court of Missouri. He has also assisted in several lottery cases in other states and his briefs on "bank night" have had wide circulation.

In an accompanying explanation, the author says that his early investigations were made on leads found in the news reporting of chance game court cases as appearing in MOTION PICTURE HERALD.

Basically, Mr. Williams, a member of the St. Louis Bar, prepared his thesis "to provide public officials with all the legal authorities available in the prosecution of flexible-participation cases," and "to arm the business man (including exhibitors) with an effective weapon against his lottery-using competitors," and "to show that the flexible-participation lottery is the greatest hoax ever perpetrated upon the American Bench and Bar." This he has accomplished in as complete and documented a fashion as any of the many treatises on chance games published to date. Particularly interesting is his compilation of anti-lottery provisions in the United States and Canada, arranged alphabetically by states, an alphabetical arrangement of the 200 lottery cases cited, and an alphabetical listing of the 100 miscellaneous authorities.—J. P. CUNNINGHAM.

Seek Bankruptcy Writ Against Chesterfield

RKO Radio Pictures, Inc., RCA Manufacturing Company, Inc., and Smith and Aller, Inc., this week filed a petition seeking to force Chesterfield Motion Picture Company, headed by George Batchelor, into involuntary bankruptcy. The Federal court petition, filed in Los Angeles, alleged that total debts of the company are $50,000 and that Chesterfield owes the plaintiffs more than $15,000.

Toddy Files Answer To Injunction Suit

Ted Toddy this week in Atlanta, Ga., formally answered an injunction suit brought against him by Selznick International Pictures, Inc., to halt production of his proposed travelogue under the title, "Gone With the Wind Country."

He claims that a travelogue has no characters, plot or climax, and, accordingly, would be no infringement on the rights of Margaret Mitchell, authoress, and Selznick. He further said that the novel is a masterpiece of literature which has caused the section between New Orleans and Baltimore to be known as "Gone With the Wind Country."

Wagner Sign Service Sues

Charging patent infringement, Wagner Sign Service, Inc., has filed suit against Adler Sign Letter Company and Ben Adler Signs, Inc., in United States district court in Chicago. It is charged that two forms of Adler signs infringe on a Wagner patent granted July 21, 1936, on an application dating back to February 16, 1934.

Grauman's Wins Tax Decision

The United States Board of Tax Appeals this week ruled that Grauman's Greater Hollywood Theatre, Inc., does not have to pay $15,204 on 1933 income tax and $5,216.35 in excess profits tax for 1933.

Regan Sues on Salary

Phil Regan has filed a suit in superior court in Los Angeles seeking $18,000 from Republic charging breach of contract. The actor claims that under an option agreement he was to star in four pictures this year at $9,000 per picture, that he made two of them and was then discharged from the studio.

Loew's Decision Reserved

Decision was reserved by Justice Aaron J. Levy on a motion made this week by Loew's, Inc., to consolidate the six stockholders' actions against directors and officers of the company for alleged acts of "mismanagement, waste and extravagance."

Win Plagiarism Suit

A superior court of Los Angeles jury this week awarded a judgment of $10,000 against the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio and Loew's, Inc., to Henry Barsha and David Weissman, writers, who had charged plagiarism in situations and dialogue in the Marx Brothers film, "A Day at the Races." Charges against the Marx Brothers has been dismissed.

THE RELEASE CHART

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parentheses after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1937-38 season.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

J. C. JENKINS—HIS COLYUM

Neligh, Nebraska

Dear Herald:

Don Bloxhom of Sioux City, Iowa, writes us a very congratulatory letter on the anniversary of our advent into this country. Among other things, Don says, "Although I have never met you," etc., etc., and to this we might add that Don hasn't missed a whole lot. Don says he is taking a course in Morningside College and is assisting Mr. Hilton in the operation of the Park theatre. Don says also that he has been following our ramblings through this Colyum for a number of years, and to this we might also add that if he would pay closer attention to his textbooks and less to this colyum it might gain him a higher marking on his grade papers. Thanks, Don, for your kind congratulations.

We have been in a number of states having towns named Battle Creek. Battle Creek, Michigan; Battle Creek, Iowa; Battle Creek, Nebraska; Battle Creek, Wyoming; Battle Creek, Oregon, and Joplin, Missouri. From Battle Creek, Iowa, comes a note from J. D. Warnock of the Luna theatre asking us to have his subscription to the HERALD renewed. Yes, sir, J. D., you betcha we'll do it. Thanks.

From over at Neola, Iowa, comes a card of congratulations from "Brown" (as they call him in Omaha) and his mother, who operate the Phoenix theatre. It pleases us very much to receive best wishes from such good friends.

Just 80 years ago we made our official debut into Michigan high society, attired in nature's most elaborate costume. Just previous to that event the Pottawatomie Indians had relinquished their claim on that territory and the invaders had built the Michigan Central railroad and a few school houses, and, we have been told, one could get a pretty good grade of lick for what a revenue stamp would cost now. Just look at Michigan now. She has Henry Ford and Senator Vandenberg besides Ypsilanti, Pokagon, the Beckwith stove works at Dowagiac and Bert Silver at Greenville. Gosh, how that state has forged ahead since we left. Today we are receiving congratulations from our theatre friends from all over the country. Mr. and Mrs. George Moore of Plainwell, Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Potter of New Hampton, Iowa, C. M. Hartman of Carnegie, Oklahoma, Mr. and Mrs. —, but there are too many to name. There was besides a long letter from Mildred Early of the HERALD office in Hollywood, but say, Mildred, 'member that time we got lost in Hollywood and you hunted us up and found us down at the stockyards looking at the pigs? It's a pleasure to receive congratulations from these very dear friends, and we trust this will serve as an acknowledgment.

*"When Freedom, from her mountain height,
Unfurled her banner to the air,
She tore the azure robes of night
And set the stars of glory there."*

And to this we might add this little aromatic touch, as—

*When old man Jones went out one day
To view his backyard, green and fair,
He told the crew of the W. P. A.
That they could build his outhouse there.*

Then here comes a bunch of telegraphic congratulations from our theatre friends from all over the country, such as Sherm Fitch of Sioux Falls, S. D., E. V. Delaney

E. T. McCarthy of the Orpheum theatre at Fergus Falls, Minn., sends us a check and asked us to have his subscription to the HERALD renewed. He also says he has been hugging the fire pretty close up in that cold and ice country this winter. We might suggest to E. T. that he can catch 'em through the ice up there if he can leave the radiator long enough.

Our fair board is going to cut out auto races and several other features and put in pony races, and we'll miss Cy Buck's hoss, "Old Stormy," but if Bob Burns could induce his grandpa Snazy to come up to this "gateway to the west" and put on an act, everything ought to come out all right.

We've got four granddaughters, lovely girls, Gertrude Merriam of the Round Table department of the HERALD, Regina Mulsted, secretary of the Film Board at Omaha, Mildred Early with the HERALD in Hollywood and Lola Gentry, secretary of the Film Board in Los Angeles. All of marriageable age, but very particular. No contracts entered into without our consent.

They're Pouring Out the Praise and They're Pouring it Fast!

It's true what they say about Dixie—every single word of it! Read it!

Motion Picture Daily

'JEZEBEL' is a picture for any man's theatre and any customer's money! It is long since a picture to match this one for sheer power has come from any man's camera. If "Jezebel" doesn't hang up box-office records from Caribou to San Diego it will be because the 'recession' has been misspelled from the beginning.

There's not an acting flaw in the entire footage! The power of 'Jezebel' comes from the play by Owen Davis who drew most of it from the history of throbbing New Orleans. All the gentlemen concerned with the filming are entitled to begin dating their distinction from here. "Jezebel" is no mere crackerjack or knockout. It is a tremendous and tremendously earnest motion picture containing a maximum of sound artistic and commercial ingredients and is completely free of hokum. Bette Davis' playing puts her at the top of the 1938 list of Academy nominations!"

Motion Picture Herald

"Showmen who have been wondering what to do about shouting down the rumors about 'Recession' have here a practical solution to their problem.

Unless everybody who is anybody in Hollywood was mistaken when they saw it on Monday evening, "Jezebel" is just about the liveliest set of marquee letters in the library at this writing. This title will put the population on notice that a most extraordinary picture is to be seen within after the usual wicket formalities.

It is big enough and strong enough to send a Hollywood preview audience out talking to itself.

The press has been diligent in spreading the news about "Jezebel" and will be more so, now that the Coast correspondents have had a look. Previewed at the Warner Hollywood theatre, the audience found it self repeatedly applauding."

Hollywood Reporter

"In 'Jezebel' Warners has its greatest film achievement and the industry an exceptional attraction of smash proportions! It is a compelling, emotional drama—an exceptional story with an excellent cast. It is in all respects a notable job!"

Film Daily

"Impressive romance-drama of the old South with Bette Davis scoring brilliantly! Should click at the box-office! Excellent!"

Showmen's Trade Review

"Bette Davis gives a great performance in a film that will make box-office history!"

Variety Daily

"Best in Miss Davis' fine repertoire of screen impersonations and on a par with the screen's most memorable exhibits. It will win high acclaim! In a brilliant display of her acting prowess, Bette Davis projects that 'woman who did evil in the sight of God,' as Owen Davis, Sr., translated her into a sinister belle of old New Orleans in his noted play.

The Exhibitor

"Definitely a big-money entry! Will prove a word-of-mouth builder, especially with women. Gives the exhibitor much to offer!"

ROCK-A-BYE BABY

THIS land of ours seems about equally accursed by politicians who would have the government attend to everything and propagandists who would use the screen to tend to everything, or anything.

Just now the world of the theatre screen is being exceedingly bedevilled in behalf of an "oh so constructive" picture entitled "The Birth of a Baby."

Names of the righteous and the scientifically and medically mighty are assembled in behalf of admitting it to the public amusement screen.

Reaching a crescendo in its pressure extraordinary upon the authorities of New York State, the producer, Special Pictures Corporation, has been broadcasting two amazing expressions of two of the nation's most proper and august newspapers, The New York Times and the New York Herald Tribune. That these newspapers editorially approve the picture and in substance demand its release to the amusement screen is offered as conclusive.

THAT makes it entirely appropriate to suggest that each of these newspapers, neither having any approximation of the circulation of screen coverage, and its problems of mass audiences, if so afire with enthusiasm for the message, may now devote some of their Sunday rotogravure sections to the gynecological message involved. There should be abundant still pictorial material available and it should make up neatly and tastily.

The New York Times remarks, in its outgiving on "The Birth of a Baby," that "experience has shown that the words 'syphilis' and 'gonorrhea' must be used in print if venereal diseases are to be controlled."

The Times diligence in suggestion somehow reminds one of the fact that that able journal found itself so fecund with pictorial ideas and messages that it considered it desirable to sell off its "Mid-Week Pictorial" section to another publisher. This would seem to have been a process of ignoring the tremendous possibilities in a policy of gynecology. In very fact the journalistic merits of that policy for a certain audience in somewhat the same period were demonstrated by Life which came out in its number one issue with a picture showing a doctor holding up a new born baby by the hind leg.

In substance The Times, and yes, The Tribune, would have a big "educational" movement for the public health—on the theatre screen. One reasonably consistent reader of both papers has yet to see either sibilant "syphilis" or guttural "gonorrhea" ornamenting even a thirty point headline on page one, or any page. They want the screen to proclaim, while they whisper, in eight point.

ASKING the public amusement theatre screen to devote its playing time to such product, behind a box office which exists on amusement patronage, is the social equivalent of an invitation to a family dinner: "Do come over and we'll have a lovely time talking of childbirth, syphilis and gonorrhea."

Discoursing on childbirth and infant mortality, The Times remarks: "The obvious remedy is education. And the most powerful of all means of education should be a film which physicians have directed and which physicians have approved."

There is probably none in the wide world audience of Motion Picture Herald's 16,700 showmen subscribers who will have the least misunderstanding of what it is all about, but for the record it is entertaining to quote from two publicity releases issued under the name of Geraldine Sartain, Special Pictures Corporation:

MARCH 2, for immediate release: EDUCATIONAL PICTURE WOVES MINNEAPOLIS BOX OFFICE—The box office surprise of the current year is the educational film "The Birth of a Baby," which is headed for a $13,500 gross on its first week, world premier showing in Minneapolis.

MARCH 4, for immediate release: Refuting Hollywood's old theory that the public rejects instructive movies, "The Birth of a Baby" yesterday (Thursday) entered the second week of its record breaking run in Minneapolis. At the modest admission fee, 25 to 40 cents, this frankly educational production out-grossed all the Hollywood glamour product exhibited in opposition to it.

Anyway, it is nice to know that whatever else is to be said of the show, the admission fee was "modest."

ALL this prattle and sophistry of the merchandising of sexology is tediously familiar to the writer of this page, on the basis of explicit experience. Twenty-three years ago among the products that flowed through his office of exploitation was the first and original screen version of the screen's first effort at selling seats in the name of syphilis, entitled "Damaged Goods," starring Mr. Richard Bennett, who has just previously enjoyed excellent stage box office a-crusading for Mr. Eugene Brieux's then daring play.

Mr. Bennett, by reason of much interviewing and many curtain speeches, had done an elegant job for syphilis-and-the-drama. He had contended for it in such solemnity of purpose for social service, that it seemed appropriate to do something special about it for a press book on the screen version. An assistant, an enthusiastic young person of vigorous idealism, was dispatched to interview Mr. Bennett again for the film literature on the subject of "message." He came back reporting that Mr. Bennett's principal remark was: "It's a great show to sell."

Mr. Bennett was eminently correct. That 1915 version of "Damaged Goods" recorded at Santa Barbara under the highly educational auspices of "Flying A," cost $17,000 in the negative can. Exploitation costs were about $23,000. The picture was given a "world premiere" at 11 o'clock of a Saturday morning at a Broadway theatre, with a lecture on

Talent Rollcall

To the exhibitor looking forward to the new season titles and story synopses are interesting reading, but of more important bearing on his estimates of what to expect from Hollywood are the stars and directors assigned to those titles and stories. In the contract lists of Hollywood producers are many names which of themselves are proven marquee value and it is for these that the exhibitor looks behind the alluring promises of "big pictures."

A comprehensive list of the contract stars, writers and directors which comprise the talent of the various producers is presented on pages 12, 13 and 14.

Teddington Chief

Jerry Jackson, for three years associate producer and assistant to Irving Asher, was appointed managing director at the Warner studios at Teddington, England, in charge of all English production for Warner Brothers. He replaces Mr. Asher, who resigned last week.

The House of Lords surprised all sections of the industry by approving amendments reintroducing the three for one quota plan in the new Films Act and increasing the starting percentages. The bill will have its third reading next week and then will be returned to the Commons for approval or further revision.

Decision Studied

The decision of the United States circuit court of appeals, holding as illegal the concerted use of contractual clauses to ban double features, was being studied this week by attorneys for the companies which were defendants in the Perelman case. Louis Phillips, counsel for Paramount, said his company is not dropping the double billing clause for the time being because certain legal phases have to be complied with. He pointed out that the distributors have 90 days from the date of decision in which to appeal to the Supreme Court. The ruling was handed down March 10th. At Warner Brothers it was revealed the company is studying the decision but that the legal department has not yet conferred with the sales department on eliminating the anti-duals clause. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will not be affected by the decision, its legal department pointed out, because the company has not used the restrictive clause for two seasons.

Mexican Compromise

American distributors in Mexico have resumed remittances to the home offices as a result of a partial return of operations in foreign exchanges. The amounts received by branches in Mexico, however, have been decreased slightly because of the new peso rate of 4.15 to the dollar as compared with the former rate of 3.60 to the dollar. No announcement has been made as to what peso rate finally will be established.

syphilis from the stage by an eminent and ethical but publicity-appreciating specialist, and in Michigan avenue, Chicago, with a prayer and oration from an eminent clergyman who should have known better, but loved the limelight. The gross take on state's rights in the United States was $600,000.

In retrospect a final accounting on that picture would seem to require consideration of some other figures. For instance, the state's rights concessionaires in one territory had to spend $900 hiring the "right attorney" to plead with the censors, and in another there was an "entertainment" expense of $1,200. There were many kindred items. Something less calculable were large effects. One man, then young, inflamed with a picture of what he called success, has ever since been devoting his life and work to the making of "road show" pornographic pictures. Two other men, in those days leaders in the industry, followed what Mr. Martin Quigley called "the easiest way" in his speech before the American Marketing Association the other day, with such success that they are today most unprosperous and unknown.

The larger damage has been that, ever since, the screen has had, sporadically, syphilis.

Now it chances that had that audience of 1915 been afire with the social importance of syphilis it could have had abundant information about the spirochaete from a motion picture made by scientists working with the facilities of Pathe Freres in Paris, just then available. But the Pathe pictures portrayed the villain of syphilis in test tube cultures and on microscope slides. It did not seem to be box office. Syphilis without sex is no fun.

A picture to serve a vast public interest in the important aspects of reproduction and its processes might deal with embryology in a slightly more abstract fashion, somewhat as the scientists do, with close-ups of the developing ovum of frogs, morgue cross-sections of foetal remains, and jars of pickled specimens.

THERE is no contention that the public should not know about childbirth, syphilis, gonorrhea and all such matters as seem currently in discussion. There is a vigorous contention that the motion picture theatre is not the place in which the public normally seeks or should get such information. Nor is it of moment that showing of such material has been found for a given place and time of immediate profit to the showman. The profits of "the easy way" are more conspicuous but much smaller than the losses.

There is much of contention in the propaganda of "The Birth of a Baby" about safeguards set up concerning its exhibition, including a proviso against showing on double bills, and the like. That brings a sardonic smile from any one who knows the story of exhibition of the product in this category.

One of the unhappy consequences of such attention as this to such product, as experience has all too often proved, is that within the week the Herald will be in receipt of wires and mail inquiries will be coming from the same sector which tells the clubwomen that "blockbooking" has the box office manacled.

THE organized motion picture industry, in solving its problem of the decency of the screen, now finds itself invaded in a cause with which it has no proper concern as an instrument of entertainment. Also the line of production which today presents us eminent gynecologists will imitatively tomorrow bring the quacks under the same text and to the same box office purpose.

The New York Times says: "'The Birth of a Baby' merely follows the trend of the times." The press agent for the picture says that the picture "has sent a sensational army through the box office. . . . It included both men and women and reverent adolescents."

That probably is the best line of all for the lobby. "Reverent Adolescents."

How they do revel!

TERRY RAMSAYE

Neely Bill Arguments

Opponents and proponents of the pending Neely anti-block booking bill continued to wage their verbal battle over the merits of the measure this week although in Washington it was indicated the proposed law has virtually no chance of being enacted this year. Sidney R. Kent, president of Twentieth Century-Fox, continued in his role as a leading opponent of the bill by reiterating his charges that the synopsis provision in the bill is unworkable. Lined up with Mr. Kent were Harry Brandt, president of New York's Independent Theatre Owners Association; R. R. Biechele, secretary of the Kansas-Missouri Theatres Association, and the New Haven Council of Film Patrons. On the opposite side were Pete J. Wood, secretary of the Ohio Independent Theatre Owners and representatives of Allied States Association in New Haven.

The viewpoints of the battlers are included in an article on page 25, where also appears an article on distributors taking to the United States Supreme Court their fight for the legal right to include admission price restrictions and double feature bans in exhibitor contracts.

Inquiry Ordered

First official and federal investigation by government of amusements in the Administration's threatened probings of "big business" comes with the Federal Communications Commission's inquiry into radio, decided on this week at Washington. Virtually all phases of mechanical and administrative operations of the networks will be subjected to scrutiny.

The House of Representatives at the same time is undertaking a study of television and sound patents, as the result of the launching of hearings on patents revision legislation introduced by Representative William D. McFarlane.

Details of both moves in Congress are reported on page 23.

Muto to IATSE

Anthony Muto, one-time journalist extraordinary here and abroad, and more recently with the Washington office of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., this week was announced in charge of publicity and public information for the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and Moving Picture Machine Operators, in Washington.

Mr. Muto came to the motion picture industry and the Hays office at the inception of the National Recovery Administration's Blue Eagle code activities.

Conspicuous among his newspaper performances were researches into the affairs of the Ku Klux Klan for the New York World.

Net Profits

Eastman Kodak Company this week reported that 1937 was a record year for the company in sales and net profit. Sales increased 13.6 per cent as compared to 1936 and net earnings advanced from $18,906,371 to $22,347,345. Also reporting an increase in net profits for the year as compared to 1936 was Keith-Albee-Orpheum Corporation. B. F. Keith Corporation reported a decrease. Columbia Pictures Corporation had a net profit of $451,061.20 for the six months ended December 25th, 1937. This compares with a net profit of $629,771.93 for the corresponding six month period in the preceding year.

Details of the week's financial news are in a story on page 36.

Chance Games

A controversy in Utah over the authority of the Utah Trade Commission to enforce the state's unfair practices act involving Bank Night; a veto by Governor Chandler of Kentucky of the bill to legalize Bank Night there; a county ruling in Pennsylvania outlawing Bank Night and the fining of two managers in Montreal for operating Bank Nights were the highlights of the week in chance game developments.

Films and Education

Developments in the establishment of co-operation between film companies and educators will be discussed Monday at the annual meeting of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America.

The meeting also will be featured by the reading of an annual report by Will Hays, president. He will cite the accomplishments in the industry during the last year and is expected to comment on the problems now confronting the industry.

Nate J. Blumberg, Universal's president, is scheduled to be elected a director. Present officers expected to be reelected are Mr. Hays, Carl Millikin, secretary; Frederick L. Herron, treasurer, and George Borthwick, assistant treasurer.

Allied in Chicago

The Allied States Association of Illinois met Thursday in the LaSalle Hotel, Chicago, to elect new officers and make plans for the coming year, the most prominent of which will be the attitude of the organization regarding double features. It is possible that a suit may be filed against the Balaban & Katz circuit if money can be raised for legal fees. Aaron Saperstein was expected to be reelected president of the organization.

Succeeding Mr. Hays

Periodically the newswriters of the daily press discover with sensational acclaim a "successor to Will Hays, czar of the movies."

In the first place, Mr. Hays isn't a czar, and in the second place he has never been successfully succeeded. Previous nominees of the newspaper writers have been:

Alfred E. Smith
Calvin Coolidge
James J. Walker
The Duke of Windsor
Joseph P. Kennedy
James A. Farley
John Boettiger

And now this week is added Edward J. Flynn, New York's secretary of state and Democratic boss of Bronx County.

In informed quarters the Flynn report is considered as good as any that have gone before.

Censorship

State censorship of motion pictures was under consideration this week in New Jersey and Massachusetts, while in North Carolina the house of representatives adopted a liquor reform bill with an amendment provided for the deletion of drinking, murder and divorce scenes in films.

Details are on page 26.

The gentleman at the left is Senor Domingo Soler, Mexican stage star, costumed for his part in "Refugiados en Madrid," first production of Fama, Mexican company which has initiated an ambitious schedule.

Mr. and Mrs. Leon Snider, below, of the Snider & Dean circuit which operates 70 theatres in Australia, visit Leo Carrillo on the set of Walter Wanger's "The Adventuress" while in Hollywood on a trip around the world.

Judith Allen, Monogram star, is interviewed in New York, right, before leaving for personal appearances in Rio de Janeiro and Buenos Aires. The interviewers are H. Albán Mesanza, editor of Teatro al Dia; Roberto Socas, motion picture critic of La Nacion of Buenos Aires; Ralph B. Ross, Argentine publisher, and Carlos Morla, Latin-American manager for Monogram.

615 PLAYERS, 293 WRITERS 129 DIRECTORS CONTRACTED FOR 1938-1939 PROGRAMS

Only Few Score of Top Rank Talent Personalities Un- placed; Many of These Pre- fer Status of Freelance

Once again the motion picture producers of Hollywood turn to the building of new talent structures for another season, as their work on the production, if not actual delivery, of this season's commitments comes to an end.

Fifteen of the large producers today have under contract 615 players, 293 writers and 129 directors to appear in or produce the 500 or more new features to be made in 1938-39, for which their selling departments already are negotiating exhibition and formulating sales policies.

Activities talentwise are equally pronounced in the field of short subjects and serials.

The smaller companies, producing for the states rights market, buy their talent as they go along, and for that reason cannot be included in the pre-seasonal roundup of talent under contract.

The new-talent roster includes the cream of the crop in Hollywood, leaving but a few-score topnotch players, writers and directors still "open," and many of these prefer the status of the freelancer to a contract.

Many "New Faces"

There are dozens of "new faces," whose past performances in minor positions have led to their elevation to "contract workers." And some whose names previously had appeared are not to be found on the new lists. For the most part, however, the new-season roster is constituted of those who have been considered for several seasons good "marquee" copy for any box office.

Exhibitors studying the talent structures as newly constructed could get a far greater insight into what to expect of box office value for 1938-39 than from the more intangible possibilities reposing in producers' vaults in the hundreds of books, plays and original stories purchased but unproduced. The potential strength of any new program would seem to exist in the already tried-and-proved performances of the talent designated for it, pointing up the box office values of the Shirley Temples and Clark Gables, the Robert Taylors, Bing Crosbys, William Powells, Jane Withers, Fred Astaires, Ginger Rogers, Sonja Heines, Gary Coopers and Myrna Loys. Titles on paper may not mean anything; the talent assigned to the title does.

107 Under Paramount Contract

Leading all others in the number of stars and featured players now under contract is Paramount Pictures, that company listing 107, followed closely by the 101 of Twentieth Century-Fox, which has the greatest number of contract writers, 64, and ties with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in having 20 directors. Following is a tabulated picture of Hollywood talent under

MALES REPRESENT 69% OF HOLLYWOOD TALENT

The male in Hollywood predominates, making up 69 per cent of the combined acting, writing and directing talent under contract to 15 of the large producers. Presumably an equivalent ratio holds true in the field of the "freelance" and other forms of non-contract talent.

Of the 615 players under contract to the 15 producers, 329, or 54 per cent, are males; 286, or 46 per cent, are females.

Writers under contract total 293, of whom 254, or 86 per cent, are males, and only 39, representing 14 per cent, are females.

There is not one female director among the 129 under contract listed by the 15 producers.

contract as of this week, all presenting a very definite relation to 1938-39 feature programs:

Company	Contract Players	Contract Writers	Contract Directors
Columbia	47	12	8

TOTALS	615	293	129

(a) No contract writers listed.

(b) Grand National is in reorganization.

(c) MGM has not listed its writers.

The foregoing does not represent the final roster of talent for 1938-39. Scores of additional writers, directors and players will be acquired, likewise under term contracts, and hundreds more will be signed for individual pictures. Supervisors, executive and associate producers and assistant directors are additional classes not considered in this study, nor the three to four hundred writers of the books, plays and originals purchased outside the regular studio staffs.

The roster, however, does represent in the main the talent for next season, in these busy days of talent realignment, the signing of new, re-signing of old and the lapsing of contracts of others, identities of these not being disclosed according to studio policy. Hollywood prefers to dish-up its talent structures on the basis of a translation of glamour into box office dollars.

The company-by-company structures of talent under contract—actors, writers and directors—follows, as submitted by the producers themselves. Their film assignments for 1938-39 will be forthcoming soon.

FARMERS SELECT FAVORITE STARS

A survey made by Successful Farming, which is said to have reached 6,000,000 farm homes reveals that, in selecting their favorite actor, farm men chose Clark Gable and farm women selected Robert Taylor. Myrna Loy and Shirley Temple were tied for first place in the men's poll for their favorite actress while the women named Jeanette MacDonald.

The first five in each poll were, for the men: Clark Gable, Wallace Beery, William Powell, Robert Taylor and Spencer Tracy. Actresses: Myrna Loy and Shirley Temple, Mae West, Joan Crawford and Jeanette MacDonald. In the women's poll, Robert Taylor, Clark Gable, William Powell, Nelson Eddy and Wallace Beery followed in that order and they named Jeanette MacDonald, Shirley Temple, Myrna Loy, Janet Gaynor and Norma Shearer as favorite actresses.

STAGE POPULARITY LOST, SAYS HAMPDEN

Walter Hampden, Shakespearean actor, said this week that the theatre of the stage would never return to the popularity it enjoyed several decades ago because "people have lost the habit."

"Besides," the actor said, "the expense of transporting flesh and blood actors cannot compete with carrying them along in film, so the price of the theatre precludes the possibility of its becoming the habit that the motion picture has in the life of the average American today."

In motion picture theatres, he said, "you get your money's worth."

Of the contemporary stage, he said, "Where there is quality in it, the quality is very fine. Only we do not get enough of it."

CLEVELAND CLUB SETS FILM WEEK

The Cleveland Cinema Club, one of the oldest motion picture clubs in the country, has set the week of May 6th as Movie Festival Week and has secured the cooperation of producers, distributors, exhibitors, Parent-Teacher Associations and schools to make the event so outstanding, that it will become an annual event.

The object of Movie Festival Week, according to its sponsor, Mrs. W. V. Fiske, president, is to make the public more film conscious.

NORMA

A PICTORIAL PREVIEW

by GUS MCCARTHY
in Hollywood

LONG before Irving Thalberg died—before Norma Shearer played the lovely heroine of Shakespeare's immortal "Romeo and Juliet" or starred in "The Barretts of Wimpole Street"—preliminary plans had been made to present her as "Marie Antoinette," one of history's most glamorous women. Four years ago a man and a woman, husband and wife, began to dream of a production that would be a bright jewel in a dual crown even then gleaming with brilliant gems of accomplishment. Neither foresaw that tragedy would claim one—chill the soul and spirit of the other.

Days of hopeless discouragement followed for Norma Shearer. A sympathetic world, much of which had found escape from its own trials and tribulations in enjoyment of her films, wondered if she would ever return to the screen. If she did, the world wondered in what sort of vehicle she would resume her career. While others suggested and speculated, Miss Shearer made her own decision. She chose to be with the world again in a production which she and her husband had planned—the story of the little Hapsburg Archduchess who became Queen of France, as that story is set down in Stefan Zweig's romantic biography.

Marie Antoinette was a vivid romantic symbol of a fabulous era of kings and peasants, glory and despair, cake and black bread, jeweled gowns and filthy rags, compassion and cruelty, magnificent pageantry and hopeless want, idealism and treachery. Before and since, humanity has stood witness to world shattering events—yet none parallel those that were the lot of the bewildered but womanly and worldly wise Austrian peeress who was central character in the most amazing maelstrom of human emotions the world has known.

But the panoramic canvas upon which "Marie Antoinette" is being projected will not be lacking in those instruments and devices which authentically reflect one of the most lavish and spectacular periods in all history. A costly undertaking, the 98 settings utilized, which Cedric Gibbons designed and constructed, following intensive research, show in true and minute detail not only the pomp and nobility but the degradation of the French people in the time of the story. Stately interiors of the Palace of Versailles, its luxurious gardens, the Petit Trianon, the crowded streets of Paris gone mad with blood lust are the main backgrounds for this story of heroes and villains, of men and women with character, of mistresses with none, of Marie Antoinette, Count Axel de Ferson, King Louis XVI and the Duc d'Orleans, Robespierre, Marat and Danton.

That Miss Shearer is worthy of and qualified to play the title role is attested by her record. The films previously named, "The Divorcee," "Let Us Be Gay," "Strangers May Kiss," "A Free Soul" and "Smilin' Through" make one aware again of her artistry. Her feminine appeal is acknowledged, just as it is known that Marie Antoinette did not lack in those charms that attracted masculine interest. Of the 152 speaking parts, Tyrone Power, Robert Morley, Joseph Schildkraut, Gladys George, Anita Louise, John Barrymore, Henry Stephenson, Peter Bull, Joseph Calleia, Reginald Gardiner, Barnett Parker, Albert Van Dekker, Alma Kruger, Cora Witherspoon, Leonard Penn, Ruth Hussey, George Zucco, Henry Daniel and Nigel de Brulier have the most important.

How Mr. Thalberg, with his intimate interest to inspire him, would have produced the picture can be readily imagined. That "Marie Antoinette" might come to the screen a memorable attraction, rich in entertainment and commercial values, the duty of continuing the Thalberg tradition was entrusted to a producing-directing team that has proved its worth. "The Firefly," "Maytime," "The Great Ziegfeld," "The Thin Man," "Naughty Marietta," "Rose Marie," "Night Must Fall" and "Ah, Wilderness" are among producer Hunt Stromberg's testimonials. The director, W. S. Van Dyke, II., lists "The Thin Man," "Rose Marie," "Naughty Marietta," "Penthouse," "After the Thin Man," "San Francisco," "Rosalie" and "Forsaking All Others" in his numerous credits.

When all things are considered, personal, professional, exigencies of business and the disposition of devious governing forces, it is not likely that "Marie Antoinette" will be available to the public much before the middle of next September.

MGM HOLDS 4 REGIONALS; FOX ALSO TO DROP "B's"; HAMMONS' NEW PLANS

President of Educational Planning Company To Make and See Features and Shorts, with Exhibitors Sharing

Further advancement in plans for new product and sales policies was made this week in virtually all quarters of production and distribution, both by "majors" and independents.

First to hold its sales conventions, a series of regionals at Kansas City, San Francisco, Chicago and New York, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's men in the field were about ready to advance on exhibitors with the company's 1938-39 portfolio on 52 features and an explanation of the new policy for the elimination of "Class B" pictures. (Names of MGM's 1938-39 talent and films were published March 19, page 27.)

Twentieth Century-Fox is also expected to announce elimination of "Class B's," at its convention April 1, at Kansas City.

Sales convention arrangements of the week also included Monogram's postponement of its conference from April 21 to May 8, when the field forces will for the first time meet the new sales manager, George Weeks, formerly with GB Pictures, who takes the place of Edward Golden, promoted to assist W. Ray Johnston, president. The convention will be held at Cincinnati's Netherland Plaza Hotel.

Hammons' Distribution Plans

Probably the outstanding move of the week from the standpoint of new-company activity was E. W. Hammons' indication that he was considering establishment of a new national distributing organization, along the lines of the old First National, to produce both features and short subjects, exhibitor franchise holders to share in profits.

Mr. Hammons' prime interest is an outlet for his Educational short subjects, a five-year distribution arrangement with Twentieth Century-Fox expiring on August 1st.

Mr. Hammons reported that several well-known producers were interested in the plan, which would require $5,000,000.

Educational probably will have about 26 two-reelers and 52 one-reelers for 1938-39, compared with 42 two-reelers and 58 one-reelers this season.

Twentieth Century-Fox is to conduct an "Educational Anniversary" sales drive from April 25th to May 28th to corral outstanding playdates.

MGM Regional Meetings

The Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer home office sales staff, headed by William F. Rodgers, general sales manager, and Al Lichtman, assistant to Nicholas M. Schenck, president, conducted the second of four regional conventions, last Saturday and Sunday, at the St. Francis hotel, San Francisco, assisted by Edward M. Saunders, western sales manager; George Hickey, southern division manager, and managers from Portland, Seattle, Salt Lake City, Los Angeles, Denver and San Francisco.

On Thursday and Friday a midwest meeting was held at Chicago's Palmer House, after which the company turned to New York, for

METAL PROCESS FOR PICTURES

A method of making portraits on metal which, its sponsors say, may prove to be more enduring and more accurate than those taken on paper, was announced this week by the Aluminum Company of America. The pictures are made on sheets of duralumin which carries a coating of photographic emulsion. The metal is substituted for ordinary photographic paper.

The first portrait made by the new process has been presented to Dr. Paul Merica, vice-president of the International Nickel Company, whose research work on the hardening of alloys by precipitation led to a more diversified use of metals.

a meeting at the Hotel Astor, Sunday and Monday. In all cases the managers heard Mr. Rodgers report that 36 of the 52 features for 1938-39 will be in "a big-budget, big-star classification." Also announced was a new starring contract for Luise Rainer.

Sam A. Shirley, district manager with headquarters in Chicago for 19 years, is taking over the branch in that city, succeeding Felix Mendelssohn, who has retired from the film business.

J. E. Flynn, district manager with headquarters in Detroit, takes over Shirley's territory, retaining Detroit and supervising also Chicago, Indianapolis, Milwaukee and Minneapolis.

Cincinnati, Cleveland and Pittsburgh, which were in Mr. Flynn's territory, are now a separate district to be managed by John J. Maloney, promoted from Pittsburgh branch manager.

Albany and Buffalo have been taken from Mr. Flynn's former territory and added to the district managed by E. K. (Ted) O'Shea, which now includes also New York, Washington and Charlotte.

New District Made

Boston and New Haven, up to now in O'Shea's territory, have been made a district managed by Maurice N. Wolf, who was promoted from the Boston branch managership.

Mr. Connors disclosed the following branch shifts: Jack Byrne, branch manager at New Haven, to Boston; Tom Donaldson, salesman in Boston, to branch manager in New Haven; Burtus Bishop, Jr., branch manager in Charlotte, to Pittsburgh; Benn Rosenwald, salesman at Charlotte, to branch head there.

Decision of Twentieth Century-Fox also to eliminate "Class B" films came this week in Hollywood, preparatory to the April 1st, Kansas City sales convention.

Fox will have 18 new sales branch buildings completed or under way this year.

Mr. Zanuck announced this week in Hollywood the designation of "Suez" as a "special" for 1938-39.

United Artists has scheduled a minimum of 20 features for release in the 1938-39 season. George G. Schaefer, vice-president and general manager, said the product would be divided as follows: Five each from Samuel Goldwyn, Walter Wanger and Alexander Korda, three by Edward Small, and two by David O. Slesnick.

First announcement by Mr. Goldwyn on his 1938-39 plans came this week with his selection of "Gaustrak," to star Gary Cooper, Merle Oberon and Sigrid Gurie.

Universal's Conferences

Universal's 1938-39 product conferences continued this week in Hollywood, with Nate Blumberg, president, and Charles Rogers, vice president, presiding. John Joseph, advertising manager, returned to the home office.

Pre-convention sales realignment this week sent Big Wittman, eastern district manager, to Philadelphia as branch manager, succeeding Joseph Engels, transferred to Cleveland as manager, and a new position, undisclosed, for David Miller, formerly in Cleveland.

50 Warner Scripts Ready

With the announcement that the company already has completed 50 scripts which will be considered for 1938-39 production, and the assignment of writers to 35 additional stories, Warner home office executives started westward to set the new program, those departing including Gradwell Sears, general sales manager; Carl Leserman, his assistant; Sam Schneider, financial department, and Mort Blumenstock, home office advertising director. In Burbank they will confer with Harry M. and Jack L. Warner, Hal Wallis, and Charles Einfeld. Also on the agenda will be sales and merchandising plans for pictures remaining on 1937-38 commitments.

Warners will have several in color next season, led by "Valley of the Giants," by Peter B. Kyne, with George Brent and Olivia de Havilland.

Other Conferences

Principal developments at RKO this week pointing to new season's production included the signing of George Height, formerly with Samuel Goldwyn, as a producer; a contract with Rufus Le Maire as assistant to Pandro Berman, production chief, and the continuance of studio conferences between Leo Spitz, president; Ned Depinet, vice president; Jules Levy, sales manager, and S. Barret McCormick, advertising director. Mr. LeMaire was formerly executive to Charles Rogers at Universal, and in his new position will seek and develop new talent for RKO.

Columbia Pictures was concerned with the windup of its "Montague Good Will Campaign," to round out playdates for 1937-38, citing Art Levy's Pittsburgh branch as the winner of the first six-weeks, with six more to go.

Paramount product conferences will get under way at the end of Stanton Griffiths's vacation in Florida, in a few days.

Another to consider regional sales conventions instead of a single meeting, Paramount's advance decision is for 52 features for 1938-39, instead of the usual 60.

Republic Pictures is awaiting the arrival at duty of James R. Grainger, its new president, June 1st. Mr. Grainger, however, will sit as an "observer" at the convention, May 2nd to 5th, in Hollywood.

GB Pictures next season will have the services of Jack Whiting and Michael Redgrave, contracts having been signed in London this week, the Redgrave arrangement calling for four pictures.

U.S. TURNS TO INVESTIGATION OF RADIO, TELEVISION, SOUND PATENTS

Communications Commission Will Study Networks' Contracts and Practices; Television Control Is "Feared"

The Administration's general attitude toward the practices of "big-business" was reflected officially in amusements this week when the United States Government decided to investigate the radio broadcasting industry, through the Federal Communications Commission, and, at the same time, the House took up the advisability of probing television and sound patents.

The long-deferred study of radio and its reputed "monopolistic practices" was actually underway with adoption by the FCC of a resolution providing for a sweeping inquiry into the contractual relations and practices of the networks.

The FCC was virtually compelled to act, after various Congressmen had threatened the alternative of a Congressional investigation not only of radio but of the Commission itself.

A long series of events led up to the opening of the radio probe, based principally on charges in both Senate and House that radio was failing to "clean its own house," and that there was not sufficient control over the type of material broadcast.

The Mae West NBC broadcast in a Sunday evening burlesque on Adam and Eve in the Garden of Eden, for Chase and Sanborn coffee, was cited as an example of the lack of program control. This climactic incident brought storms of protests from Congressmen, their constituents and church and civic organizations the country over.

Film and Television

While radio thus becomes the first open target of a nationwide probe by the government, the motion picture industry has been for months under unofficial probings by Secret Service agents of the Department of Justice, acting on independents' charges of reputed "monopolistic practices."

Of more immediate concern to the motion picture than the investigation of radio is the new possibility that the government may look into the field of television, with which films are to be more closely related, and also into sound patents control, with which the motion picture is definitely related.

Control "Feared"

"Fears" that the same interests that dominate the sound equipment business in motion pictures—presumably American Telephone and Telegraph and Radio Corporation of America—will control television were expressed Monday in Washington by William D. McFarlane, Democratic Congressman from Texas, who appeared before a house patents subcommittee at the opening of hearings on legislation for patents revisions, under President Roosevelt's legislative program calling for elimination of patent monopolies.

Would Eliminate Controls

Directly aimed at in the legislation is the eradication of controls of industry such as those exerted over the automotive field by General Motors.

Under a bill sponsored by Representative

Producers See Tieups as Solution Of Star Broadcast Protests

Direct tieup between exhibitors and star radio broadcasts is advanced as a possible solution to the widespread complaints of exhibitors against such air programs, which they call unfair competition.

Warner Brothers is taking the lead in formulating plans for exhibitor-producer cooperation on the air, and MGM is said to be interested in similar experiments.

Twenty Warner branch managers will cooperate with exhibitors in tieup campaigns for the new air show, "Warners Academy of Acting." They will work with theatremen and broadcasting stations using the program sponsored by Gruen Watch Company to exploit the current Warner releases mentioned on the air, and which start next month.

Exhibitors will be urged to buy "spot" radio announcements on their local stations before and after the half hour program.

McFarlane, the owner of a patent would be given exclusive rights to produce thereunder for only the first three years of its life, after which period any person might make application for a license under the patent to the commissioner of patents, setting forth the royalties he was willing to pay.

A companion bill, introduced by Representative Lawrence J. Connery (Dem.) of Massachusetts, provides for compulsory licensing under patents "brought within a single control by competitors to dominate an industry."

It was explained by Congressman McFarlane that his bill was introduced as a result of President Roosevelt's request for legislation ending certain practices which he held were unfair to the people, including "the use of patent laws to enable larger corporations to maintain high prices and withhold from the public the advantages of the progress of science."

Cites Last Year's Study

The whole question of patent control, he said, had been investigated by the House last year during its study of patent pooling and cross licensing.

That investigation, he told the subcommittee, showed that the Telephone Company, through its research work and the acquisition of patents, was controlling not only the communications industry but others.

"The same group, through the patents they held, almost dominated the sound motion picture equipment industry," Congressman McFarlane said, "and now that television is coming on, we find that the same group have apparently been able to control that field."

Monopoly and the Patent Situation

The patent situation as an aid to monopoly, he continued, has been pointed to frequently by Department of Justice officials, who cited the incongruity of one Governmental group seeking to suppress monopoly while coincidentally another agency was setting up monopolies. Department of Justice prosecutions, it was held, cannot achieve the results sought so long as the Patent Office puts the seal of Government approval upon patent monopolies.

Justice Department officials were represented as in favor of the legislation, and the subcommittee ordered that copies of the bills be sent to the department for study by the Attorney General, who later may be asked to send a representative to testify as to the department's attitude.

Representative Charles Kramer (Dem.) of California—a member of the House Patents Committee but not of the present subcommittee—announced his unalterable opposition to the bills. Witnesses appearing before the subcommittee—practically all in opposition to the legislation—were almost exclusively patent lawyers and representatives of the various bar associations.

Radio Tax Plan Rejected

In the matter of Congress' attitude toward radio, Representative McFarlane's proposed imposition of a ten per cent tax on the gross receipts of broadcasting stations will be laid before the House Ways and Means Committee, following the refusal of the House to accept the proposal as an amendment to the Administration's tax revision bill.

With almost no debate, the House, by a vote of 60 to 30, refused to accept the McFarlane amendment, after Representative Thomson (Dem.) of Illinois expressed opposition to considering new taxes which have never been studied.

"The question of taxing radio broadcasting stations and broadcasters goes into a new field which should be thoroughly studied by the committee charged with raising revenue as well as the committee charged with the regulation of the radio broadcasting industry," Representative Thompson said.

In submitting his amendment, Representative McFarlane launched another tirade against the "radio monopoly," contending that the broadcasters pay nothing to the Government for the privileges they enjoy under their licenses. At no time, however, did he have hope that the amendment would be accepted off-hand, in view of the unwillingness of the House in the past to go into the subject.

Commission Acts

First steps toward the long-deferred investigation of monopolistic practices in the broadcasting industry got underway this week in the Federal Communications Commission following its adoption of the resolution providing for an inquiry into the contractual relations and practices of the networks and the chain stations.

An abrupt demand, last Wednesday, for a public investigation of alleged broadcasting monopoly, by Commissioner T. A. M. Craven, precipitated a two-days' controversy which was finally settled by adoption of an amended resolution forced through by Chairman Frank R.

RADIO INQUIRY IN 13 DIRECTIONS

McNinch, limiting the probe to the network situation.

Commissioner McNinch, supported by Commissioners Eugene O. Sykes and Norman S. Case, attempted to block consideration of the Craven resolution, but was outvoted. He did succeed, however, in having final consideration delayed until the next commission meeting.

Commissioner Craven's resolution, based on the findings in his report of January 20th on the social and economic aspects of broadcasting, in which further study of monopoly was recommended, pointed out that charges of monopoly have been current and called for appointment by the Commission—not by the chairman—of a committee of three to conduct hearings and carry out a study of the whole matter.

Failing in his effort to have the resolution referred to the law department where, Mr. Craven charged, it would take five or six months to get action, Mr. McNinch entered last Friday's FCC meeting armed with a substitute resolution laying down 13 points to be investigated.

A Stormy Session

Following what was said to be a very stormy session, the FCC chairman won over to his side all of the commissioners except George Henry Payne, who later explained that, while "heartily in favor of the investigation" of monopolistic trends in broadcasting, he voted against the McNinch resolution "because of my objection to the methods by which that substitution was being made."

"Commander Craven had spent a great deal of time on his resolution," Mr. Payne commented, "and I felt it was not only better drawn, but more comprehensive and calculated to be more effective."

Members of the legal and engineering staffs of the commission were engaged this week in the compilation of statistical data regarding radio chains and chain stations. Later, it was said, hearings will be held at which network officials and executives of affiliated stations will be interrogated, with possibilities that some of the hearings may be held at points outside of Washington in order that local situations may be thoroughly explored.

13 Phases of Operation

Considerable time is expected to be required for the investigation of the 13 phases of chain operation outlined in the resolution, which were as follows:

1. "The contractual rights and obligations of stations engaged in chain broadcasting, arising out of their network agreements.

2. "The extent of the control of programs, advertising contracts and other matters exercised in practice by stations engaged in chain broadcasting.

3. "The nature and extent of network program duplication by stations serving the same area.

4. "Contract provisions in network agreements providing for exclusive affiliation with a single network and also provisions restricting networks from affiliation with other stations in a given area.

5. "The extent to which single chains or networks have exclusive coverage in any service area.

6. "Program policies adopted by the various national and other networks and chains, with respect to character of programs, diversification,

CANADA ALSO PROBING RADIO

N. L. Nathanson, president of Famous Players Canadian Corporation, largest theatre circuit in Canada, will be called before the select committee of the Canadian House of Commons which is to investigate the activities of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation in connection with the proposal to raise the annual license fee for receiving sets from $2 to $2.50.

Mr. Nathanson will be examined as a governor of the corporation, along with other members of the directorate, before the committee, of which Arthur L. Beaubien of Manitoba is chairman, examines general manager Gladstone Murray and other officials. The investigation is scheduled to open toward the end of the month.

One of the questions to be asked at the inquiry concerns the amounts paid to the large networks in the United States for commercially sponsored radio programs now released over Canadian Stations.

and accommodation of program characteristics to the requirements of the area to be served.

7. "The number and location of stations licensed to or affiliated with each of the various national and other networks. The number of hours and the specified time which such networks control over the station affiliates and the number of hours and the specified time actually used by such networks.

8. "The rights and obligations of stations engaged in chain broadcasting so far as advertisers having network contracts are concerned.

9. "Nature of service rendered by each station licensed to a chain or network organization, particularly with respect to amount of program origination for network purposes by such stations.

Competitive Practices

10. "Competitive practices of stations engaged in chain broadcasting as compared with such practices in the broadcasting industry generally.

11. "Effect of chain broadcasting upon stations not affiliated with or licensed to any chain or network organization.

12. "Practices or agreements in restraint of trade or furtherance of monopoly in connection with chain broadcasting.

13. "Extent and effects of concentration of control of stations locally, regionally or nationally in the same or affiliated interests, by means of chain or network contracts or agreements, management contracts or agreements, common ownership or other means or devices, particularly in so far as the same tends toward or results in restraints of trade or monopoly."

As submitted by Commissioner McNinch, the resolution recited merely that under the provisions of the Communications Act the commission shall have authority to make special regulations applicable to chain stations, but at Commissioner Craven's insistence a second "whereas" was incorporated, explaining that the commission at this time has not sufficient information upon which to base regulations.

Alperson, Wright Stay as Trustees

Over the protest of only one creditor representative, Federal Judge William P. James in Los Angeles Monday appointed Lloyd Wright and Edward Alperson permanent trustees for Grand National Films, Inc., of California, after being told the move would facilitate the obtaining of playdates for company product.

Samuel A. Miller, representing a number of creditors, opposed the move until after an audit of the company's assets but failed after representatives of B. F. Zeidman, Raymond Friedgen and Douglas MacLean approved the permanent appointments.

In the hearing on the organization of the company under Section 77B of the bankruptcy act, the judge was told that distributing expenses were cut to $14,000 weekly as against the old figure of $28,000 to $36,000 weekly, and that $18,000 has accumulated from accounts.

Culver City Fetes 'Tom Sawyer Day'

Originally planned as exploitation for the Selznick International film, "Tom Sawyer Day" developed into a civic fete in Culver City last Saturday. Residents and visitors dressed in the styles of the 1840's devoted their time to such activities as horse shoe pitching, log sawing and nail driving and to dancing the square and quadrille.

Russell Birdwell, exploitation man for Selznick International and instigator of the plan to exploit "The Adventures of Tom Sawyer," presided at the fete. He was dressed as a gambler "dandy" and his attire even included a scented handkerchief up the sleeve and a pearl grey top hat.

A costume parade was held with William H. Wright, assistant to David O. Selznick; Charles Richards, casting director, and Lillian K. Deighton, research director, serving as judges. At night a street dance was held in the village square.

The picture opened Wednesday at Grauman's Chinese and Loew's State theatres in Hollywood and Los Angeles.

Research School Sees "The First World War"

Daniel Doherty, associate of Truman Talley, Twentieth Century-Fox producer, was guest speaker Wednesday when the New School For Social Research, New York City, studied the film, "The First World War," released in 1933.

Louis de Rochemont, producer of the March of Time, will speak at the school next week and selections from the March of Time will be shown.

FIGHT OVER NEELY BILL SPREADS; SUPREME COURT GETS TRUST CASE

Kent Charges Measure Requires "Foot by Foot Synopsis of Films"; P. J. Wood Cites Benefits to Independents

Vigorous arguments for and against the Neely anti-block booking bill were being voiced this week despite Washington reports that the desire of administration leaders for early adjournment of Congress virtually precluded possibility of the measure being enacted this year.

Sidney R. Kent, president of Twentieth Century-Fox, continued his attack on the bill with a charge that "leaders who take the responsibility for imposing the Neely bill upon the industry and who have never produced a picture, and who have never written a scenario, cannot recognize the true facts of the situation which make the synopsis provision of the bill unworkable."

Also opposing the bill were Harry Brandt, president of New York's Independent Theatre Owners Association; members of the New Haven Council of Film Patrons, and R. R. Biechele, secretary of the Kansas-Missouri Theatres Association.

Taking an opposite viewpoint was Pete J. Wood, secretary of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio. "Independent exhibitors are cautioned not to be frightened by the circular letter" from Mr. Kent, Mr. Wood wrote.

And, while proponents and opponents of the bill continued to battle verbally, it was pointed out that provisions of the proposed law are almost identical with the wording of the Federal Trade Commission's order in the Famous Players-Lasky case of 1927. Abram F. Myers, now general counsel of Allied States Association, was a member of the commission at the time the decision was handed down.

Mr. Kent in his latest statement pointed out that a general synopsis would not be sufficient under the Neely bill; "... a foot by foot description is called for."

"Any attempt to hold a studio, for the sake of sales, to a synopsis made many months to a year ahead of production, would prevent a vast improvement in a motion picture," Mr. Kent warned. "... there is blithely imposed a criminal penalty on the officials of each distributing company which may be invoked if their description might be held by a jury to have been knowingly erroneous."

Wood Challenges Kent

In answer, Mr. Wood asked: "Does anyone honestly believe that the members of the Big Eight can not supply descriptive matter relating to their coming attractions that is not knowingly false?"

On the question of whether the bill would increase the cost of films, Mr. Wood said: "There is no apparent reason to anticipate this but even if there should be some increase would this not be more than offset by the right to select the good pictures and discard the clucks?"

Mr. Grandt, in letters to nine senators, said: "Let me assure you that the quickest way to foster a monopoly in our industry is to pass this bill. Only those with the greatest financial resources can operate under it and even they would have to do so with great risk of loss to themselves. The 'little fellow' of whom this bill is supposedly so solicitous will be crushed!"

BRIEFS ORDERED IN PARAMOUNT ACTION

Leon R. Yankwich, federal judge in Los Angeles, this week ordered written briefs filed in the newly amended suit brought against Paramount by 20 Southern California exhibitors who charge fraud over non-delivery of eight features on the 1936-37 schedule.

The court's action was taken after hearing oral arguments on the Paramount demurrer to the suit. Dean Warner, attorney for the exhibitors, charged that Paramount committed acts of fraud in making oral agreements to deliver the pictures but Walter K. Tuller, counsel for Paramount, contended the oral agreements, if any, carried no weight in view of the written pacts.

The New Haven Council's objections to the bill were contained in telegrams forwarded to senators.

New Haven Allied Favors Bill

In the same city, however, a special Allied meeting was held and a resolution supporting the measure was adopted unanimously.

Mr. Biechele, in a letter to the ITOA of New York, wrote: "Higher cancellation privileges and other contractual adjustments are preferable to mandatory legislation."

The comparison of the Neely bill and the 11-year-old Trade Commission order was made by MOTION PICTURE DAILY. The case, involving charges that Famous Players created a monopoly by reason of block booking practices, was before the commission for 71 months.

Attacked by Lawyers

A luncheon tendered in New York to E. K. "Ted" O'Shea in celebration of his recent appointment as district manager for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, served as a setting for denunciation of the Neely bill by Milton C. Weisman, counsel for the Independent Theatre Owners Association of New York, and by Louis Nizer, attorney.

Mr. Weisman urged that trade disputes be kept within the industry, pointing out that "exhibitors in this district have never had to resort to legislation from outsiders, strike suits or bludgeoning." He concluded with a plea for harmonious relations between exhibitors and distributors "without outside reformers to tell us how to run our specialized industry."

Mr. Nizer commented that "when legislation is not in accord with the facts, there is tragedy which exhibitors may well try to avert."

Approximately 400 exhibitors and film men attended the luncheon.

Harry Cohn, president of Columbia, in a telegram to the home office this week said: "I am happy to announce Jean Arthur's return to Columbia Studios. Everything has been mutually and satisfactorily adjusted."

Momand Starts Two New Oklahoma Anti-Trust Actions Against Distributors and Asks $6,636,632 in Damages

Distributors, battling for the legal right to include admission price restrictions and double feature bans in exhibitor contracts, carried their fight to the United States supreme court this week with the filing of a brief asking a reversal of the Dallas circuit court's ruling that adoption of the practice by eight companies constituted a conspiracy in violation of the anti-trust laws.

Coincident with the filing of the brief in Washington, A. B. Momand, Shawnee, Okla., exhibitor, instituted two new anti-trust actions in United States District Court, Oklahoma City, against 20 companies. He is seeking total damages of $6,636,632, charging the companies violated the Federal anti-trust laws.

The document filed with the supreme court was drafted by attorneys for the Interstate Circuit, Inc., and Paramount Pictures Distributing Company and other distributors. It is an appeal from the decision of William H. Atwell, district court judge in Dallas, who upheld the federal government's contention that the distributors conspired with the Interstate Circuit to fix the admission prices at subsequent-run theatres and to prohibit the showing of double features.

In requesting a reversal, the attorneys, George S. Wright and Thomas D. Thacher, summarized their arguments in four points:

1. "A distributor defendant, the owner of a copyrighted motion picture photoplay, acting independently of any other distributor, had the legal right to include either or both of the restrictions here in question in subsequent run license agreements, pursuant to agreement with or at the instance and behest of the Interstate Circuit. . . .

2. "Since the first agreement between Interstate Circuit and a single distributor containing the provisions here in question was a legal contract, the fact that thereafter at different times each of the distributors, acting independently of each other, entered into similar agreements with Interstate Circuit does not constitute an agreement, combination or conspiracy in violation of the Sherman Anti-Trust Law. . . .

3. "There was no evidence to authorize an inference of conspiracy combination or agreement between the distributor defendants. . . .

4. "The restrictions in question do not unreasonably restrain interstate trade or commerce."

One of Mr. Momand's actions is against Twentieth Century-Fox and seven other corporations and the second is against the Griffith Amusement company and 11 other companies. In the first suit, seven causes of action are cited, with damages sought of $1,676,119, while in the second, 14 causes of action are listed, with damages set at $4,461,012.

The cases first were filed in April, 1931, but were dismissed in 1936. Mr. Momand appealed to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals at Denver and obtained a reversal of the lower court decision, permitting him to re-file the actions.

A later restraining order has been modified to allow him to file against Paramount, one of the defendants, before April 8th.

New Arguments Over "Sex" Films

A fresh crop of arguments involving state and local censorship and so-called "sex," "clinical" and "political propaganda" films this week ranged all the way from legislative attempts in South Carolina to outlaw drinking scenes in films as part of a far-reaching liquor reform bill, to continued arguments in New York over "The Birth of a Baby," on which the state withheld decision on an appeal from a previous ban.

Drinking scenes are also the target of the State Federation of Pennsylvania Women.

New York censors refused a license for "Tomorrow's Children".

Pennsylvania censors were overruled on their banning of Amkino's Red-Russian "Baltic Deputy".

Proposed establishment of a state censor board in New Jersey was under attack by newspapers, and Massachusetts legislators continued arguments over extension of state censorship there.

The South Carolina liquor bill, including an amendment providing for the deletion of drinking, murder and divorce scenes in films, was passed by the House. The censorship amendment was proposed by Elwood McKay, a barber and farmer of Florence County, who charged "a lot of the crime in South Carolina starts in our moving picture shows."

The State Federation of Pennsylvania Women at its meeting in Pittsburgh in May, will be asked to go on record as "emphatically disapproving of the picturization of drinking as a common feature of American social life, and of banditry and other lawlessness, and of over-sexed themes as well as of pictures that may be subversive to our national ideals of home and government."

In Philadelphia, the Pennsylvania censor board declared that "Birth of a Baby" may not be shown publicly without a censor seal. It may be shown for educational purposes where admission is not charged.

In New York the board of Regents reviewed the decision of Commissioner Frank P. Graves in banning the film from exhibition but a ruling is not expected for about 30 days.

The Pennsylvania state board of censors' action in barring the Russian film, "Baltic Deputy," was prejudiced, Curtis Bok, president judge of common pleas court, Philadelphia, declared in lifting the board's ban. An appeal from the board's action was taken by Amkino Corporation, distributor.

Several New Jersey newspapers editorially attacked the censorship bill now pending in the ways and means committee of the New Jersey House. "There is less justification for an official censorship now than there has been in several years," the Trenton State-Gazette announced. "Censorship on a state wide basis would be intolerable," the Collingswood News commented.

Thomas M. Burke, state senator in Massachusetts, in urging adoption of his film censorship bill characterized "soul kisses" and Mae West films as "obnoxious."

Deanna Durbin to Quit Air Program

Deanna Durbin, Universal star, will terminate her air appearances with Eddie Cantor at the end of the month. After her final appearance with Mr. Cantor on March 25th, Miss Durbin will return to Hollywood from New York to work in a new Universal film.

MPTOA Expected to Hold Meeting in Oklahoma City

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America is expected to announce within the next few weeks that its national convention will be held in Oklahoma City next fall.

A poll of MPTOA directors, being conducted by Morris Loewenstein, secretary of the national organization and president of the Oklahoma unit, has elicited no unfavorable response to date, and a poll of directors of the state organization brought a unanimous response in favor of Oklahoma City as the convention place.

Selznick Deal Is Off, Says Goldwyn

"All negotiations with David Selznick are off and I don't know whether he will stay with United Artists," Samuel Goldwyn said Wednesday in New York prior to sailing for England. He referred to negotiations which had been underway in Hollywood for several weeks. Mr. Selznick was to have purchased an interest in the company and thus become a participating partner.

The United Artists setup will consist of "The same partners," Mr. Goldwyn said. He denied that there is any deal pending with Alexander Korda for acquisition of the partnership interest held by Charles Chaplin, Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford.

Mr. Goldwyn said he was making his trip to London to "discuss certain matters" with Mr. Korda. David Rose, Mr. Goldwyn's financial advisor, and Mr. Fairbanks sailed with the producer.

Rhode Island Senate Studies Anti-ASCAP Bill

A bill designed to prevent the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers from operating within the state has been introduced into the Rhode Island Senate by Senator Horton.

The measure is similar to one enacted last fall in Tennessee. Attorneys for ASCAP will appear in Federal Court, Knoxville, next week to petition for an injunction to prevent enforcement of the statute pending a test of its legality.

Film Companies Enter Poster Competition

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, RKO Radio, United Artists and Warner Brothers are among the motion picture companies which have submitted entries in the first annual exhibition of one, two and three-sheet posters which is being held in the RCA Building, Rockefeller Center. The exhibit started March 30th and will continue until April 12th. Entries are limited to posters used during the past year.

The competition is sponsored by Transit Advertisers, Inc., and the judges include W. G. Van Schmus, managing director of Radio City Music Hall, and Norman Bel Geddes, theatre designer. Three prizes and honorable mention certificates will be awarded.

The first luncheon of the Baltimore Variety Club's newly formed Tent Number Nine was held Wednesday.

Move to Increase Exemption Doomed

Making a final effort to have an increased admission tax exemption included in the Administration's tax revision bill, P. J. Wood of Columbus, Ohio, this week laid before the Senate Finance Committee the petition of the Independent Theatre Owners Association for an exemption of 50 cents.

In New York the state legislature concluded deliberations last Saturday. The theatre industry had its most successful session in years, with no bills that it fought succeeding in getting to the Governor's desk for signature. Several bills that exhibitors favored did secure enactment.

The attitude of the ITOA of Ohio was unchanged from that displayed in January before the House Ways and Means Committee, that the increase from 40 to 50 cents would be helpful both to the theatre owners and to the Government.

It was explained that the present exemption acts as a "ceiling" on admission prices, not only for the first-run houses, which are the only ones to collect any admission taxes, but for the subsequent-run theatres as well.

The plea of the exhibitors was laid before the Ways and Means Committee in detail but failed to have any effect. It is not expected that better success will be enjoyed in the Senate.

Included in the bills passed by the New York legislature was that by Assemblyman Harold B. Ehrlich, legitimatizing the 1937 law permitting admission of children over eight and under 16 years without parents or guardian to theatres employing matrons. Another bill passed called for one day of rest in seven to janitors and custodians of theatres, sponsored by Assemblyman Robert F. Wagner, Jr., of New York.

Among the bills defeated was the "full crews" measure providing for two projectionists in projection booths in New York City and Buffalo.

The anti-ASCAP bill to put an end to "per seat" levies by the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers failed to get out of the Rules Committee in the Assembly or the General Laws Committee in the Senate.

The Pennsylvania 44-hour week law, which would have affected theatre employees has been declared unconstitutional by the Dauphin county court presided over by Judge W. C. Sheely, who enjoined the state from enforcing the statute.

The removal of 106 billboards in Massachusetts has been ordered by Commissioner William F. Callahan of the public works department.

Charles A. Somma, chairman of the legislative committee of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Virginia, announced that the bill in the General Assembly providing for the licensing of motion picture operators in theatres and schools was lost in the shuffle.

A bill to do away with the Massachusetts blue law which prohibits vaudeville and dancing on Sunday is back in committee. The bill is sponsored by theatre interests.

An ordinance authorizing Tullahoma, Tenn., theatres to operate on Sunday, outside church service hours, has been passed by the aldermen.

Bainbridge, N. Y., voted for Sunday shows, 208 to 53, at the village election.

The city council of Charlotte, N. C., voted to table the Sunday show proposal until the legislature can be asked to approve a referendum.

ITALIANS SEE TECHNICOLOR PROJECT AS AN INVASION BY HOLLYWOOD

Articles in Government - Controlled Press Interpreted to Mean Move to Clamp Down On Use of Foreign Patents

by JOSEPH D. RAVOTTO in Rome

Technicolor's proposal to open a plant in Rome is meeting with opposition from local cinema circles who interpret it as a further enslavement of the Italian industry by Hollywood.

Ever since Dr. Herbert T. Kalmus, president of Technicolor, came to Europe with the expressed intention of negotiating for establishment of plants in Rome, Berlin and Paris, criticism has been leveled against the company by the government controlled press.

At a time when Italy has been making an intensive drive for autocracy in the film domain, three Italian color documentary films have been completed with the Technicolor process, "Roma" (Rome), "La Montagna di Fuoco" (The Mountain of Fire), and "La Caccia Alla Volpe" (The Fox Hunt).

Although on the surface the Cinema Section of the Ministry of Popular Culture has sanctioned the penetration of Technicolor in Italy through an Italo-British accord, it is obvious that it is behind the move to interest Italian money to encourage development of Italian processes.

Leading the drive against Technicolor is the new cinema weekly Film. Indicating that its campaign is approved by the government is the fact that Vittorio Mussolini and Luigi Freddi, the film czar, not only contribute articles to the magazine but are said to exert control as well.

Another publication which disapproves of Technicolor is Rome's ultra-national II Piccolo, which warns Hollywood that Europe has several color systems of its own and that American companies will have a difficult time of it in Europe.

Harm to Local Industry Seen

In an editorial headed "Order of the Day on Color—and What About Us," Film says:

"In England, then in France and more recently in Italy, several independent and national societies for the manufacture of color films using the Technicolor patents have been formed.

"Here among us there is a certain Leonardo Film Company which has completed three documentary films in the last two months . . . with Italian directors, American technicians and American machinery. The negatives were rushed for development to London and in a short time positive copies will be returned for projection in our cinemas for the edification of our educated public."

The article goes on to say that the penetration of foreign companies in Italy for the exploitation of color films, with "additional royalties from which up to the present time our cinema has not succeeded in liberating itself," will only irreparably harm the local industry.

The payment of royalties is not the sole complaint. The publication voices fear that, with the cinema on the threshold of orientation towards colored films, the Italian industry might be forced to lease its entire future to foreign holdings.

3 POWERS REPORTED SEEKING RADIO RULE

Germany, Italy and Japan are anxious to monopolize short wave transmission of the world in order to further their propaganda campaign, according to Paul M. Segal, attorney of Washington, D.C., who sailed this week for Egypt.

Mr. Segal said he was on his way to the international radio and telegraph conference in Cairo, where he would act as adviser to Kenneth R. Warner of Hartford, Conn. who sailed several weeks ago, as delegate to the convention of the American Radio League.

"In order to exploit Technicolor patents," says the editorial, "not only will special cameras be needed but also specially treated negative films of American manufacture, special American equipment for developing positive films of American manufacture, and finally special American printing machinery.

"If the plan were realized, the Italian industry would be substantially enslaved by the foreigner. It is necessary to hurry to the defense, the soonest possible, in view of the fact that while we must maintain the integral independence of our cinema, it is also convenient to keep track of the fact that Italy has great possibilities of conquering the prize of the color regime. No country in the world has as much of a right to this prize as Italy, thanks to her natural beauty."

Incidentally, this is interpreted by foreign distributors as another bid to American and other non-Italian producers to come to Italy to make films, even if foreign processes must be used.

The editorial deplores the fact that Italians have had to go abroad to seek capital for their color processes. Mentioned are Mr. Casiraghi, who went to France to patent the Francita process, and Cristiani-Moscarini, who went to the United States to seek funds for the exploitation of his system.

The editorial's final complaint is that several Italians' processes are not being exploited here. Two are named, one by Roncarolo and another by Bocca and Rudati, which, the magazine claims, may revolutionize all the known theories regarding color films. The Bocca Rudati system does not attempt to realize natural tints. Its sponsors say that "natural colors do not exist" and therefore an "interpretation of real colors" by the artist can be the only successful process.

Foreign circles interpret Film's article as a feeler for the passage of legislative measures to clamp down on foreign patents in Italy. They say several measures can be expected soon curtailing the activities of foreign companies here and giving encouragement, even financial if necessary, to domestic systems.

Only one wholly Italian color film has been completed, "Rapsodia Satanica" (Satanic Rhapsody), featuring Lydia Borelli and Mario Bonnard.

Leonardo Film Company, which has just completed the three Technicolor films, is an Italo-British combine, with World Window, Ltd., and ENIT collaborating. Among the officers are Marco Elter, president, Giovanni Hanau, general manager, and Gastone Bosio, film director. Its pictures will be distributed through United Artists.

"Roma" has been directed by Giacomo Gentilomo, "La Montagna di Fuoco" by Pietro Francisci, and "La Caccia alla Volpe" by the well known Alessandro Glasetti.

Newsreel Theatre in Rome

The Italian capital has its first newsreel theatre, but its chances of survival are considered slight. After several weeks of operation, it has been obliged to reduce prices from 12 cents on weekdays and 17 on Sundays to a uniform 10 cents.

Competition of the second-rate houses here is the main cause of the lukewarm reception by the public. Romans can see a full show, lasting three hours, for the same price. In many cases they have a double feature.

Another reason given is that more than half the program is allotted to subjects smacking of propaganda. In a two-hour program they are obliged to sit through one hour of such subjects as development of the Empire, local industries, local products and new projects.

Critics excuse the public on the grounds that it has lived so close to this sort of thing for the last few years that when it goes to the cinema it wants to be entertained and forget about propaganda.

The success of animated cartoons, comedy and documentary short subjects has been limited in Italy by the vogue of double features.

Two Companies Launched

Two new production companies have put out their shingles.

In Trieste, the Consorzio Adriatico Cinematografico, with 1,000,000 lire capital, has been formed. The officers are Raffaello Riccardi, president; E. P. Salemi, who is mayor of Trieste, vice-president, and Rino Alessi, playwright, director general. The new combine is negotiating with an Italo-French group for a two-version film based on the work of Alessi's "Caterina de' Medici."

The other company, Elettra Film, has been formed in Rome. Gianni Barcellona, a local producer, is general manager.

A zoning system has been applied by the cabinet for the growing Italian cinema industry. Needless to say it will be grouped around Cine-Citta, which Italians call "Mussolini's challenge to Hollywood."

500 Attend Lunch For "Ted" O'Shea

More than 500 motion picture associates and friends of E. K. "Ted" O'Shea attended a luncheon given in his honor at the Hotel Astor, New York City, in celebration of his recent appointment as Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer district manager.

Leo Brecher, New York independent circuit operator, was toastmaster and among those who paid tribute to Mr. O'Shea were Thomas Connors, Walter Read, Milton Weisman, and Louis Nizer. A scroll bearing the signatures of those attending the lunch was presented to the guest of honor.

500 IN DALLAS FOR DEPINET TESTIMONIAL

Mayor Proclaims Saturday RKO Executives' Day; Governor Appoints Him to Fair Post

Saturday will be "Ned Depinet Day" in Dallas, by official proclamation of the Mayor. In the evening Governor James Allred, of Texas, will officially designate Mr. Depinet as Commissioner of Texas for the New York World's Fair.

Both events are by way of celebrating the 30th anniversary in motion pictures of RKO Radio's vice-president in charge of sales, and for the occasion some 500 motion picture executives from production, distribution and exhibition will travel from Hollywood Boulevard, Broadway and the main streets in between to the Baker Hotel at Dallas for a banquet Saturday evening. The celebration is unique in that it is a reversal of the usual procedure of a film salesman dining an exhibitor, this time two exhibitors, Karl Hoblitzelle and R. J. O'Donnell, arranging the banquet for Mr. Depinet.

Special railroad cars and chartered airplanes arrive at Dallas Saturday morning from both coasts, Milton Berle and Ricardo Cortez heading the Hollywood entertainers.

Leo Spitz, president of RKO, will take the RKO contingent from the studio, including home office executives now there for product conferences. In that group will be Jules Levy, sales manager; J. R. McDonough, vice-president; S. Barret McCormick, advertising director, and Harry Cohen, Lee Marcus, Robert Sisk, Cliff Reid, Lou Lusty, Howard Benedict,

The RKO delegation from New York comprises Phil Reisman, foreign sales director; Fred Ullman, head of Pathe News; Major L. E. Thompson, in charge of theatre operations, and A. H. McCausland, Cresson Smith, Ed McEvoy, William Mallard, Ben Cammack, Harry Michaelson, Walter Branson, Ralph Rolan, who has been handling arrangements at the home office, and John O'Connor, RKO Theatres executive.

Executives from other companies and others who will be aboard the special from New York include Gradwell Sears and Carl Lesserman, Warners; Neil Agnew, Paramount; Arthur Lee and Charles Payne, GB Pictures; Nate Blumberg and W. A. Scully, Universal; Bill Saal, Republic; Herman Robbins and George Dembow, National Screen; Herbert J. Yates, Consolidated Film Industries; John Wood, March of Time; Jack Pegler, Lord and Thomas; Y. Frank Freeman, Paramount theatres; Sam Dembow, Magnalite Corporation; George Skouras, Skouras-Fox Theatres; Willard McKay, attorney; Al Barlow, Hennegan Company; Hal Horne and Kay Kaymen, Walt Disney Enterprises; Charles L. Casanave, Charles Berns, Frank Buchanan, Irving Mills, song publisher; Charles Paine, GB; James P. Cunningham of MOTION PICTURE HERALD; Martin Mullin, Sam Pinanski, M. & P. Theatres, Boston.

Besides the RKO group, the Hollywood contingent will include Charles Skouras, Mike Rosenberg, trade press representatives, and others.

I. M. Rappaport, of the Hippodrome theatre, Baltimore; J. J. Fitzgibbons, Toronto, and John F. Hennegan, of the Hennegan Company, Cincinnati, will also attend.

From the south and southwest there will be several groups of circuit and distribution executives, among them: Eph. and Louis Charninsky, R. F. Cornes, Ted De Boer, Myron Everts, John Franconi, L. C. Griffith, J. S. Groves, S. Koenigsberg, Clarence E. Linz, J. E. Luckett, Louis Novy, Oscar Oldknow, George P. O'Rourke, Hugh Owen, Eli Sanger, Rae Skillern, R. G. Soper, John Stiles, Ralph Talbot, Jack Underwood and Horace Falls.

Mr. Depinet, who was born in Erie, Pa., found his first job in a film exchange in Dallas, in 1908, and has been identified with the business continuously since then. In 1910 the exchange operated by his employer, J. E. Pearce, became incorporated into General Film, and Mr. Depinet, having become a salesman, went along to continue in the South, later joining Universal Pictures as Southern division manager, with headquarters at Dallas.

That was in 1911, and he filled that post until 1924, when he was transferred to New York as one of the three sales directors of Universal.

Two years later Mr. Depinet went with First National as a member of its sales cabinet, and later he became general manager of that company. When Warner Brothers bought First National he was appointed general sales manager of the merged companies.

In March, 1931, he became vice-president of RKO Pathe, serving until the consolidation of that organization with RKO Radio Pictures, whereupon he became vice-president in charge of world distribution.

Hearing on RKO Plan April 4th

A scheduled hearing on the reorganization plan for RKO Radio on Monday was postponed to April 4th by Judge William Bondy in federal court in New York. Hamilton C. Rickaby, attorney for the Atlas Corporation, proponent of the plan, promised Judge Bondy that "a concrete proposal for amendments to the proposed plan will be ready within two weeks or shortly thereafter."

Opposition to the delay was voiced by Nathan Rosenberg, attorney for H. Cassell & Co., holders of $150,000 in debentures, and Albert Reiss, holder of five bonds, who appeared in person. Judge Bondy told Rickaby that all further adjournments would be limited to one week or a shorter period unless the amendments were presented to the court. Mr. Rickaby refused to reveal the present status of negotiations and said that any statement would be "premature and confusing." Abraham K. Weber, stockholders' attorney, demanded information about the situation of stockholders under the amendment, but Judge Bondy did not compel any disclosures.

Mr. Rosenberg presented a petition to permit his intervention in the reorganization proceedings, but his application was also adjourned to April 4. Judge Bondy indicated a reluctance to admit new parties to the litigation after the expiration of five years. Mr. Rosenberg contended that the uncertainty about the amendments was depressing the market for RKO debentures.

Optimism Stressed In Schenck Address

Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the board of Twentieth Century-Fox and president of the Motion Picture Producers Association, over a nationwide radio hook-up Monday night said that the motion picture industry is doing its utmost to further prosperity and "optimism has always been the guiding force of the motion picture business."

Mr. Schenck spoke as the industry's representative in a symposium on "The Spring Outlook in Business." He said that "never in the history of the industry have so many important and pretentious pictures been placed in production."

Mr. Schenck said that the total cost of production in Hollywood mounted from $135,000,000 in 1935 to $165,000,000 in 1937 "because the public demands bigger and bigger pictures each year."

He said that "employment is afforded to some 281,500 in the United States through distribution and theatre operation, and an additional 50,000 in Hollywood are engaged in production. The industry pays more than 100 million dollars annually in taxes. The 1937 payroll total for Hollywood alone was 91 million dollars. The investment of the industry in the United States is 2 billion dollars. Studio investment in Hollywood totals 108 million."

"To the important duty of maintaining the highest possible standard of entertainment, and thus contributing our share to national prosperity," Mr. Schenck concluded, "the association of motion picture producers of America pledges itself and all its resources."

Paramount-Publix Litigation Ended

The reorganization proceedings of Paramount-Publix Corporation ended on Saturday after five years of receivership litigation when federal judge Alfred C. Cox signed an order approving and ratifying the acts of Charles D. Hilles, Eugene W. Leake, Charles E. Richardson and Louis Horowitz as trustees, and Mr. Hilles and Adolph Zukor as receivers of the debtor. Paramount Pictures, Inc., took over the debtor's assets under a reorganization plan on July 1, 1935.

The order approved the final accounting and discharged the trustees and receivers. An injunction restraining suit against the debtor was continued indefinitely in order to have the court retain jurisdiction over any actions which may be brought.

Judge Cox granted final allowances of $8,870 to Price, Waterhouse and Company accountants, and $8,247 to Root, Clark, Buckner and Ballantine, attorneys for the trustees.

The only suit pending is one by A. B. Momand, who received permission last week to bring an anti-trust suit in the United States district court for the western district of Oklahoma. His claim filed in 1934, for $4,960,512, is expected to be liquidated in the Oklahoma action, but Judge Cox reserved final action for himself. Detail of Mr. Momand's suit is on page 25, column 3.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Gathering Speed

As the Winter season drew to a calendar close, Hollywood's production scheme took on a more roseate hue. Twelve pictures were started; 11 finished. This is the largest turnover that the community has known in weeks.

RKO-Radio started three films. George O'Brien began his new RKO contract with "Gun Law." Rita Oehmen will play the feminine lead. The principals in "Muddled Deal" are Joan Fontaine, Derrick de Marney, a newcomer from England, and Cecil Kellaway. "Blind Alibi" will feature Richard Dix, Whitney Bourne and Eduardo Ciannelli.

Universal Starts Two

Two new pictures were started by Universal. Dick Purcell, Beryl Wallace and Larry Blake are the leading players in "Air Devils." Paul Kelly, William Gargan, Nan Grey and Robert Wilcox will be featured in "Riot Patrol."

Warner Brothers started two productions. The first, "Boy Meets Girl," should be of more than ordinary importance inasmuch as it will mark the return of James Cagney to the studio from which he rose to screen fame. Others in the company are his old mates, Pat O'Brien and Frank McHugh, and Marie Wilson and Dick Foran. The second picture, "Mr. Chump," will present Johnny Davis, Lola Lane, Donald Briggs, Chester Clute and Penny Singleton.

At MGM, where things have been comparatively quiet for some time, two pictures started. The leading players in "Yellow Jack" are Robert Montgomery, Virginia Bruce, Buddy Ebsen, Andy Devine, Sam Levene and Janet Beecher. "Mlle. Froufrou" will present Luise Rainer, Melvyn Douglas, Robert Young and H. B. Warner. "Romance on the Run" started at Republic. The cast lists Grace Bradley, Edward Brophy, Patricia Ellis, Donald Woods and William Demarest.

One Started at Fox

Work began at 20th Century-Fox on "Racing Blood," in which Lynn Bari and Michael Whelan will play the leads.

Monogram's contribution to the new work is "Ridin' Gents." Tim McCoy is the star, with Suzanne Kaaren, Karl Hackett and John St. Polis included in support.

Of the 10 completed pictures, 20th Century-Fox accounted for two. Eight other companies shared the balance. Victor McLaglen, Louise Hovick and Brian Donlevy head the cast in "Battle of Broadway," in which Raymond Walburn, Lynn Bari, Jane Darwell, Robert Kelland, Sammy Cohen, Esther Muir, Eddie Holden, Hattie McDaniel, Paul Irving and Andrew Tombes will also be seen. "Four Men and a Prayer" will present Loretta Young, Richard Green,

RETORT ELEGANT

A few reporters were summoned to a studio projection room preview. Time scheduled for the showing was 3:00 P. M.

Minutes dragged into quarter hours, to half an hour, and eventually an hour passed and still no picture.

"What's the delay?" piped an outlander from the East, unaccustomed to the manner in which Hollywood procrastinates.

"We're waiting for the producer," countered a publicity department employee.

"What the heck are we waiting for him for?" asked the visiting representative of one of New York's biggest papers. "He's seen the picture, hasn't he?"

They put on a newsreel and a cartoon before the producer arrived promptly one hour and a half late.

George Sanders, J. Edward Bromberg, David Niven, Reginald Denny, C. Aubrey Smith, Alan Hale, William Henry and Barry Fitzgerald.

MGM finished "Test Pilot." The principal personalities are Clark Gable, Myrna Loy, Spencer Tracy (this year's Academy Best Actor trophy winner), Lionel Barrymore, Ted Pearson, Virginia Grey and Priscilla Lawson.

Harold Lloyd Film Completed

For Paramount release Harold Lloyd Productions finished "Professor Beware." Lloyd and Phyllis Welch are the stars. The support lists Raymond Walburn, Sterling Holloway, Mary Lou Lender, Guinn Williams, War Bond, William Frawley and Montague Love.

"Go Chase Yourself" was completed at Radio. It will present Joe Penner, Lucille Ball, Vicki Lester, Fritz Feld, Bradley Page, Richard Lane, Tom Kennedy, Granville Bates, George Irving, Margaret Armstrong, Frank M. Thomas, William Franey and Jack Carson.

Republic removed "Outlaws of Sonora" from the active line. It features Bob Livingston, Max Terhune, Ray Corrigan, Jean Joyce, Stelita, Otis Harlan and Gloria Rich.

With Tim McCoy and Betty Compson as the principals, Monogram finished "Rene-gade Law."

At Universal "The Lady in the Morgue" moved on to the cutting rooms. The cast includes Preston Foster, Frank Jenks, Rowland Drew, Patricia Ellis, Tom Jackson, Morgan Wallace, Joseph Downing, Al Hill, James Robbins, Stanley Price, Gordon Hart, Gordon Elliott, Minerva Urecal and Rollo

Lloyd. Also moved was "Sinners in Paradise," in which John Boles, Madge Evans, Bruce Cabot, Marion Martin, Gene Lockhart, Nana Bryant, Charlotte Wynters, Willie Fung, Milburn Stone and Morgan Conway appear.

Warners finished "When Were You Born?" It will present Anna May Wong, Margaret Lindsay, Lola Lane, Anthony Averill, Larry Williams, Charles Wilson, James Stephenson and Leonard Mudie.

Remarque Sequel

One of the most elaborate sets of the season has been erected on the MGM lot for the filming of Erich Maria Remarque's "Three Comrades," the German author's companion piece to "All Quiet" and "The Road Back." The set, a replica of a German village in which the action takes place, is of permanent construction and will remain for future epics. With real buildings and with its streets paved with stone and brick the village covers four and a half acres.

Destroying the realism for the casual visitor on the lot, however, is a mammoth tarpaulin tent covering the whole village, erected because it is the contention of Karl Freund, camera man for Frank Borzage, director, that better film results are obtained with artificial illumination than with natural sunlight, even in California.

In the leads are Robert Young, Robert Taylor, Franchot Tone and Margaret Sullivan.

Itemized

With the RKO studio personnel situation definitely at rest, production plans for the year are proceeding. Rufus LeMaire, who has been a member of the production staffs at Warner Brothers, Universal and MGM, will be assistant to Pandro S. Berman, executive producer at the studio.

Paramount declined to exercise its option on the services of Franciska Gaal, Hungarian actress who appeared in DeMille's "The Buccaneer," but in giving her release the studio obtained a commitment for her to appear with Bing Crosby in "Paris Honey-moon," to start May 15th.

Plans for the return of Hope Hampton to the screen under the Universal banner have proceeded to the point of selecting a director, S. Sylvan Simon, for her assigned vehicle, "Road to Reno."

'CONSERVATIVE' BLOC WINS EQUITY BALLOT

Group Opposed to Admission of WPA Players Elect Six to Nominating Committee

The conservative faction of Actors' Equity Association, consolidated by recent violent disputes within the organization over policy and administration, won a decisive victory this week when its entire slate of candidates for six elective places on the official nominating committee of nine was declared elected.

Francis N. Verdi, author and actor, who led the conservative bloc during the disputes which preceded the balloting, said the results made certain a victory in the annual elections in June for his group and insured that "Communist amateurs from the Federal Theatre will be kept out of Equity with their propaganda".

The signed ballots, counted Saturday afternoon by a special committee which opened the sealed ballot boxes, returned 12 of the 18 nominees in the following order: Frank Craven, Selma Royle, Wallace Ford, Thomas W. Ross, Charles Dow Clark, Nance O'Neill, Dudley Diggs, Alfred Lunt, Kenneth McKenna, Margaret Wycherly, Francis Fuller and Orson Welles.

The conservative candidates, the first six on the list, were the only publicly announced bloc. It was reported that the so-called radical faction was backing those who finished in the second group of six but several of these actors denied that they were running on any particular ticket.

Mr. Verdi, commenting further on the election results, said: "The radicals attempted to throw out a smoke screen at the last minute by nominating several worthy people whom everybody in the theatre knows and respects. This didn't work and we stopped the subversive forces in their tracks. There is now no possible doubt that an administration will be in control of Equity after June which will represent the wishes of the members at large and be a credit to the best traditions of the theatre."

Mr. Verdi also expressed the belief that Equity would be in a better position to influence the Federal Theatre against the production of any more "Communist propaganda plays."

In the debate preceding the election Mr. Verdi precipitated the matter which had been fermenting for weeks by charging that Philip Loeb, a leader of the alleged "radical" group, had started a movement to bring amateur actors from the Federal Theatre Project into Equity and criticizing Burgess Meredith, acting president of Equity, for "allowing the WPA to drop experienced Equity members and keep these amateurs, who couldn't earn 40 cents a week in the commercial theatre."

Master Contract for Exchanges Approved

Agreement on a master contract for employees in exchanges conducted by distributing companies throughout the country was completed this week at a meeting between committees representing the distributors and the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees acting for the Film Exchange Employees' Union.

The contract will serve as a basic agreement under which the local agreements in the 31 exchange centers will operate. Between 4,500 and 5,000 employees will be subject to the terms, including inspectors, inspectresses, shipping department workers and poster clerks.

Consummation of the master contract followed months of negotiation which had been proceeding since the last of the local agreements was completed last fall.

Musicians Ready to Negotiate

Arrangements for the proposed conferences between American Federation of Musicians officials and the producers' labor committee on the question of reemployment of musicians by the studios will be made immediately upon the completion of the Federation's meetings with independent broadcasters, Joseph N. Weber, AFM president, said this week.

Academy Appoints Process Committee

The Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences has appointed a committee of specialists to consider problems in process, special effects and trick photography.

Recent improvements in technique of background photography in the studios have necessitated the development of new arc carbons and lamp and projector equipment. Some of this equipment, notably a new type process projector, has been completed and will be tested by the committee on behalf of the producing companies participating in the Academy's Research Council cooperative technical program. Other equipment, principally a new type projector lamp and specially designed carbons, is now being developed.

The committee will serve to correlate all studio requirements and to assist the manufacturers.

Arkansas and Wisconsin Exhibitors To Convene

The annual spring convention of the Independent Theatre Owners of Arkansas will be held at the Marion Hotel, Little Rock, Arkansas, April 10th and 11th. The convention will consider a special program on advertising for the theatre. Annual election of officers will be held at the meeting. The convention will conclude with a banquet and dance on the 11th.

Directors of the Independent Theatres Protective Association of Wisconsin have set April 5th and 6th as the tentative dates for the organization's annual convention. The date is subject to approval by members.

Urges Deference To Audience Taste

Recognition of an increasing discrimination among audiences and a wider critical faculty on the part of the public would bring the motion picture industry "a successful and lasting way of counteracting the recession," according to an editorial in the current issue of Cinema Progress, published under the auspices of the American Institute of Cinematography.

Signed by Boris V. Morkovin, editor of the magazine, the editorial sets forth that since 1935, when the publication was launched, "a new and influential group of 'fans' has come into being and is playing an increasing role in directing picture trends."

After listing a series of outstanding pictures released in the last two years, Mr. Morkovin continues:

"The motion picture industry can overcome more easily business recessions if it will accept this twofold approach already established by some of its far-sighted leaders: Cooperate more sincerely and actively with the new motion picture-conscious audience in order to distinguish and foresee its demands, and seek new blood, train future artists and experts. . . ."

The magazine includes a lead article on the growth of documentary films and their place in the industry, stories on production, newsreels, music in pictures and the place of the cinema in world affairs as well as departments on films in science and education and reviews of films for schools.

The advisory board of the magazine includes Edgar Dale, Howard Estabrook, Garland Greever, J. Eugene Harley, Henry Hathaway, Vierling Kiersey, Rouben Mamoulian, Victor Milner, Dudley Nichols and Frederick Thrasher.

AMPA Officers Up for Reelection

The present officers of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers constitute the regular slate for reelection it was announced this week following a report submitted to the membership by the nominating committee. Officers to be reelected are Ralph Rolan, president; Paul Lazarus, vice-president; Lester Thompson, secretary, and Paul Benjamin, treasurer.

The directors are to include the officers and Vincent Trotta, Martin Starr, Mort Blumenstock, Gordon White and Eli Sugarman. Rutgers Neilson was nominated as trustee for three years and Hap Hadley was named counsellor to the United States Chamber of Commerce. Auditing committee nominees are Herbert Berg, chairman, Al Sherman and Ralph Lund.

Changes in the annual advertising awards were explained by Mr. Trotta at the meeting which received the nominating committee report. Seven awards are provided.

Earle McGill, head of the casting department of the Columbia Broadcasting System and director of some of the network's programs was to speak on "Radio and Motion Pictures" at the luncheon meeting Thursday of this week.

COLUMBIA PICTURES, EASTMAN AND KEITH COMPANIES REPORT PROFITS

Admission Tax Collections Increase; British Provincial Circuit and Consolidated Film Industries Declare Dividends

Eastman Kodak Company's sales and net profit for 1937 established a new record for the company, Frank W. Lovejoy, president, announced this week in a financial report showing the company's earnings totaled $22,347,345 as compared to $18,906,371 in the preceding year. Sales increased 13.6 per cent.

Also reporting an increase in net profit for 1937 as against 1936 was Keith-Albee-Orpheum Corporation and subsidiary companies. A decrease from $1,056,257.20 in 1936 to $1,042,628.37 last year was reported by B. F. Keith Corporation. Columbia Pictures' net profit for the six months ended December 25, 1937, dropped to $451,061.20 from $629,771.93 for the corresponding six-month period in 1936.

Other financial news of the week included the monthly report of the Internal Revenue Bureau, showing an increase in admission tax collections for February as against the corresponding month in 1937; the declaration of a 22½ per cent dividend for shareholders of Provincial Cinematograph Theatres, English circuit associated with Gaumont British; the declaration of a 25 per cent dividend on the $2 preferred stock of Consolidated Film Industries, Inc.; and the report of Allen's Toronto Theatres, Ltd., revealing a net income of $18,201 in 1937 as compared to $16,309 in 1936.

The Eastman 1937 income is equal, after preferred dividends, to $9.76 each on the 2,250,921 outstanding shares of common stock, compared with $8.23 a share for 1936.

"The decline in general business in the last quarter of year did not affect the 1937 operations of the company to any great extent," Mr. Lovejoy said.

Total assets in foreign countries on December 31st, amounted to $37,446,182 included in which were fixed assets of $16,144,837, after the deduction of depreciation reserves, and net current assets of $21,301,345.

Net sales for the year totaled $136,114,878, against $119,800,209 in 1936.

The consolidated balance sheet of the company and wholly owned subsidiaries, as of Dec. 25, 1937, showed current assets of $89,790,230, including cash and securities of $22,587,421 and inventories of $50,112,595, while current liabilities were $24,197,120. As of Dec. 26, 1936, current assets were $91,763,168, including cash and marketable securities of $35,270,772 and inventories of $38,528,181. The reduced current ratio, Mr. Lovejoy said, was due to expansion of plant and improvements.

RKO's Net at $20.23 a Share

RKO's net profit for the year, after all charges including a provision in the amount of $11,875 for surtax on undistributed profits, was $1,300,887.77, equal to $20.23 per share on the 64,304 shares of 7 per cent cumulative preferred stock now outstanding.

B. F. Keith's net profit was $1,042,628.37 as against $1,056,257.20 in 1936. Both figures were computed after all charges including a provision for surtax on undistributed profit.

Columbia's Consolidated Statement of Operations

Columbia Pictures Corporation this week issued its consolidated statement of operations and earned surplus account for the six months ended December 25th, 1937. The statement, which follows, includes the operations of the corporation in foreign territories and of its foreign subsidiary companies for the six months ended November 27th, 1937, converted at the prevailing rates of exchange, except depreciation of fixed assets, which is at dollar cost.

Columbia's Profits

Columbia's net earnings of $451,061.20 for the six months ended December 25th is equal to $1 a share on the outstanding common stock. The net for the six months ended December 25th, 1936 was equal to $1.51 per share on the common.

For the three months ended December 25th, 1937, the net amounted to $303,749.94, equivalent to 73 cents per share on common stock.

The balance sheet shows current assets of $12,550,122.84 and current liabilities of $2,124,439.44. Working capital was approximately $10,400,000.

Admission Taxes Gain

Admission tax collections during February totaled $1,659,641, against $1,473,353 in February, 1937, and $1,353,415 in January of this year. For the first two months of the current year, collections on admissions amounted to $3,013,- 056, compared with $2,979,029 for the corresponding period last year. For the seven months of the fiscal year on which the government operates, however, they amounted to $14,467,073, a gain of $1,267,967 over the $13,199,206 collected in the same period last year.

Provincial Cinematograph

This year, for the first time in the history of Provincial Cinematograph Theatres, the ordinary shareholders are to receive, in addition to the regular 15 per cent dividend, an extra payment of 7½ per cent under their participating interest. Preferred ordinary shareholders will get 9½ per cent as against 7½ per cent last year. Profits in 1937 amounted to £506,701

Monogram Stock

Acquisition in January of 2,200 options for Monogram Pictures common stock by W. Ray Johnston was reported this week by the Securities and Exchange Commission in Washington.

Baltimore Ad Rate Controversy Ends

First run theatres in Baltimore and the Baltimore Sun and Evening Sun this week reached an agreement after more than a year's controversy on advertising rates. During the controversy the newspapers reduced editorial space given to films and refused to review pictures.

The newspapers had demanded $1.10 per agate line, which the theatres resented. Under the new arrangement the higher rate continues in effect for advertisements on the film page, but the newspapers offer the theatres the opportunity to buy space on the page adjoining the film page at 60 cents a line. This applies to all insertions of 100 lines or more.

Theatres in Baltimore that agreed to the arrangement are Loew's Century and Parkway, the Warner, Keith's, Hippodrome and New. The Loew houses were represented in the negotiations by Oscar A. Doob, the circuit's advertising and publicity director, Carter Barron, district manager, and William Saxton, city manager. Local managers represented the other theatres.

January Exports At $1,171,901

Exports of motion picture commodities by the United States during January of this year amounted to $1,171,901, according to a bulletin issued this week by Nathan D. Golden, chief of the motion picture Division of the Department of Commerce. Exports of cameras and projectors of both standard and substandard gauges totaled $156,273, the report showed, with an additional $768 worth of the same equipment going to United States possessions.

Foreign shipments of sensitized film of all widths amounted to $328,488, with exposed film reaching a total of $487,709. Foreign sound equipment exports amounted to $167,317 for the month, it was shown. Exports of film, both sensitized and exposed in all widths, to Hawaii, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands brought $31,346.

Completing Pathe Laboratory

The Pathe Film service laboratory in the Pathe Building, New York, is being completed and is expected to be opened in about three weeks. The laboratory will be an auxiliary to the Pathe laboratory at Bound Brook, N. J., and will handle Pathe News negatives and first prints, as well as work for outside companies. Release prints on Pathe News will continue to be handled at Bound Brook. Charles Tronolone will be in charge.

"Over the Wall" Serialized

The Warner Brothers-Cosmopolitan picture, "Over the Wall," featuring Dick Foran, June Travis and John Litel, is being serialized in 122 newspapers throughout the country this month. The picture is scheduled for national release on April 2nd.

Costume Workers Launch Drive

Increased wages, time and a half for overtime, and a 40-hour week are being sought by the Theatrical Costume Workers' Federal Labor Union in New York.

RKO Radio Changes Foreign Personnel

Leon Wynbergen has been appointed manager of RKO Radio's recently established office in Belgium with headquarters in Brussels. Ned Clarke, who has been acting manager at the Belgian office, will return to Paris.

Reginald Armour, general European manager, has appointed M. Czaban to the post of Poland manager, with headquarters at Warsaw, replacing H. Lehman, resigned. Mr. Armour also appointed Marcel Gentel as sales manager for RKO Radio Films, S. A. of Paris, replacing S. M. Livingston, also resigned.

Two new offices have been opened by RKO in Brazil. Bruno Cheli, Brazilian general manager has named Jose M. Neri-rques exchange head at Juiz de Fora, and Hermogenes Americano as manager at Bello Horizonte.

Production Plan For East Studied

The Central Trades and Labor Council, New York City governing organization of affiliated groups of the American Federation of Labor, is still considering a plan to establish a production center in the Borough of Queens, New York. It was reiterated this week that the plan is designed to interest major film companies in transferring some production to the east.

A committee consisting of Thomas Murtha, Local 4, Stagehands Union; Sal J. Scoppa, business manager of Motion Picture Studio Mechanics, Local 52, and Charles Sinnegan, business agent of Electrotypers Union, appointed by the council, is making an industrial survey of the Borough. Dr. George F. Ryan, vice-president of the Long Island City Savings Bank, is assisting the committee in the survey.

Boy Scouts Sponsoring Film

The Boy Scouts of America will officially sponsor and aid in the production of a picture to be produced by Universal, which will present a story of the life, color and adventures of the national organization, it was said by the company this week. Irving Crump, editor of Boy's Life, official publication of the organization, is now in Hollywood working on an original story for the picture.

UA Completes Preview Theatre

United Artists has completed a private preview theatre in the home office in New York which incorporates a number of innovations developed by Ben Schlanger, architect. The theatre seats 50 in club size chairs and is completely sound-proofed and air-conditioned. The room is lighted by luminous walls and ceilings.

Four on Job 18 Years

Four employees of the Loew theatre, London, Ont., this week completed 18 years of service with the house. They are Fred Jackson, manager; G. Russell Courtney and Alexander McLeish, projectionists, and James Mairana, property man.

Foreign Writers Under Scrutiny

In a concerted move to establish a list of actual working film newspaper and magazine correspondents for foreign publications, in New York, home office foreign publicity heads have agreed to a tentative list of 93 accredited correspondents. The list will be subjected to further scrutiny before it is permanently adopted. The tentative list was reduced from 183 names on previous lists.

Heretofore each company has carried an individual listing of such correspondents. The new consolidated list, which is available to all companies, is designed to eliminate inactive correspondents and also those who, supposedly representing foreign newspapers, would obtain stills from the various companies and then sell them. Other correspondents, who wrote nothing on motion pictures, would apply for passes to Broadway theatres. It was discovered that the five distributors operating theatres had the longest lists of correspondents.

In Hollywood, only accredited correspondents are allowed in the studios, on cards issued only on the presentation of proper credentials.

A revised listing of accredited correspondents in Hollywood compiled this week reveals that there are now 353 names on the list, of which 63 are foreign representatives of newspapers and magazines. The complete breakdown shows: newspapers, 180; fan magazines, 27; freelance writers, 45, and radio representatives, 38.

Film Executives Hear Palestine Fund Appeal

A gathering of persons of prominence in the motion picture world attended a luncheon by and in behalf of the amusement division of the United Palestine Appeal, and a reception for Dr. Abba Hillel Silver of Cleveland, at the Hotel Astor Wednesday.

Louis Nizer, co-chairman with Leo Spitz, presided, introducing Dr. Silver, who made an appeal for the Palestine fund.

"Civilization does not progress by a continuous line, but by steps forward and then back. This is a period of recession, and in such periods all minorities suffer, among them the Jews." He discussed today's affairs in Austria and expressed alarm for other centers in eastern Europe. The movement is to give in Palestine "a home for the Jewish people which they can call their own." Pledges totaling several thousand dollars were made at the luncheon.

Theatreman Share Oil Well

L. C. Griffith, president of the Griffith Amusement Company, Oklahoma City, and the Kadane interests of Frederick, Oklahoma, both Oklahoma theatre owners, brought in the discovery well in the new K. M. A. Oil Field near Wichita Falls, Texas. The Kadaness have sold their three theatres in Frederick to the Griffith organization and are devoting their time to the development of their oil interests while Mr. Griffith has sold a part of his oil interests and has made an additional investment in the Griffith organization in Oklahoma, Texas and New Mexico.

THEATRE 'PURGED', CAMERAMEN HELD; FILM OUTLOOK DARK IN AUSTRIA

Lily Pons Cancels Vienna Concerts; Hollywood Anti-Nazi League Asks Boycott; Reinhardt Reported Arrested

While Austria's political future appears to be circumscribed as a territory within Adolf Hitler's Third Reich, not so definite is the future of Hollywood and other foreign motion pictures there.

"The position of foreign motion pictures, particularly American, will be made extremely difficult in Austria if negotiations now under way result in the expected facilitation of commercial exchange with Germany," wrote Hans Lorient, MOTION PICTURE HERALD correspondent, from Vienna.

American film and motion picture equipment exports to Austria will decrease under the new Nazi control if events follow the course they took when Hitler's party took control of Germany. The Nazi influence began to exert itself in Austrian film imports last year, when Austria took 128 American films, as compared with 155 the year before, and raised its German film imports to 120 last year, from 112 in 1936.

While distribution executives of American companies, both at home offices and on the scene of the Hitler Putsch in Vienna, were speculating over the future of their films in Austria, American newsreels were rushing first-hand scenes of the historical event from steamers to U. S. screens, the while attempting to trace the whereabouts of some of their cameramen, imprisoned in Vienna.

Donald Ogden Stewart, motion picture scenarist, as chairman, together with player, writer and director members of Hollywood's Anti-Nazi League, asked the United States Government this week to boycott Germany because of its annexation of Austria, filing its request in a telegram sent to Cordell Hull, Secretary of State at Washington.

Lily Pons, RKO screen and opera singer, was the first theatrical person on record in this country to cancel a scheduled appearance in Vienna, press wires from Detroit carrying her announcement that she would not appear for dates in Vienna in April "because I do not want to be in a place that is in such a mess, and because I do not approve of what the Nazis are doing to culture."

Theatre under "Purge"

Cables from Vienna told how Hitler's National Socialists already had started to "purge" the theatre, turning immediate attention to Vienna's symphonic orchestras, then to the two state theatres, the Opera and Burg, and thence to three private playhouses, unnamed. It was announced that Max Reinhardt's theatre would be reopened soon, under strict National Socialist management with "Aryan" casts, and that two Austrian producers, Rudolph Beer and Karl Reimer, had "resigned."

Mr. Reinhardt himself was reported under arrest in Vienna. His work in Hollywood concerned the production of "Midsummer Night's Dream" for Warner Brothers, three years ago.

From the standpoint of Hollywood motion pictures Austria appears to be a losing market for the future. "Even if no drastic measures are undertaken against Vienna branches of American companies, their position will be

REMOVAL OF SIGNS SOUGHT BY DETROIT

An early trial of Detroit's suit to force removal of all advertising signs now projecting over sidewalks along the newly widened sections of Woodward avenue will be asked this week, according to Vance G. Ingalls, assistant corporation counsel.

George Murphy, recorder's court judge, last week dismissed an injunction which had been obtained by the owners of several Woodward Avenue theatres that have large and expensive projecting signs and which restrained the city from forcing them to remove the signs.

threatened by an increased Austrian output and the likely flood of German product, for German pictures are popular in Austria," wrote Hans Lorient, the HERALD's correspondent in the former Austrian capital. "In addition," he continued, "if the anti-Semitic laws, similar to those in Germany, are passed, that class of theatregoers which especially favors American films will be most affected."

"Competition of French pictures already had been taking playing time away from American product because of extended runs," Mr. Lorient said, adding: "Austrian producers are increasing their schedules. Germany is their most important market, and easier conditions of payment may bring a boom in Austrian trade. It is expected that Germany will be amenable to increasing the annual number (now 14) of privileged Austrian films imported without quota tickets under strict compliance with the Aryan limitations."

"Thirty to 40 films could be produced annually in the three big Austrian studios: Sosenhugel, Sivering and Schonbrunn. German companies also seem inclined to produce in Austria, partly on account of lower wages and partly because of the beauty of the Austrian landscape. Austria will have to conform, more than ever, to the requirements of the Aryan paragraph."

More Dubbings

"American companies are dubbing their films into German in greater and greater numbers. Every American film company has increased its output of German versions, some dubbed in Austria by Selenophon, some in France, and the balance in Germany, to decrease frozen credits."

"In the coming season, German versions of 18 films will be released in Austria by Metro, 12 by Fox, four by Paramount, two by United Artists and one by RKO."

"The dubbed versions of American films are shown only in neighborhood and provincial theatres, the patrons of which do not understand any language besides German."

"According to statistics from the Ministry of Commerce, Austrian film trade shows an important credit balance for the year 1937. Austria exported films in the value of 12,400,000 schillings and imported films in the value of 5,700,000 schillings. The 15 Austrian features produced in 1937 ran in 101 copies and the 185 short subjects were shown in 2,059 copies."

The number of American films released in Vienna, previously quoted, and said to total 128 in 1937, compared with 155 in 1936, against 120 German films in 1937 and 112 in 1936, was tabulated by the Vienna Chamber of Commerce. The Chamber said that there was a total of 328 releases from all sources. It is presumed that these include both features and short subjects. France released 23 films in Austria in 1937, against 16 in 1936; England, 17 and 11, respectively, for 1937 and 1936. The Chamber also said that Austrian production in 1937 dropped from 23 in 1936 to 15 in 1937.

The S.S. Queen Mary's arrival in New York last weekend started the race between American newsreels to get first place on the country's screen with actual pictures of the Hitler Putsch. The films were shown on Tuesday. Nearly all had obtained adequate coverage.

Marcel Rebiere shipped films from Vienna to March of Time in New York and that magazine newsreel's management made available part of the footage to the other reels.

The Nazis arrested Edouard Thule, of RKO Pathe News, and Julius Jonak, of Universal's staff. Both were released on representations of the American Embassy in Vienna. Mr. Thule, however, was rearrested.

Hugo Riesenfeld's Daughter Guest of Honor at Party

Miss Janet Riesenfeld, daughter of Hugo Riesenfeld, one of the earliest of the important musicians to be associated with the motion picture industry, was guest of honor Thursday afternoon at a cocktail party in the Rainbow Room, Rockefeller Center.

The party was given by Funk & Wagnalls Company to celebrate the publication of Miss Riesenfeld's first book, "Dancer in Madrid."

Mr. Riesenfeld, who was born in Vienna and once served as concert master for Gustave Mahler at the Vienna Opera House, first became associated with the film industry when he joined the late S. L. "Roxy" Rothafel as conductor at the Rialto Theatre, New York City. Later he also became conductor of the Rivoli and Criterion theatre orchestras and then succeeded Mr. Rothafel as managing and producing director of the three houses. He also served as director of all musical productions for United Artists. Mr. Riesenfeld now lives in Los Angeles.

In her book, Miss Riesenfeld, a dancer, tells of her experiences in Madrid where she went, at the outset of the current civil war, to fulfill a dancing engagement and to join her fiancé, Jaime Kastanys, whom she had met in Hollywood. Mr. Kastanys was killed in the war.

400 RCA Installations in France

The number of RCA sound installations in France has been steadily increasing during recent months and they now total about 400, according to Van Ness Philip, Photophone Export Manager. Among recent installations are those in the Theatre Chave, at Marseilles; the Regent, at Vincennes; the St. Michel, in Paris; the Varieties, at Beauvais; the Select, at Fumel, and the Rex, at St. Clare. The Marignan-Pathé, in Paris, used almost daily for film trade shows, has replaced its old sound with RCA High Fidelity equipment.

The Joy of Living

(RKO Radio)

Romantic Frolic

Probably the first thing to tell the clients about this headlong, high pressure love story is that the Irene Dunne of "The Awful Truth" makes of her part in it a similar and no whit less sparkling demonstration of the talent which, so many believed, entitled her to the Academy award she didn't quite get. Showmen not averse to comparing one company's product with another's might very profitably go the rest of the way and liken her present vehicle to that one with complete assurance that the comparison will not backfire.

This time Miss Dunne's partner in pursuit of happiness is Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., who might not care to have his performance compared with that of Cary Grant in the Columbia comedy but no doubt would waive the point in behalf of box office. His portrayal of a sagely mad young millionaire is well worth advertising by this or any means and suffers not at all by this or any comparison.

It is by no means necessary, of course, to hitch "Joy of Living" to the tail of any other picture. It contains such marketable names as Alice Brady, Guy Kibbee, Eric Blore, Billy Gilbert, Franklin Pangborn, John Qualen and Warren Hymer, and it bears the directorial signature of Tay Garnett. The original story by Dorothy and Herbert Fields received the widely respected ministrations of Gene Towne, Graham Baker and Allan Scott, the music is from the dependable pen of Jerome Kern, and Felix Young, producer, gave all hands plenty of head.

Miss Dunne plays "Maggie Garret," $10,000-a-week stage, screen and radio star, and Mr. Fairbanks is "Dan," carefree Back Bay Bostonian, determined to win her away from her art and a family (played by Miss Brady, Mr. Kibbee and others) interested only in her earning capacity.

The time is now, and the place New York, including Rockefeller Center. The action is brisk, the humor clean, the dialogue fresh and the acting tiptop in all departments.

Previewed at the Pantages theatre, Hollywood, to a resounding reception.—WILLIAM R. WEAVER.

Judge Hardy's Children

(Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

A Family Affair

The preceding pictures in MGM's Judge Hardy series, "A Family Affair" and "You're Only Young Once," were merely warming-up exercises. In "Judge Hardy's Children" the idea strikes its stride and the series not only threatens to become stern competition for any other company's "continued episode" productions, but to excel many more pretentiously conceived films.

"Judge Hardy's Children" is down to earth all-family entertainment. It is produced in neighborly fashion. In adapting the Aurania Rouverol characters, Kay Van Riper has written a screen play that breathes the spirit of the average middle class American family. Intelligently directed by George B. Seitz, it is played in like manner by Lewis Stone, Cecelia Parker, Fay Holden, Betty Ross Clark, Ann Rutherford, Robert Whitney, Jacqueline Laurent, Ruth Hussey, Jonathan Hale, Janet Beecher, Leonard Penn and Boyd Crawford. The star of the show is Mickey Rooney. Literally the picture is pretty much a vehicle for that talented youngster. His star-making performance should provoke much favorable comment. No exhibitor, particularly those operating small town and neighborhood houses, should have difficulty in selling the show.

"Judge Hardy" receives a federal appointment and takes the family to Washington. The social whirl bedazzles daughter "Marian" to such an extent that she wants to forget all about her hometown sweetheart "Wayne." The scamp son, "Andrew," falls in puppy love with French miss, "Suzanne."

"Marian's" gossip involves the "Judge" in a predicament that threatens disgrace. Yet from "Andrew" he gets an idea that enables him to take all the starch out of those who threaten him. Back in Carverville, the youngsters, "Marian" and "Andrew," resume their romances with their home town sweethearts, "Wayne" and "Polly."

Previewed at the Alexander theatre, Glendale. The audience seemed to be of the opinion the picture was made especially for it. Rooney's first appearance was greeted with applause and every time he walked into the picture the crowd showed its enthusiasm.—GUS MCCARTHY.

Produced and distributed by MGM. Directed by George B. Seitz. Screen play by Kay Van Riper. Based upon characters created by Aurania Rouverol. Musical score by Dave Snell. Ben Lewis, film editor. Photographed by Lester White. P. C. A. Certificate No. 4173. Running time, when seen in Glendale, 75 minutes. Release date: March 25, 1938. General audience classification.

Bluebeard's Eighth Wife

(Paramount)

Continental Comedy

No showman having an appropriate appropriation for exploitation expense is likely to consider himself hard pressed for ways and means of getting patrons in to see Gary Cooper and Claudette Colbert in a work so tantalizingly titled as "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife." But if such there be, the cast contains additional names of box office potency for use in supplemental billing and the play itself is something of a tradition in its class. Available also, and an unquestionably powerful box office factor save perhaps in those communities which didn't take to his last previous enterprise, is the name of Ernst Lubitsch as producer and director. It would be, it may be said with some definiteness, a pretty stupid, myopic or plain lazy showman who couldn't sell this merchandise blind to any audience between Park Avenue and Piccolo Falls, Wyo.

It wouldn't be necessary to tell the Park Avenue crowd the type of entertainment it was going to get for its money. Alfred Savoir's Parisian farce of the same name, from which the film derives, would be well remembered, and Mr. Lubitsch's manner of treating such material is among the things the carriage trade knows all about. It might not even be necessary to tell the Piccolo Falls folk, either, Paramount having given them a sort of preview of the material in a picture of like title released 'way back in '23, Sam Wood turning it out that time with Gloria Swanson and Huntley Gordon doing the chief chores on the player side. Both audiences would be correct in the assumption that the story is essentially the same, and neither would be likely to object strenuously to such minor revisions as have been deemed advisable in the interest of adjustment to 1938 requirements.

The tale told in both pictures is about an American millionaire in Paris who takes as his eighth wife, divorce and death having disposed of her seven predecessors, an impoverished young lady of noble birth who loves him enough to deny him her bedroom during six months of otherwise congenial matrimony and then frame herself as unfaithful by way of getting through what she believes is the inevitable divorce and on to what may turn out to be his ninth, uninhibited, satisfactory and finalistic marriage. The 1938 telling of the tale is wholly playful.

Park Avenue audiences, and quite probably the Piccolo Falls contingent as well, know, or should, that Mr. Lubitsch does not address his art primarily to the kiddycar trade. In this, as in prior undertakings, he deals lightly and laughingly with matters commonly counted among the subjects which concern and interest chiefly persons of voting age. He achieves, through Mr. Cooper's performance, a quite detailed delineation of the frustrated male, and through Miss Colbert's an equally complete depiction of the evocatively evasive virgin. These and kindred studies, all artistically and artfully accomplished with somewhat less than the habitual Lubitsch measure of double-deck dialogue, are of a maturity to suggest that exhibitors using the attraction employ special stunts, such as "adults' matinees" perhaps, as a means

Vessel of Wrath

(Associated British-Mayflower)
Character Comedy

This initial effort of the Pommer-Laughton team, with Pommer and Laughton as producers, Pommer as director and Laughton as star, opens up immediately the problem of where the functions of producer, star and director begin and end, for whatever be the ultimate judgments on the principals as producer and star, the functions of direction would seem to have been somewhat gratuitously shared.

If the Pommer flavor seems to be indefinite, and the Somerset Maughan element rather in the background, the Laughton note is first, foremost and pretty well all the time, for in this somewhat indecisive story of a South Sea beachcomber, who proves a very hard nut for a woman missionary to crack, it is his portly, slobbering "Ginger Ted" who lumbers through the film from the first shot to the last, in a straw hat and tattered jeans, drinking, quarreling and incredulously trudging his way to the heart of the straightlaced, God-fearing missionary who is Miss Jones.

So far as this country's film audiences are concerned, and probably those on the far side of the Atlantic, it is Laughton who should draw them in and his characterization of this reckless, elusive remittance man, whilst erring on the side of broadness so as occasionally to overstep the frontiers of burlesque, is about the only factor in "Vessel of Wrath" to enter the normal category of screen merchandise.

The story of "Vessel of Wrath" seems to be an indecisive and pointless business, with an abruptly designed climax, a somewhat luridly parodic tale of a woman missionary of virginal type and religious inclinations, of an unshaven, whisky-swilling beachcomber who is her moral bête noir, and the fate which throws them together on a typhoid stricken island, and of his triumphant moulding of the missionary clay into form. There, at the typhoid episode, with the unfulfilled promise of a dramatic native uprising, the story suddenly halts, to transfer itself inexplicably and bluntly to an English country "pub" where missionary and beachcomber have apparently decided to call it a day.

Whether directorial treatment, script confusion or editorial indifference has translated coherence into a rather cacophonous mass, it is difficult to estimate, but in its present form Pommer's film is less a social or psychological essay than an effort at half-hearted burlesque. Laughton's "Ginger Ted" is broadly enough designed, but his missionary opposite savors rather of revue than real life, as for that matter does Tyrone Guthrie as the Reverend Jones.

There is the nucleus of something bigger than normal in the Laughton-Pommer team, but until star and producer no longer share other burdens than those for which they are equipped, we may have to wait.

Previewed in London with a mixed trade and paying audience at the Regal, Marble Arch, the film, though its comedy moments provoked occasional laughter, was accepted rather apologetically.—AUBREY FLANAGAN.

Her Jungle Love

(Paramount)
Fantastic Adventure

The stuffs of which film serials used to be made, and their modern radio parallels still are, have been handsomely heaped up and photographed in full color herewith as a kind of super-splendiferous eye-fodder for the unquestionably multitudinous addicts of jungle adventure.

Dorothy Lamour, Ray Milland, Lynne Overman, J. Carrol Naish and the late lamented Jiggs have the principal roles. George Archainbaud directed. George M. Arthur is down as producer and five writers are listed as authors of story and screen play. Frederick Hollander and Ralph Freed wrote the songs.

The narrative plops "Bob" and "Jimmy," aviators seeking a lost comrade, on a jungle island. Here they meet "Tura," native maid and sole inhabitant, who falls in love with "Bob." Subsequently "Kuasa," educated native chief, shows up with the lost flier all wrapped up and ready to be fed to the sacred crocodiles amid ceremonies employing the hypnotized "Tura." The feeding comes off as planned. Later "Kuasa" decides to feed "Tura" to the beasts, also, but an earthquake or volcanic eruption interrupts this exercise in time to save the girl, now duly established as white, to marry the hero.

The subject is treated seriously. Miss Lamour wears a variety of colorful sarongs. Mr. Overman supplies wisecracks in effective slang. Jiggs steals the show.

A Trip to Paris

(Twentieth Century - Fox)
Comedy

That paragon of wholesome family entertainment, 20th Century-Fox's "The Jones Family" series, climbs new heights of comedy in "A Trip to Paris."

This time the "family," on the parents' silver wedding anniversary, goes to Paris, and is innocently involved in an international espionage ring's activities. Robert Ellis and Helen Logan again wrote the screenplay, based on the characters of Katharine Kavanaugh. Mal St. Claire directed and Max Golden was associate producer.

In addition to the "family"—Jed Prouty, Shirley Deane, Spring Byington, Russell Gleason, Ken Howell, George Ernest, June Carlson, Florence Roberts and Billy Mahan—the cast includes Joan Valerie, Harold Huber, Nedda Harrigan, Leonid Kinskey, Armand Kaliz, Clay Clement.

"Roger's" picture-taking activities arouse suspicion in the mind of the French hotel detective, "Emile." "Jack" becomes involved with a pretty girl, who uses him as a dupe for a spy ring, whose leaders are arrested. But all ends well.

Previewed at the Uptown theatre, Los Angeles, to an audience which, unaware of what was to be shown, applauded the "Jones Family" title laughed and chuckled throughout the un-reeling, and were vociferous in praise at the fadeout.—VANCE KING.

Produced and distributed by Twentieth Century-Fox. Associate Producer, Max Golden. Directed by Mal St. Clair. Original screenplay by Robert Ellis and Helen Logan. Bank Holiday

(Gainsborough-GFD)
A Half Section of Life

Despite a valiant attempt to translate into terms of screen entertainment the light and shade, laughter and tears which lie beneath the surface of an English public holiday (not an American "bank holiday"), this crowded and phantasmagoric canvas savours of immaturity, not only of direction but indeed of human experience. It is the Bank Holiday of the novelette and comic strip, rather than of actuality, with, despite a sustained note of poignancy and human tenderness, far too many concessions to the conventionally fictitious, studios of low life which are low but hardly life, and a continuity and editing which have little fluency or cohesion. It has a few of the virtues of British production and many of the weaknesses.

Carol Reed, one of the younger directors, takes a half section of life on the August holiday, traces the probleme d'amour of a nurse whose pity goes out to a bereaved father, shattering her own stolen romance, and intertwines it with the comedies of a holiday crowd of Cockneys seeking a few hours of solace by the sea. The rush for the train, the querulous bickerings of a South London family, the brief burst of glory of two working girls, holidaymakers who sleep on the beach, Pierrot parties and all the fun of the holiday fair find their way into the pattern, all woven with one eye on comedy effect rather than sociological realism. It is amusing enough stuff for the natives, with a fair measure of laughs, and, as already suggested, a constantly sustained vein of pathos in the psychological problem of the sympathetic nurse, this element greatly assisted by the intelligent and charming Margaret Lockwood, who deserves even better things, and by a thoughtful portrayal by John Lodge, who wanders around a superimposed London thinking of his happy but dead metropolitan past. When Wally Patch's quick-firing Cockney husband speaks, the film invariably comes to life, and there is an all too brief cameo by Wilfred Lawson as a bored and skeptical police sergeant.

Though "Bank Holiday", for all its easy fictions, undoubtedly will amuse the English masses, much of it will appear apocryphal and not a little wearisome to American audiences.

Previewed at the Cambridge theatre, London, the film was received with much laughter and accorded hearty applause.—AUBREY FLANAGAN.

Noches de Gloria

(Jose Luis Bueno Production)
Mexican Show Folk Melodrama

Here is something new in a Mexican picture. Excepting the work and personality of the star, Esperanza Iris, veteran but still comely Mexican stage comedienne, it is not outstanding, yet American exhibitors can do business with this by emphasizing the excellent vernacular songs and recitations of Señora Iris. She is of smash caliber with her rendition of "A Poco No" (Aw, Gwan!) hoi polloi Mexican ribbing song, given as the feature of a novel scene, a performance in a typical Mexico City tent show.

The story is a fair vehicle for La Iris even if a rather trite tale of a diva is framed by a jealous male admirer for the murder of her husband, serves a long jail sentence, loses her daughter, then finds the child, who has become a budding warbler, all ending well when the daughter (Magda Haller, a likable singer) becomes Mexico's ranking grand opera star. The best of the supporting cast are Alfredo del Diestro, as a crusty old grandfather; Manolo, Noriega, lovable old music teacher, and Alberto Marti, a convincing heavy.

There are interesting scenes of the intimate life of Mexican capital theatrical folk, a subject that is new to Mexican pictures. There is an abundance of dancing—this is largely a musical—but, excepting some sequences of the ballet of the Palace of Fine Arts (National Theatre), it isn't important. The music is something of a puzzle: there is only a little true Mexican Music. The film is being exploited in Mexico on the strength of some Franz Lehar lyrics and grand opera selections. Direction is fair. The sound could be better; the camera work is very good.

This was reviewed at its premiere in the Cine Teatro Alameda, Mexico City. The audience reaction was interesting. Alameda fans are rather hard boiled. They do not indulge in complimentary applause. But La Iris' songs won them. Handclaps and even yells persisted into other sequences. A goodly number of Americans saw the picture and liked it, chiefly because of Señora Iris' work.—JAMES LOCKHART.

Goodbye Broadway

(Universal)

Comedy

This appropriately cast comedy deals accurately and unemotionally with the passing of vaudeville. A subject of ready saleability on today's screen. Alice Brady, Charles Winniger, Jed Prouty, Del Henderson and Donald Meek are names well known to former addicts of the two-a-day, and billing listing these may be amplified with mention of the less veteran Frank Jenks, Tom Brown, Dorothea Kent, Willie Best and the ventriloquial Tommy Riggs.

The story is James A. Gleason's "Shannons of Broadway" done over for this version by Roy Chanslor and A. Dorian Otws, with Edmund Grainger producing and Ray McCarey directing. It tells again and with freshness the adventures of two vaudeville troupers who invest their savings in a small-town hotel, and the avarice of a slick local realtor who ultimately tricks himself into buying it from them at a price guaranteeing them economic security in retirement. Mr. Winniger and Miss Brady as the washed-up vaudevillians dominate the picture.

Production is high grade, humor unforced, action brisk, and characterization sound. Mr. Riggs of the radio seemed to please the preview audience in unconcealed feats of ventriloquism performed without a dummy.

Previewed at the Alexander Theatre in Glendale, Cal., to a favorable reception.—W. R. W.

Invisible Enemy

(Republic)

Continental Conspiracy

Except in minor variations, "Invisible Enemy" follows the story idea long familiar in E. Phillips Oppenheim works. With the fate of nations at stake, control of oil producing lands as a pawn, an outcast British diplomatic operative conscripted from the breadlines matches wits with a coldly suave international conspirator and emerges triumphant. Accessories to the basic intrigue are traces of a three-cornered conflicting romantic comedy. While the commercial quality of a strong title and a fairly interesting if familiar story are handicapped by the fact that most of the dialogue is spoken with an English accent. The manner in which suspense is applied in developing the plot should give the film an average appeal.

Principal parts are played by Alan Marshall, C. Henry Gordon, Tala Birell, Mady Correll, Herbert Mundin and Gerald Oliver Smith, with Ivan Simpson, Elsa Buchanan and Dwight Frye included for bits.

Marshall and Gordon, in roles as duelists in a battle of wits from the start, carry the show almost exclusively. Yet in the romantic byplay Birell and Correll are effective in the love contrast which has a surprise conclusion. Comedy is in the hands of Mundin, who has faculty of being Johnny-on-the-spot in every crucial moment.

Previewed in Hollywood to an apathetic reception.—GUS MCCARTHY.

The Horse on the Merry-Go-Round

(Columbia)

Cute Colored Cartoon

It is to be expected that the merry-go-round horse in an amusement park would at times come to feel that his mode of existence followed a path of grooved and confining limitations. Consequently, when the circulating steed longs for freer and boundless pastures, his equine yearnings can be appreciated by the more rebellious mortals of the audience, who have longed to kick over their terminating traces. But, after a hectic and rather uncomfortable experience in the strange grazing land of the crazy house, the ferris wheel and the roller coaster, the steed realizes that there is no place like his home field. Borrowing from the set and situation of the cartoon's subject, the comic business has been wound up to give fast paced fun and nonsense. Lavishly applied colored tints add pictorial charm and excellence to produce entertainment that should please all ages of the average audience. Running time, 6½ minutes.

A Buckaroo Broadcast

(RKO Radio)

Cowboy Crooners

The call of the west is too strong for Ray Whitley and the Six Bar Cowboys, so the singing septet forsake the confines of an eastern radio studio for the open spaces. The boys' former sponsor, banking on the affair between Ray and the sponsor's secretary, has the girl travel westward to lure the group back east. But the minor Mata Hari falls victim to the spell of the rugged cow country and stays behind to marry Ray. The distinctive airs should please musical appetites for western ditties.—Running time, 18 minutes.

Dusky Cutups

Mixing a little rhythm and a few tricks of mischief in their campaign the harmonizing group of dusky juvenile songsters, the Cabin Kids, assist their colored mammy in winning first prize at the county fair. Dropping cement into the dough pater of one rival cook's efforts and spiking another's ice cream sauce with vinegar, the youngsters clear the field for their candidate's victorious mince meat and flapjacks. The kids are engagingly active and their singing is lively if somewhat self conscious.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Captain Kidd's Treasure

(MGM)

Pirate Mystery

Any studied attempt to whitewash an historical scoundrel labels the subject worthy of attention. In this instance of defence, the pirate character of Captain Kidd, famed scourge of the sea, is examined in two different phases. One one hand, evidence is produced to show that the British buccaneer was really a faithful servant in the King's service, who ran afoul of mutinous treatment by his crew. The other side of the brief paints Kidd as a cutthroat scamp

Going Places No. 46 (Universal)

Outstanding Photography

Divided into two parts, this issue of the Universal travel series offers interesting subjects and some examples of excellent camera work. The first sequence explores Danbury, Conn., but instead of concentrating on the annual County Fair, the most commonly known feature of that town, the manufacture of felt hats, for which the community is equally noteworthy, is pictorially explained. In the second sequence the camera follows a group of skiers on a trip to Crater Lake. The lake, of course, is a common subject because of its scenic beauty, but the winter setting adds a touch of the unusual.—Running time, 9 minutes.

Wee Wee Monsieur (Columbia)

Stoogian Slapstick

In the beginning, the Three Stooges are pictured as struggling artists, slaving and starving for their art in a Paris garret. At the end, the boys are Foreign Legionnaires. To carry them over from one profession to another, there is relayed the customary collection of Stoogian slapstick tricks. In the present instance, the result of the boys' comic efforts seem to jell into a better than usual Stooge subject because the business given them seems more spontaneous and laugh provoking, what with their working away at their artistic pursuits, angling for their dinner, masquerading as a trio of Santa Clauses on a visit to a desert oasis, and giving impersonations as dancing favorites of a sultan. Running time, 18 minutes.

Stranger Than Fiction No. 46 (Universal)

Interesting

Two, especially, of the six subjects in this issue of the series are sufficiently arresting to attract wide audience attention. A resident of San Francisco who learned to bowl after he became blind rolls strikes and spares. The final sequence, showing a Swedish-American wood carver and his caricatures whittled from blocks of pine, is similarly interesting. Between them are pictorial descriptions of the method of sorting oranges by x-rays, a New York welfare worker who made a comfortable home on an old welding barge, a playground and training school for canaries, and a quartet of pigs whose owner has taught them unpiglike table manners.—Running time, 9 minutes.

Top Timberg, Jr. - Rooney, Jr., Comedy

More concerned with their romantic problems than with the commercial matters of the grocery shop where they act as clerks, the junior branch of the Timberg and Rooney clan provide the customers of stage and screen a run of amusement as varied as the stock of food. The youngsters—all in exuberant teen age—are given some excellent comedy situations and make the most of their opportunities. The finale is devoted to an amusing sequence wherein the boys act as masters of ceremonies for the opening of a new and bigger grocery store, with some clever spoofing undertones patterned after a model film premiere.—Running time, 18 minutes.

Breathless Moments (Universal)

Newsreel Thrills

The perennial collection of newsreel shots, edited so as to highlight the death, danger and destruction elements in the cameraman's harvest, proves as successful as ever. Garnered from the newsreels of the last year or more the subject includes flashes of fire, flood, shipwreck, typhoon, duststorms, bullfights, racing, mountain climbing, war, riot, trick flying machines, aerial acrobatics, and death in the air and on the ground. The climax is reached in what is generally accepted as the most awe-inspiring tragedy of the year, pictorially speaking, the burning of the airship Hindenburg. Careful editing results in a concentration of interest on the thrills rather than the horror element, and the commentary, by Graham McNamee, is well handled. Running time 19½ minutes.

Unusual Hunting (Columbia)

Sport Issue

The title aptly expresses the content of this subject. The unusual in hunting expeditions as recorded by the camera is first a visit to England where intrepid huntersmen scale chalk cliffs in search of baby falcons. The training of the falcons as bird hunters also is shown. From England the scene shifts to the Everglades in Florida and an alligator hunt in which a stick and a strong pair of hands are requisites required of the hunter. In the sub-zero hills of the West a hunter on skis tracks down a wild boar and kills it. A coyote hunt and the chasing of a kangaroo in an automobile wind up the subject. Described by Dan Seymour. Running time, 10 minutes.

The Man Hunt (Universal)

Animal Cartoon

Oswald the Rabbit, game warden of the forest, mobilizes his woodland brethren to resist the invasion of an automobile load of hunters from the city. The skunks operate a gas tank, the tortoise shoot hickory nuts from their shells, and the squirrels rig up a machine gun with help of a woodpecker. Routed, the hunters return to their car on the run only to find that the indignant animals have fitted it with devices calculated to make their ride most uncomfortable. In story and execution the subject is ideally suited for the cartoon medium. Running time, 7 minutes.

Three on a Rope (MGM)

Tops

Concerned with the arduous and hazardous business—or sport—of mountain climbing, this Pete Smith subject on peak scaling is pictorially arresting stuff, a clever demonstration of the art and science needed for its execution, and generally all around first rate entertainment. According to the usual Smith method of studying subjects of this sportive sort, two groups are examined, one group composed of serious minded and expert climbers and the other party consisting of comic beginners. Through shrewd camera work, particularly the analytical lens of slow motion photography, the mountaineers are followed up the steep sides of the stony wall to reach the lofty and rocky pinnacles. Mr. Smith's light touch of patter is an agreeable foil for the evident peril of the daredevil climbers.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Sky Fishing (Educational)

Excellent Sport Reel

Anglers in particular will find a vast amount of pictorial entertainment and piscatorial instruction in this excellently contrived reel depicting the sport of fishing in the sky top streams of the Canadian Rockies. Two sides of the sport are shown, one part devoted to lake fishing and the other section illustrating the thrills of mountain stream angling. Even if the spectator has no interest in the particular sport studied, the gorgeous scenic backgrounds together with a smoothly melodic accompaniment should be bait enough for interest.—Running time, 9½ minutes.

Community Sing No. 7, Series 2 (Columbia)

Songs

The leader of this subject in the Community Sing series is Gus Van, onetime vaudeville headliner with the team of Van and Schenck. Since the death of his partner Van has become an individual performer. He sings "Me and My Gal," "Dinah" and joins Joan Brooks and The Treys in singing "Minnie the Moocher." Miss Brooks sings "You're Nobody's Sweetheart Now" and "My Gal Sal." The audience as usual is requested to join in the singing. Running time, 10 minutes.

Sign Company Answers Suit

Adler Sign Letter Company, being sued in the United States district court in Chicago by Wagner Sign Service, Inc., who charge patent infringement, on Wednesday issued the following statement: "The constructions manufactured by Adler Sign Letter Company and Ben Adler Signs, Inc., are manufactured under the prior issued patent to Adler, issued April 28, 1936, Patent No. 2,038,978. The Patent Office, when it later issued the Wagner patent on July 21, 1936, did not consider that the subject matter of the Adler patent interfered with the subject matter of the Wagner patent or it would have put the two patents in interference, which it did not do. In addition to this action of the Patent Office, the Adler company have separate legal opinions of different attorneys that the Adler devices do not infringe the Wagner patent."

IN THE CUTTING ROOM

Battle of Broadway (Twentieth Century-Fox) Comedy and Romance

For primary name value, "Battle of Broadway," a Sol M. Wurtzel production, will offer Victor McLaglen, Brian Donlevy, who was seen in "In Old Chicago," and Louise Hovick, featured in "Ali Baba Goes to Town," her third screen appearance. Secondary personalities are the comic Raymond Walburn, Jane Darwell, the newcomers Lynn Bari and Robert Kellard, Sammy Cohen and Esther Muir. Others who will participate are Eddie Holden, Hatty McDaniel, Paul Irving, onetime prize fighter Frank Moran, and Andrew Tombes.

The story is robust romance and rowdy comedy, a short of throwback to the "sez you sez me" material with Donlevy succeeding Edmund Lowe as McLaglen's sparring partner. The backgrounds feature considerable Legion atmosphere, especially the climaxing sequences during an American Legion convention in New York, in which the Post to which the boys belong stages a wild brawl with a gang of counterfeiterers.

Based on an original story by Ralph Houston, the screen play was completed by Lou Breslow and John Patrick, who have served long in the Wurtzel sector of the 20th Century-Fox establishment. The two musical numbers, one a topical ballad, the other a marching song, were composed by Sidney Clare and Harry Akst.

"Battle of Broadway" is being directed by George Marshall, whose most recent work is "The Goldwyn Follies."

Release date: May 13, 1938.

Sinners in Paradise (Universal) Melodrama

That story plan which takes for its idea the experiences of a heterogeneous group who become castaways on an isolated island has always been considered "good theatre." A China-bound transport plane, catching fire, falls into the ocean near a deserted isle. The passengers are one of the world's richest girls, a pompous politician, a woman tired of married life, a racketeer, a motherly woman, a girl who has escaped from the police and two gun runners. All reach shore and find a mysterious white man and his Chinese servant.

The man has a boat. All want to use it to carry them to civilization. The treachery of two who attempt to steal the boat precipitates a battle in which, as one woman dies, it is revealed that the mysterious possessor of the island is a surgeon wanted in Shanghai for murder.

The cast includes John Boles, Madge Evans and Bruce Cabot.

An original story by Harold Buckley, who contributed to "Carnival Queen," "Smart Blond" and "California Mail," it was adapted by Buckley, Louis Stevens ("The Texas Rangers" and "Last Train for Madrid"), and Lester Cole, who did "Some Blondes are Dangerous" and "The Man in Blue."

James Whale's recent directing credits include "The Road Back" and "The Great Garbick."

Release date: April 15, 1938.

Crime Gives Orders (Paramount) Melodrama

"Tip Off Girls" (previewed in the March 19th issue) drew favorable comment from trade and daily newspaper critics. Its reception in general distribution should have a beneficial effect upon "Crime Gives Orders," as Lloyd Nolan and Mary Carlisle, featured players, J. Carrol Naish, Anthony Quinn and Larry Crabbe will be seen in the coming attraction also. The cast further will include Lynne Overman, currently in "Her Jungle Love," a youthful Delmar Watson, Dorothy Peterson, Regis Toomey and Fern Emmett.

Thematically, the story to be told in "Crime Gives Orders" is melodramatic. A murdering gang boss flees, is mistaken for a business man and received into a respectable citizen's home. He falls in love with the daughter and becomes a pal to the youngest son. But when revenge-mad rivals ferret him out, he surrenders to the police rather than jeopardize their safety.

An effort is being exerted to develop a different slant on the now well worn gangster type of story. While sinister atmosphere is being retained in a measure, it is producer Harold Hurley's intent that it shall be secondary to the human interest content.

The film is being directed by Louis King, whose credits include two of the recent "Bulldog Drummond" pictures and "Wild Money."

Release date: June 17, 1938.

Cocoanut Grove (Paramount) Musical Comedy

The tribulations of a pugnacious band leader seeking to include his band in a competition that means an engagement in the famous Ambassador Hotel Cocoanut Grove in Los Angeles is the primary entertainment substance. Embellishing the motivation are comedy, in which the Yacht Club Boys, Ben Blue and Rufe Davis will be featured, and music which will present Harry Owens' Royal Hawaiian Orchestra. Owens' winning of the Academy Award for the best original song, "Sweet Lalanie," should be a matter for exploitation. There's a love story, too, which overcomes several complicated situations.

The picture is to be produced on an extensive scale, with a full allotment of glamour. The action, beginning in the east, entails a cross-country trailer journey.

The leading roles have been assigned to Fred MacMurray and Harriet Hilliard, who was seen in RKO-Radio's "New Faces of 1937" and "Life of the Party." Ben Blue is down for some of his peculiar eccentric dancing, as also are the Yacht Club Boys. Rufe Davis and little Billy Lee are the most prominent of the supporting cast. Others to be seen are Eve Arden, Harry Owens, George Walcott, Dorothy Howe, Red Stanley and Lester Allen, diminutive legitimate stage comedian. There will also be a singing and dancing chorus.

A George Arthur production "Cocoanut Grove" is being directed by Alfred Santell, maker of "Breakfast for Two" and "Winterset."

Release date: July 8, 1938, tentatively.

The Adventuress (United Artists - Wanger) Romance in Revolution

A year ago, when bearing the title "The River Is Blue," the forthcoming "The Adventurer" was on Walter Wanger's production program. For several reasons, shooting was deferred until now, but none of them had any political significance. Topical as it happens to be, "The Adventuress" simply tells a gripping romantic story against the chaotic background of war-torn Spain.

Madeleine Carroll and Henry Fonda are co-starred. The principal supporting players are Leo Carrillo, currently in "The Girl of the Golden West"; John Halliday, Robert Warwick, who was prominent in "Romeo and Juliet" and "Parnell"; Reginald Denny and Vladimir Sokoloff, seen in "The Life of Emile Zola." Lesser characters are Peter Godfrey, Lupita Tovar, Katherine de Mille, Nick Thompson and George Houston. Peasants, soldiers, sailors and others will appear in atmospheric and character roles.

The story is an original screen play prepared by John Howard Lawson. A former newspaper man who spent considerable time in Europe, Lawson has been associated with MGM, RKO-Radio and Columbia.

Responsibilities for direction appear to be in capable hands. Maker of "The Life of Emile Zola" and "The Story of Louis Pasteur," director William Dieterle also handled such Warner pictures as "The White Angel," "Dr. Socrates" and "Madame DuBarry."

Release date: To be determined.

Tropic Holiday (Paramount) Comedy-Romance

Paramount is taking two of its most popular teams, Dorothy Lamour and Ray Milland, together in "Jungle Princess" and the forthcoming "Her Jungle Love," and Bob Burns and Martha Raye dually featured many times, and adding to them Binnie Barnes, now appearing in "The First Hundred Years" and Tito Guizar, heard and seen in "The Big Broadcast of 1938," supporting them with a lot of players of Mexican ancestry and the Dominguez Brothers, San Cristobal Marimba Band, and setting them down in a languid Mexican town for what should be an exploitation and entertainment holiday, in "Tropic Holiday."

The piece is being made to follow the pattern of recent crazy comedy romances. Milland is a writer of romantic novels who forgets everything upon seeing the exotic Mexican vision, Miss Lamour. Miss Raye, his secretary, in addition to going wild about Guizar also turns bullfighter. Burns is an electioneering Senator from Oklahoma who is tossed into jail.

With music and dancing, picturizations of intriguing Mexican customs other than bullfighting, and romance under the moonlight, and the promise that it should be exotic, picturesque and comic entertainment, showmen should find plenty of readily available exploitation.

Don Hartman and Frank Butler thought up the original story which Theodore Reed, maker of "Double or Nothing," is directing.

Release date: July 22, 1938 (tentatively).

LETTERS FROM READERS

PROTESTS CAMPAIGN AGAINST DOUBLES

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:

In the columns of the MOTION PICTURE HERALD and the Motion Picture Daily I frequently read that the PTA and kindred organizations throughout the country are beginning a campaign against double features.

Fortunately, we have had very little trouble of this sort in Davenport, Rock Island, Moline and Cedar Rapids, the four cities which comprise my district for the Tri-States Theatre Corporation. However, as an exhibitor of double features, and as one who most sincerely believes in their value to theatres, I am greatly concerned in this propaganda which certainly can hold no good for the industry.

I realize that many film executives and producers are strong opponents of dual bills; yet I believe these same men must realize that hundreds of theatres throughout the nation would be closed today, if it were not for double features. I also believe these same men will agree that an organization that is strong enough to place a nation wide ban on double features is strong enough to set itself up as a dictator to the industry. I think there are very few men in the industry who would relish such a situation, but apparently a few important executives are so short-sighted that they are lending support to an organization that seems set on eliminating a great number of theatres that are buying film from these same men today.

Up to now, I haven't read of any exhibitors taking any concerted action to combat this propaganda, but most certainly something must be done to check the spread of this menace. I don't believe we can "fight" back, as a fight usually results in a heated and prolonged argument. It is quite likely that the industry might come out on the short end of such an argument.

The objection seized upon by the PTA for exploitation seems to be the length of two-feature programs and their unhealthful effect on children. To me this seems to be a silly objection and one that the public will not adopt, if properly handled counter-propaganda is released by exhibitors. Such propaganda, however, must be subtle in the extreme so as not to bring on a battle.

I think that the public must be sold on the fact that double feature programs offer them a well-balanced variety of entertainment.

At the present time most theatres advertise "2 Big Features," "Big Double Feature Show," "2 Feature Length Hits," or something of the sort. These terms themselves have a tendency to emphasize the great length of the programs, and certainly do not sell the variety of entertainment contained in most dual bills.

I would suggest that if the exhibitors would change their method of advertising double features, it may be possible to "de-emphasize" the length of the shows and sell the public on the real value of double features.

The other day I ran across some catch-lines that I think should be used in place of the old, out-dated phrases now used in most ads. These catch-lines are not original—although I don't know their source—so please do not credit me with them:

FOR YOUR FURTHER ENJOYMENT AND FOR A LAUGH
YOU'LL GET A BIG KICK OUT OF—EXTRA JOY FOR VARIETY'S SAKE
YOU ARE BOUND TO LIKE
AND TO MAKE THE SHOW COMPLETE TO ADD TO YOUR ENJOYMENT FOR MORE HAPPINESS

YOU WILL ENJOY LAUGHING AT
AND JUST TO SEE YOU SMILE
WITH A WELL BALANCED PROGRAM INCLUDING TO MAKE YOUR EVENING COMPLETE AND THAT ISN'T ALL
AND NOT TO BE OVERLOOKED
IT PAYS TO SEE THE REST

The use of such catch-lines will most certainly call the attention of our patrons to the second features as much as did the old terms, and at the same time they will sell the idea that the second feature is something worth seeing—not just 60 minutes or so of film stuck in the program to make it a long show. If we get that idea across in our ads, trailers, lobby displays, etc., I think we'll soon put a stop to any objections to double features.

Naturally, such an advertising campaign must be backed up by good shows, but I think most theatres are now booking the best possible double feature programs—so I don't think the quality of the entertainment offered the public need worry us much.—JOSEPH KINSKY, Tri-States Theatre Corporation, Davenport, Iowa.

Chicago Exchanges and Supply Companies in New Film Center

Seven film exchanges and eight theatre supply and equipment companies are now situated in Chicago's newest film center at 13th Street and South Wabash Avenue. A new exchange building houses the Universal, Columbia and United Artists exchanges as well as a screening room operated by Henry Igel.

Already in the area were Warner Brothers, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Republic, Paramount, National Screen Service and American Seating Company.

In the 1200 block on South Wabash are the Midwest Theatre Supply and R. Levine, dealer in theatres and equipment. New comers to this block include Joe Goldberg, equipment dealer, and Photoplay Trailer. Movie Supply, equipment company, plans to move soon to the film center. General Film Laboratory is the only laboratory close by.

The general exodus from the district around Eighth and Wabash leaves Twentieth Century-Fox, RKO Radio, Monogram-Capitol, Superior Pictures, B. F. Judell and Filmack Company. Twentieth Century-Fox has made plans for a new building of its own at 13th and Wabash, with construction to start in the spring.

In May, Allied Theatres of Illinois will move into new offices in the Exhibitors Building, 1325 South Wabash Avenue.

Japan To Honor Cochrane

The Japanese Government will honor the late Tom D. Cochrane, former representative in Tokyo of Universal and Paramount, for his services to the Japanese film industry with a monument proposed by Premier Konoye. The Home Ministry is preparing a scroll and the Dai Nippon Cinema Association will provide a jeweled vase.

Max Mazur, formerly of GB's Chicago office, has been appointed branch manager at Minneapolis, succeeding Fred Abelson, resigned. Clinton M. White, GB assistant general manager, is on a tour of the company's midwest exchanges.

Dispute in Utah Over Outlawing Of Chance Games

Developments in chance game activities this week included the controversy in Utah over the authority of the Utah Trade Commission to enforce the state's unfair practices act; Governor Chandler's veto of the Kentucky bill which would legalize Bank Night there and a ruling in Beaver County, Pa., outlawing theatre giveaways.

In Montreal two theatre managers were fined in recorder's court for operation of Bank Night. According to police such attractions are lotteries and therefore illegal. Alexis St. Charles, manager of the Cameo, pleaded guilty to two charges and Julius Belson, manager of the Midway, pleaded guilty to 10 similar charges. Each was fined the costs in every case to which he pleaded guilty.

The Utah controversy reached the state's supreme court for the first time when an action was instituted by the Paramor Theatre Company of Ogden, operator of the Paramount, Orpheum, Colonial and Lyceum theatres. Upon petition of the company the court issued an alternative writ of prohibition, ordering the commission to appear and show cause why it should not be restrained from further proceedings under an order for the theatres to discontinue Bank Nights.

Despite reports that Governor Chandler of Kentucky had signed the measure legalizing all cash or giveaways which was passed by both houses the Daily Kentucky New Era, Hopkinsville, last Thursday reported that the bill had been vetoed.

Theatre giveaways have been ruled out of 13 Beaver County, Pa., houses by District Attorney Robert E. McCreary. Four of the theatres were given one day stays to permit them to make final scheduled awards.

An early opinion on the legality of Bank Night in Oklahoma is expected from Attorney General Mac Q. Williamson, who has asked W. N. Hensley of Cumberland University, author of an article on the subject, for "pertinent citations" on Bank Nights.

Schuyler T. Hodge, operator of an art school in Miami, Fla., has filed suit in circuit court there against a local theatre to determine the legality of Bank Night.

A final decision of the Connecticut Bank Night test case tried in the supreme court of errors there is expected in April or May.

The Classic theatre, Watertown, Wis., has resumed Bank Night each Friday after discontinuing the game for several months at the insistence of the district attorney.

The York theatre, Athol, Mass., has voluntarily discontinued Bank Night following a conference with city officials, according to Oscar Mercier, manager.

The Lenoir Theatres Company, Lenoir, N. C., has been temporarily restrained from the operation of a giveaway by a superior court judge.

Frank J. Miller, Sr., vice-president of Augusta Amusement, Inc., has been acquitted on a lottery charge of operating Bank Night in several theatres in Augusta, Ga. The case was heard by a city court jury.

An order has been entered in Christian circuit court, Ky., awarding the Commonwealth of Kentucky a judgment of $750 and costs against the Crescent Amusement Company, Nashville, in connection with Bank Night at the company's two Hopkinsville, Ky., theatres.

William A. Drake, screen playwright, has been signed by Twentieth Century-Fox as associate story editor.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

Just before Herr Hitler moved into Austria, the Austrian Ministry of Defense started an intensive and ominous educational campaign to teach civilians what to do when, as the Austrians thought was inevitable, hostile bombers start dropping death on Austrian cities.

Part of the campaign was a set of sketches of the "wrong" and "right" things to do when the bombs start raining from the sky. "Don't open windows," "Don't stand out in the open," "Don't desert your horses in the street," etc., etc. For nonchalance, the pictured instructions were remindful of those in theatre programs: In case of fire walk, do not run to nearest exit.

"If you're in a movie," they said, "don't dash out into the street when the air-raid alarm sounds. Just remain quietly watching the film."

United Artists announces: Mayor Arthur Segrell, Culver City, California, proclaims Saturday "Tom Sawyer Day." Business and professional men have been asked by Mayor Segrell to appear in colorful costumes like those worn when Mark Twain was a youth.

George, fourth and unpublicized brother of the three mad Ritzes, had been having a lot of trouble with customers of his mercantile store in New Orleans. They did not believe his relationship because his name is George Joachim, which happens to be the Ritz brothers' family name, and accused him of using his likeness to the three comedians to impress his customers. Harry Joachim, Al Joachim and Jimmy Joachim (Ritz to Hollywood) finally drew up an affidavit attesting that George is their brother and that he can act as screwy as he pleases.

HAND-IN-HAND DEPARTMENT, from Motion Picture Daily:

There will be a meeting of Motion Picture Sales Associates Saturday at the Lincoln hotel, New York. Among the subjects to be taken up will be a beefsteak dinner and insurance.

We have been listening for years to the more or less justifiable civic-pride boastings of exhibitors, but never a peep have we heard out of Jesse Scott, who is running the little 150-seat Smithfield theatre, down in Smithfield, Virginia, where all those Smith Virginia hams come from, and where the pride of the place is a ham 35 years old, and still good to eat. They will not give you a sample of this one, however, 'cause it's worth $5,000, and that would make a ham sandwich set you back about $100 per chew, or $800-a-look at Hollywood's Vendome. You can keep your Smithfield ham 35 years, too—it is guaranteed to last, unimpaired by age.

These hams are now internationally in demand, especially for presents at such ceremonious occasions as the Duke of Windsor's wedding to his Baltimore belle and the coronation of his brother-successor to the English throne. A "Genuine Smithfield" costs one dollar the pound.

"Are you sure it won't be 'Goldwyn's Folly?'" he was asked.

"No, I'm sure," he assured. "The title will positively be registered."

From Wid Gunning's and Joe Dannenberg's "Wid's" evolved the present day Film Daily of John Wilde Alicoate's. At that time Columbia did not exist, nor did GB Pictures, Grand National, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Monogram, or Paramount, as such, nor Republic, RKO, Warner Brothers. Fox did, and United Artists and Universal, but not one of the top executives of those three 18 years ago is in the business today.

There were many excellent answers. One of them is from G. E. Doe, who says:

"There are six things a projection room floor should accomplish. So far as humanly possible, it should be wholly free from vibration, be reasonably easy on the feet of men who must stand on it for hours at a time, create no dust, have good lasting quality and ability to hold machinery anchor bolts firmly and permanently, and finally, look well.

"I add that last for the reason that men will work to better purpose in a nice-looking room than they will in one that does not look so well. The difference is psychological, but its effect is considerable. Put an average man in an ugly, dirty or sloven room and his work, if it be not slovenly, will at least tend to be so as compared with results he will attain in a neat, clean room. [May I butt in right here to compliment Brother Doe—a Chicago man and an old Bluebook School "student"—for having recognized this fact. In my opinion what he

(A) Describe the best method of checking bearings of motor or generator for wear.

(B) How may wear in bearings be detected by using a pinch bar?

(C) What inspection should be given a new motor or generator immediately it is received?

(D) What should be the capacity of wires feeding a motor or generator? Explain.

(Note: Remember, this is a Bluebook school and the answer to all save possibly some social questions can be found in that book.)

says is one hundred per cent correct.—F. H. R.]

"And now we will consider the points above listed. First, freedom from vibration of machinery in rapid motion and other causes is best attained by an underlay that has sufficient solidity to only be able to vibrate, if at all, as a whole, and of sufficient weight to make vibration as a whole impossible. The support, it seems unnecessary to note, must of course itself be strong and solid.

"The solidity required and the heavy weight necessary are best attained as described on page 250 of the Bluebook (though I do think in that you erred in not specifying a minimum thickness of six inches), which specifies concrete composed of cement, sharp sand and medium-size crushed stone well tamped into place, with all anchor bolts, conduit, etc., embedded therein. As to thickness, you advise being guided by the architect, but my experience has been that such guidance is not always adequate in such a matter. During past years architects have managed to work injury to projection—in fact, in many cases make excellence in visual results impossible—through desire to secure maximum auditorium beauty and seating capacity, regardless of injury to beauty of what the theatre has for sale, which results in depreciation in box office sales. They have specified concrete projection room floor underlays that have been injurious to results upon the screen because they were not alive to the fact that one thousandth of an inch vibration in a certain direction may result in visible damage to the screen image.

"As to top of floor, it should be covered with linoleum, except where, in some few instances, rather silly laws prohibit it. I say 'silly laws' for the reason that in my many years of observation and experience I have yet to know of even one case where any ill result has come from such a covering, except possibly some additional smoke where a very bad projection room fire occurs. But in that case the results would in any event be so bad that not only could no one remain in the room, but maximum damage would occur to property therein, under which condition what essential difference would a bit more or less smoke make? And linoleum is far, far more easy on the feet of the men who work in the room than raw cement or a painted floor, besides providing a handsome floor and one quite easy to keep clean.

"As to the top dressing, which I should have included before the linoleum, it should be of the sharpest grade of sand and the highest grade of cement obtainable, not less than three-fourths of an inch, and preferably one inch thick, troweled down perfectly level and smooth. If it is to be left uncovered, it should be painted with one coat of thin binder (yellow ochre is excellent) mixed with boiled linseed oil, and when thoroughly dry, this coat painted with some really good floor paint. Under no condition should a raw cement floor be permitted. If it is, regardless of how good the cement top dressing may be, there will be cement dust, more or less according to quality of cement and number of men working in the room. This dust will be to some extent circulated in the air of the room, get into the machinery bearings, and in the end cost more in excessive wear through its abrasive effect than would a good linoleum covering. However, if linoleum is used, it should be laid by an experienced linoleum man and thoroughly cemented to the floor."

That is one of the best answers ever had.

Independents Form New Philadelphia Circuit

Several independent exhibitors of Philadelphia have formed a combine called Affiliated Theatres Circuit, Inc., numbering close to a score of houses, including the Alan in Atlantic City, N. J. and the Garden, West Chester, Pa. The organization will build two new houses in Philadelphia. David E. Milgrim is president; I. Yaffe and Harry Greenberg, vice-presidents; Raymond Schwartz, treasurer, and Cecil M. Fet, secretary.

Arthur S. Friend, motion picture attorney, has opened an office in the RKO Building, Rockefeller Center, New York, for the general practice of law with the firm of Friend, Holbrook, Cotton and Reiskind.

HIGH QUOTA IS FINAL SURPRISE IN LORDS' HANDLING OF FILMS ACT

Peers Approve Moyne Demands for Larger Percentages on Features and Shorts; Bill Set for Passage April 1st

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

The closing stages of action on the new films Bill, during which it has been put before the Upper Chamber or House of Lords, have been nothing if not surprising. The Government has sprung a last minute surprise on the industry by reintroducing the triple quota scheme so forcibly talked out in the Commons stage. The exhibitors have surprised the rest of the trade by giving, after negotiation and concessions it is true, tacit approval to the new scheme. Finally, the Lords themselves have caused some consternation to renters and exhibitors by voting an increase in the features and shorts quota schedules for them both.

As it would appear now, there is every likelihood that the Bill, which should become law by April 1st, will go on the statute book with two vital changes: the inclusion of a three-for-one clause for renters, and higher percentages all round, neither of which developments could have been foreseen a fortnight ago, and both of which are without the initial approval of the Commons and her elected members. Changes may, of course, be made in the report stage and third reading—the latter is only a formality—but they are extremely unlikely.

Renters, thus, will have to find more films than they expected, though, if they make them on expensive lines they will be entitled to receive reciprocal considerations, such films counting as two or three according to their cost. Exhibitors, who have already opposed this plan on the grounds of a likely shortage, will not only have to rush around to find films to fulfill the twenty per cent quota reimposed for the current year, but are faced with a twenty per cent increase in their initial commitments over those originally proposed by the Government.

For the year ending September 30, 1938, it was intended by the Government, and so stipulated in the new bill, that exhibitors should only have to find 15 per cent British films instead of the 20 per cent provided for in the expiring Act. The Moyne amendment, carried by the Lords this week, restores the figure to 20 per cent.

Thanks to Lord Moyne and his very obvious irritation with foreign interests, the exhibitor quota will start at fifteen per cent and not 12½ per cent as in the bill, and renters quota will open at 20 per cent and not the originally suggested 15 per cent.

In addition, this week the Lords approved Lord Moyne's additional suggestion that the quotas on short subjects be raised to a starting figure of 15 per cent for distributors and 12½ per cent for exhibitors, increasing to 25 and 22½ per cent.

Apart from a generally accepted and universally approved clause ensuring fair wages and conditions of labor to those employed in the making of films, the present state of the bill remains for the most part as it left the Commons.

SHIRLEY TEMPLE WINS LIBEL SUIT

Shirley Temple will receive $10,000 damages under an order of Judge Lord Hewart of King's Bench division, London, in settlement of a libel action brought against the defunct magazine Night and Day, its printers and publishers, and Graham Greene, motion picture critic. In addition Twentieth Century-Fox as joint plaintiff already has received $7,500.

Libel was proved in a criticism of the picture "Wee Willie Winkie" by Graham Greene which was described by the judge as a "gross outrage." Counsel for the plaintiffs announced the money received would be distributed to charity.

The eve of the Lords Committee stage brought the trade its first surprise, with the reintroduction of the triple quota scheme which had been rejected by the Commons and withdrawn, with defensive provisos by the Government. It was thought by most that this latter was the end of the proposal. Those in the know, and aware of the Government's determination to make some concessions to American interests, concessions which would greatly oil the wheels of the present trade talks, and stimulate further that goodwill which exists between the two countries, knew that it would almost certainly be revived.

First move, then, came with the calling of an entirely informal dinner party at the House of Commons, under the aegis of Colonel Baldwin Webb, a Member of Parliament with trade interests, but also with the Governmental hall-mark concealed somewhere about his Parliamentary person. To it were invited and went Kenneth Nyman and Charles Metcalfe, leading officers of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association; Sam Eckman, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer chief; and Francis Harley, head of Twentieth Century-Fox in this country; John Maxwell, circuit chief, producer and distributor—and various labor and conservative Members—and not by any means insignificantly Fayette Allport, London representative of the MPPDA.

At the dinner there was one subject of discussion other than the Clos de Mouton Rothschild and Rupertsberger Goldschmidt 1921—it was, naturally enough, triple quota. The Parliamentarians took the long view—that of the prestige of British screens. The renters were diplomatically persuasive. The exhibitors remained adamant. And John Maxwell with that forthrightness which is his characteristic did not hesitate to tell the exhibitors how narrow he believed them to be. The latter left the House, however, convinced that triple quota was not dead but merely tucked away till the convenient moment.

Within a few days Lord Swinton, on whose shoulders rested the thankless burden of piloting the bill through the Lords, tabled new amendments. They provided that any renter making a film at a labor cost (that is approximately half the total cost) of £37,500 ($187,500) or with a quotient of £5 ($25) a foot, could count it as three for the purpose of his quota. But as a guarded proviso, and with the obvious intention of countering the exhibitors belief that there would be a film shortage if renters made all their films on this basis, the amendment limited such films to 50 per cent on the footage the renter would be called upon to sponsor.

There were also new reciprocity proposals allowing greater elasticity, reducing the minimum cost under which a renter could acquire a film for distribution abroad, from £20,000 ($100,000) to £15,000 ($75,000), and allowing the foreign rights of a film in the treble quota category to be bought for £25,000 ($125,000)—and the renter who did so, to count it as two for his quota.

These new proposals came as no immediate shock to the exhibitor camp, for in conversations between themselves and the Board of Trade they had talked the matter over, and knew what was coming. They knew, too, the Government was determined that triple quota should go through, and of this deciding factor sight must not be lost.

But in the proposals they saw a serious flaw. It was further stipulated that if after a year's trial the Films Council should so decide, then unqualified triple quota, that is without the limitation to 50 per cent of the footage, could be restored. They thought, too, the reciprocity minimums too low.

Protests Stilled

An immediate letter of protest was sent to Stanley, expounding their point of view, and a campaign prepared under which every member of the House of Lords was to be canvassed and appealed to. It was to be a fight to a finish a fight of the imminence and nature of which the trade was kept in darkness.

Within twenty-four hours the fight was abandoned, and a new spirit of goodwill and tolerance had entered the situation. The Board of Trade, bent on conciliation, compromised, cut out the clause which permitted the restoration of unqualified triple quota and inset in its place a clause under which the relevant quota figures might be raised, lowered or abolished, and increased the minimum reciprocity cost figures.

With this promise, and knowing that they were for the first time in the bill's career, fighting a losing battle, the exhibitors abandoned their campaign and agreed to give the measure their tacit support. They were aware of the Government's determination and of the diplomatic policy behind it, and they believed it far better to accept a half measure than to oppose and be saddled with an unqualified triple quota burden.

So it was that when Lord Templemore for the Government introduced the triple quota plan in the Lords Committee it was agreed to without a division and another chapter in Anglo American goodwill virtually closed.

Increases Sponsored by Moyne

This spirit of goodwill, however, did not shine too brilliantly in the speeches of Lord Moyne, under whose banner the Commission which wrote the new bill originally sat. He it was who sponsored the quota increases all round, and he it was who said he was unimpressed by the arguments of this extremely rich foreign industry and suggested that if the British investor was standing off, then the foreign producer should be compelled to put back some of the £6,500,000 ($32,000,000) he draws annually from Britain.

At the moment of writing revolt is rising against the quota increases, both in the renter camp and in that of the exhibitors.

IN THE BRITISH STUDIOS

by AUBREY FLANAGAN

New Cooperative

The cooperative movement in British film production is spreading. Another picture is now to be made on a cooperative basis, not dissimilar to that upon which Pinebrook was founded, in which are associated Roy Kellino cameraman and director, Pamela Kellino, who under the name of Pamela Oster starred in "Jew Suss," and James Mason, British screen and stage actor. They are supported in this venture by three other artists Peter Coke, Esma Cannon and Sylvia Coleridge, all of whom are taking a practical part in the cooperative unit's first production.

This is "Deadwater" an open air type of drama, with the minimum amount of dialogue, which has been devised from a story specially written with a new technique in mind by Pamela Kellino and James Mason. Active production was launched on Wednesday, March 16th.

The unit works on a cooperative basis and none of the three principals is to take a salary.

Roy Kellino who is to produce, direct and handle the cameras states that precise budgeting is not being embarked upon at the outset, the cost of the picture being possible of variance between £10,000 ($50,000) and £20,000 ($100,000) but not above the latter figure. Reasons for this being the concentration on exteriors and the dubieties of the English weather.

Heroine's Life

The life of Grace Darling, one of England's most famous heroines and a character in whose life both romance, drama and epic adventure played a part, is to be made into a British film on the 1938 schedules.

Producing and directing this epic of national heroism, is Bernard Mainwaring, who has already many British films to his name, and who, apart from his directorial record, has a great number of film stories to his credit.

"Grace Darling" will be made at Pinebrook with the active collaboration of Captain Richard Norton and the studio company, at an approximate budget of £30,000.

Comedy in Work

Work is proceeding to schedule on the Pathé production of "Night Alone," which Thomas Bentley is directing from Jeffery Dell's London play, at the Welwyn Studios.

The story is a comedy drama of a devoted husband who is forced to leave his wife for one night for the first time since they were married, and of the husband's consequent embroilment with gangsters. Leonora Corbett and Emlyn Williams are the stars

Production of George Bernard Shaw's "Pygmalion" was ceremoniously launched last week at a luncheon at which guests of honor were the cast, C. M. Woolf whose General Film Distributors will handle the product, G. B. S. himself and Lady Asquith. Gabriel Pascal, producer, Leslie Howard star and co-director of the picture, and Anthony Asquith, director, are shown above discussing the scenario while on vacation in the Swiss Tyrol.

Sport Films Ready

A new series of screen guides to athletics has just been completed by John Betts, noted British producer of sporting films. The series is to be called "Sportsmen All" and many of those who have cooperated in the production are Olympic champions and world record-holders in many branches of athletics.

There are two versions of each film being made, one a shorter version for normal cinema and entertainment purposes, and the other in instructional form to be used in sporting clubs, colleges and the services. Both are designed to help with the "Get Fit" campaign which is being sponsored by the British Government.

J. E. Lovelock, Olympic and world record holder for 1500 metres and S. C. Wooderson, world's mile record holder have been filmed for the series. Walking is represented by Olympic champion H. H. Whitlock, while Len Harvey, ex-British boxing champion demonstrates the art of pugilism.

ABP's Plans

Associated British Pictures also has decided that the current slump in British production and the uncertainty of new film legislation will not halt its progress.

Associated British Pictures, with studios at Elstree, has been working continually since they were built 10 years ago, and now announces a new schedule in which 21 pictures are to be made during 1938-9, with at times three productions on the floor at once.

Among the directors announced on the Associated British roster are Harold Schuster, Herbert Brenon, Paul Stein and Thomas Bentley.

Players already assigned are Diana Churchill, John Lodge, Jean Muir, Frances Day, Peter Murray Hill and Barbara Blair.

The program started with "Lovers' Knot," a comedy, now off the floor, in which Diana Churchill, Jean Muir and Peter Murray Hill played, and is due to be succeeded by "Yes, Madam," which Harold Schuster is to direct. It is based on the musical comedy which ran with much success at the London Hippodrome.

The British countryside is to be a feature in "Yellow Sands," comedy set in the high hedged lanes and wind-swept moors of Devonshire. This is to be filmed entirely in exteriors in the West Country of England, and Diana Churchill will have a leading role.

"Coffee for One," a comedy of juvenile escapade, is to be directed by Thomas Bentley.

Frances Day, star of stage and screen, is to appear in a musical tentatively titled "Out of the Blue."

"Marigold," Scottish period comedy, is to be made by Harold Schuster, with Jean Muir in the title role. Authentic Scottish locations probably will be filmed in color.

Arnold Bennett's comedy "The Card" is due for production, as is also "Black Eyes," the story of a Russian waiter's masquerade.

Gordon Sherry's "Black Limelight," which is running with success in the West End, is to be filmed, as also are W. W. Jacobs' comedy of a London water front, "Queer Cargo," and a naval comedy, "Luck of the Navy."

Another Bulldog Drummond story is to be produced, with John Lodge in the title role and Albert Burdon, North-Century comedian, is scheduled for "Cross Your Fingers."

For Anna Neagle

"Sixty Glorious Years" has been selected by Herbert Wilcox as the title of his next Anna Neagle-Anton Walbrook production dealing with the domestic life of Queen Victoria, which as already reported in the HERALD, is to be made in color and will go on the floor on April 13th.

Pathé Active

Pathe, which consistently has remained active at its studios in Welwyn, Hertfordshire, has now launched into production with "Night Alone," a screen version of a thriller which ran for some time on the London stage.

Thomas Bentley will direct. The cast includes Leonora Corbett, Leslie Brooks and Emlyn Williams.

OBITUARIES

Harry Scott Dead; Former Sales Head

Harry Scott, former sales executive, died Friday night in his apartment at the Hotel Belvedere, New York.

Mr. Scott entered the motion picture industry with George Kleine, for whom he managed branch offices in Columbus, Dallas, Boston and Philadelphia. Later he was associated with General Film Company. When the First National exhibitor circuit was organized Mr. Scott became manager of the Detroit exchange in partnership with John Kunsky and George Trendle. He also was a partner in the Michigan Educational franchise.

Mr. Scott joined Pathe in October, 1923, and became general sales manager in August, 1925. Subsequently, he was sales manager of the Van Beuren Corporation and manager for Universal in Detroit and Washington, also manager for United Artists in St. Louis. His last position was that of branch manager in St. Louis for Monogram, joining the company in 1937.

He is survived by a widow and a son, George.

Oscar Apfel, Director, Character Actor, Dies

Oscar C. Apfel, associated with the motion picture industry as a director and character actor since 1912, died March 21st of a heart attack at his home in Hollywood.

Mr. Apfel, whose career began as a producer and director at the Chicago Opera House, made one of the earliest of the films produced, "The Squaw Man," which was filmed at Fort Lee, N. J. During his career he appeared on the screen for World, Lasky, Fox, Selig, Arrow, Producers Security, Hodkinson, Metro, Trust, Action Pictures and his own company, Oscar Apfel Productions.

Among the most recent pictures in which he appeared were "Crack-Up," Twentieth Century-Fox; "History Is Made at Night," United Artists, and "Trouble in Morocco," Columbia.

Mr. Apfel was born in Cleveland. He is survived by his widow and two sisters. Funeral services were held March 23rd.

Robert C. Stueve

Robert C. Stueve, 72, executive head of an operating company which owns three theatres at Findlay, Ohio, died last week as a result of a self-inflicted bullet wound, attributed to despondency over ill health. He opened his first theatre at Akron, Ohio, in 1912.

Lee Chamberlain

Lee A. Chamberlain, 51, manager of the Commonwealth Amusement Corporation's Perkins theatre at Harrisonville, Mo., died last Tuesday from injuries sustained in an automobile accident in Kansas City, Kan.

Otto Karl Fischer, 54, Jewish director of the Czech National Theatre, died of a heart attack in Praha, Czechoslovakia, recently.

Infringement Suit Filed on Broadcast

A copyright infringement suit seeking $100,000 damages, a permanent injunction and an accounting of the profits was filed in the United States district court in New York this week by Harry Delf, a playwright, against the National Broadcasting Company, Inc., Marcus Loew Booking Agency, Inc., Loew's, Inc., Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Corporation, Metro-Goldwyn Picture Corporation, General Foods Corporation, Maxwell House Products, Ltd., Benton and Bowles, Inc., Frank Dolan, a scenarist, Robert Taylor and June Clayworth.

Mr. Delf alleges that he wrote a play, "The Joker" in 1924 and that it was "pirated" in a sketch used for "Good News of 1938" in a broadcast over NBC.

BOOK REVIEW

I SHOULD HAVE STAYED HOME, a Hollywood novel by Horace McCoy. New York: Alfred A. Knopf. 235 pp. Price $2.00 net.

Since the nature and the material of this fictional work concern the cinema capital called Hollywood and, particularly, some selected slices from the life in the raw as cut from the struggling moments in the hectic career of a representative young film aspirant, it would seem logical to consider the literary class of the narrative in the light and line of the alphabetical symbols with which the industry particularizes its own product. So the worth and result of Mr. Coy's pen efforts depicting the screenland scene must be consigned to the category of "B" productions.

Trouble as well as the story begins when Mona, the leading woman (or the heroine) of the piece forgets her histrionic restraint along with her manners and rises with a fine sense of the dramatic climax to cast uncomplimentary references on the parentage of the judge, who has just passed sentence on her friend, Dorothy, arrested on the charge of shoplifting. Thence the reader is introduced to such persons as a notorious beldame, a fellow movie struck hopeful, what is purported to be cinema society, amatory individuals who recognize neither sex nor color limitations, and a general assortment of exhibitionists.

Though the pages are frequently dotted with topical references to screen celebrities, the book is mute concerning facts of picture production. If the few bits of local color and gossip were omitted, the tale could have been told just as sensationally of the radio, theatrical or the garment industries.

Mr. McCoy writes his plot with a blunt pen and his skeletonized style has sketched the literary personae as caricatures rather than characters.

According to the dramatically worded jacket announcement, Mr. McCoy's intent was to sound warning to young talent to beware of the siren song of the screen. The book, pointed at a three A rating for drug store literati trade, is published by the house of Knopf, sponsors of the monumental Joseph saga by Thomas Mann, which only proves that movies are not the only producers of inferior and minor "B" product. —JOSEPH F. COUGHLIN.

IN COURTS

Court Orders Condor Plans by April 25th

Federal Judge George Cosgrove in Los Angeles this week ordered that plans for reorganization of Condor Pictures, Inc., under Section 77B of the Bankruptcy Act be brought into court by April 25th after Trustee Clinton E. Miller had said he believed a proposed plan would place the company on a profitable basis.

A petition of Consolidated Film Industries seeking reversal of the court's ruling holding that Automatic Productions Company of Chicago was entitled to secured creditor status with a claim of $115,000 was presented.

Judge Cosgrove referred to Special Master Samuel W. McNabb a petition of Mr. Miller requesting an accounting from Glen Stephens, former president of Condor, and Lester Cowans, former manager of Hollywood Pictures, on $32,000 of Condor funds. Hollywood Pictures was formed to take over Condor assets and the money was turned over to Mr. Cowan by Mr. Stephens, the court was told.

Court Names Walcer In "Lynton" Action

Kenneth E. Walcer, an attorney, was designated Special Master by Federal Judge Robert P. Patterson in the United States district court in New York this week to assess damages and take an accounting of the profits earned by Moredall Realty Corporation, operators of the Capitol theatre, New York, during the exhibition of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture "Letty Lynton." Edward Sheldon and Margaret A. Barnes, authors, brought suit which charged infringement of their play, "Dishonored Lady," in the film. The infringement was established by an action against MGM and a suit against the exhibitor followed.

Judge Patterson's order revealed that the U. S. circuit court of appeals last month had reversed a previous order granting a temporary injunction, but had refused to pass on the question of whether the exhibitor was liable.

Sues Film Foundation

A $6,000 breach of contract suit has been filed in New York supreme court by Mabel Jacques Eichel against the Motion Picture Picture Foundation of America, Inc., a non-profit organization devoted to stimulating the use of films for teaching and visual education. A motion for a bill of particulars will be heard this week.

Columbia Gets Settlement

Litigation between Columbia Pictures Corporation and Consolidated Amusement Enterprises, which had arisen through the latter's refusal to pay for product which, it claimed, was improperly designated as to classification, has terminated through arbitration, with Consolidated Amusement agreeing to pay Columbia $13,000 as a settlement.

Ross Williams, formerly connected with Paramount in Cincinnati, has been appointed West Virginia salesman by Republic.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

British and Dominions

TWO'S COMPANY: Ned Sparks, Mary Brian—Very good comedy. Good program picture which did average business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

Columbia

AWFUL TRUTH, THE: Irene Dunne, Cary Grant—Once again Columbia crashes through with the comedy hit of the year. This picture definitely establishes Irene Dunne as the "Queen of Sophisticated Comedy" and in it she reaches new heights. Cary Grant acts as capable foil for her bon mots and witticisms and, in addition, comes through as a capable comedian in his own right. It did my heart good to hear gale after gale of laughter sweep through the auditorium as reel after reel was unfolded before 2,000 critical eyes. It is very seldom that a picture will touch the risibilities of every man in here, but this one did. The ending, novel and rib-tickling, left them in a state of sheer exhaustion and the smiles that wreathed their faces as they returned to their routine was a pleasure to see. It's your picture, it's my picture, it's everyone's picture, and should be shown in every theatre throughout the world. Thanks, Columbia, you deserve more than commendation for the way you have handled this star and for the pictures you have placed her in. When other stars are fading, Irene Dunne continues to be the brightest star in the firmament. Running time, 90 minutes. Played March 12.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

I'LL TAKE ROMANCE: Grace Moore, Melvyn Douglas—Fair.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

IT HAPPENED IN HOLLYWOOD: Richard Dix, Fay Wray—Columbia, in this writer's estimation, makes the best "B" pictures on the market. This is no exception. Not big, but plenty of human interest and clever use of big stars' doubles. Running time, 65 minutes. Played March 9-11.—W. C. Lewellen, Federal Theatre, Denver, Col. Neighborhood patronage.

WIDE OPEN FACES: Joe E. Brown—Just fair.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

IT'S ALL YOURS: Francis Lederer, Madeleine Carroll, Mischa Auer—Nice little picture. Lederer doesn't seem to click, but does nice job in the film. Madeleine Carroll beautiful. Mischa Auer up to the usual excellence. Need to sell it. Lower than average business. Running time, 80 minutes. Played March 23-24.—W. C. Lewellen, Federal Theatre, Denver, Col. Neighborhood patronage.

LIFE BEGINS WITH LOVE: Jean Parker, Douglas Montgomery—Doesn't get started until the picture is half finished. Poorly put together. Below Columbia's usual high standard of "B" films as far as this audience is concerned. Running time, 68 minutes. Played March 12-14.—W. C. Lewellen, Federal Theatre, Denver, Col. Neighborhood patronage.

MURDER IN GREENWICH VILLAGE: Richard Arlen, Fay Wray—Okay for double feature.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

NO TIME TO MARRY: Richard Arlen, Mary Astor—Good entertainment. Amusing and full of action. Good for adults and young people.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

PENITENTIARY: Walter Connolly, John Howard, Jean Parker—Gripping melodrama. Players act with sincerity. The matter of the prisoners is handled with smooth direction.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

PENITENTIARY: Walter Connolly, Jean Parker—Splendid picture of its kind with business 'way above normal. Running time, 79 minutes. Played March 2-3.—E. G. Sheetz, Hables Palace Theatre, Winchester, Va. Rural and city patronage.

PENNIES FROM HEAVEN: Bing Crosby, Madge Evans—Not many fell around or near the box office. Not the right kind of picture for this town.—M. Bailey, Strand Theatre, Dryden, Ontario, Can. Small town patronage.

OUTLAWS OF THE PRAIRIE: Charles Starrett, Donald Grayson—A very good western with excellent singing and good cowboy band.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

In this, the exhibitors' own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box-office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to—

MOTION PICTURE HERALD
Rockefeller Center, New York

TRAPPED BY G-MEN: Jack Holt, Wynne Gibson—Very good Holt picture. Holt goes over very good here. Running time, 70 minutes. Played March 10.—E. G. Sheetz, Hables Palace Theatre, Winchester, Va. Rural and city patronage.

TRAPPED BY G-MEN: Jack Holt, Wynne Gibson—A satisfactory action play. Jack's best in a long while. Fair box office. Played February 8.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

UNDER SUSPICION: Jack Holt—A clever mystery drama. Action, thrills and suspense. Adults and young people.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

Chesterfield

MISSING GIRLS: Roger Pryor, Muriel Evans—Ran this in sub-zero weather to a sub-zero crowd. Single bill weekend with "Charlie McCarthy" short. "Charlie" let us down miserably.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

First National

GOLD IS WHERE YOU FIND IT: George Brent, Olivia de Havilland, Claude Rains—A swell picture that will please all audiences, if you are able to get any audience. This picture is a perfect example of what marquee names mean. Well acted, well produced, a fine story, but still is a long way from being box-office hit. We wasted the best days of the week on it. Running time, 97 minutes. Played March 9-13.—Peter Panagos, Indiana Theatre, Marion, Ind. General patronage.

HOLLYWOOD HOTEL: Dick Powell, Rosemary Lane—Mess of stuff called a special. In this they've crowded enough talent to make three good features, and still haven't got even one. They could have left out Johnnie Davis, Frances Langford (for all the singing she did), Glenda Farrell, Louella Parsons (who sounded as though she was just learning to talk) and Benny Goodman's Orchestra, and nobody would have noticed it unless possibly to get a little pleasure of missing 'em. Dick Powell, Ted Healy, Alan Mowbray, Hugh Herbert, Mabel Todd and Lola Lane gave good performances, but didn't have much chance to really do their stuff. They were crowded out by others who were so valueless to this picture. Running time, 109 minutes.—A. E. Eliason, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

SAN QUENTIN: Pat O'Brien, Humphrey Bogart—This is a swell picture and has good names in cast but did not draw as well as expected. Running time, 65 minutes. Played October 6-7.—R. L. Hall, Aztec Theatre, Van Alstyne, Texas. Small town patronage.

SH! THE OCTOPUS: Hugh Herbert, Allan Jenkins, Marcia Ralston—Another of the "nutty" cycle, but those irrepressible comedians, Herbert and Jenkins, manage to make it funny enough to cover. However, our patrons are tiring of these crazy things. At the very end this was disclosed as a dream.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

SH! THE OCTOPUS: Hugh Herbert, Allen Jenkins—NO, in big letters.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

SUBMARINE D-1: Pat O'Brien, George Brent,

Wayne Morris—Excellent submarine story. Instructive.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

THEY WON'T FORGET: Claude Rains, Gloria Dickson, Otto Kruger—Our patrons (and they were few in number) were disappointed. A heavy, gruesome picture of a southern lynching that ended like the first chapter of a serial. Suspicion pointed to everyone and the story ended with one of the leads lynched and the one guilty of the murder not disclosed. Running time, 95 minutes. Played March 4-5.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

Grand National

MAN IN THE MIRROR, THE: Edward Everett Horton—These English pictures just were not made for our patrons. Although they like E. E. Horton, this failed miserably at box office.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BAD MAN OF BRIMSTONE: Wallace Beery, Virginia Bruce, Lewis Stone—Good production. Comments all favorable. Did a nice business. Played February 25-26.—M. W. Matthecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

BAD MAN OF BRIMSTONE: Wallace Beery, Virginia Bruce, Lewis Stone—Melodrama of the old West. Everybody enjoyed this picture.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

BAD MAN OF BRIMSTONE: Wallace Beery, Virginia Bruce—Good. Crowd unusually large. Story very good. Beery's quaint. Comedy got many a laugh from the crowd. Will make plenty of money for exhibitor. Played March 9-10.—R. L. Hall, Aztec Theatre, Van Alstyne, Texas. Small town patronage.

BEG, BORROW OR STEAL: Frank Morgan, Florence Rice—A good comedy. The players are all reliable entertainers and there was much satisfactory comment from those attending. Played February 16.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

BEG, BORROW OR STEAL: Frank Morgan, Florence Rice, John Beal—Amusing entertainment. Morgan steals the show.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

BIG CITY: Spencer Tracy, Luise Rainer—Played this with "Topper" and a Three Stooges Comedy. The word-of-mouth must have been favorable, for the second and third days' business was above average. "Big" City no doubt did its share.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

BIG CITY: Spencer Tracy, Luise Rainer—A knock-out and underestimated by most everyone. Crowd ate it up. Did not draw too well, but, oh boy, did they like the climax. Running time, 80 minutes. Played March 5-7.—R. L. Hall, Aztec Theatre, Van Alstyne, Texas. Small town patronage.

BIG HOUSE, THE: Wallace Beery, Robert Montgomery, Chester Morris—I thought I would take a chance on this reissue, feeling that "Scarface" drew so well, also the fact that "The Big House" was first released about 1930. So I took a chance and results were very satisfactory. It drew very well. The picture itself is today still the best of all prison pictures. If they tried to make it now, I don't see how they could improve on it. We got a good print and the sound on it was also good. This was doubled with "Madame X."—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

BRIDE WORE RED, THE: Joan Crawford, Francis Tone—This Bride did well for us. This was doubled with "The Sheik Steps Out." It drew above average March 1st and March 2nd, Ash Wednesday. We did a fair average Wednesday business.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

BROADWAY MELODY OF 1938: Robert Taylor, Eleanor Powell, George Murphy, Buddy Ebsen—Not up to previous "Broadway Melodies." Without Taylor's box office attraction, would not be worth playing. Business poor.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

CAPTAINS COURAGEOUS: Freddie Bartholomew,

Spencer Tracy, Lionel Barrymore—Fortunately had this booked the Sunday following Academy Award. Result, capacity business. All comments favorable. Running time, 116 minutes. Played March 13-16.—A. Goldson, Gold Coast Theatre, Chicago, Ill. Neighborhood patronage.

CAPTAINS COURAGEOUS: Freddie Bartholomew, Spencer Tracy, Lionel Barrymore—They don't make them any better than this picture.—M. Bailey, Strand Theatre, Dryden, Ontario, Can. Small town patronage.

CONQUEST: Greta Garbo, Charles Boyer—Very good historical drama. Boyer wonderful in his role. No matter how good a picture is, if Garbo is in it, my crowd will not come to see her.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

CONQUEST: Greta Garbo, Charles Boyer—Poor. Took plenty of loss on this one. Hope she gets married to that guy Stokowski and settles down to kitchen work, which she is well fitted for. On my screen she is a complete washout, and always had been. Played March 1-2.—M. W. Matthecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

CONQUEST: Greta Garbo, Charles Boyer—You'd almost think that among other things Congress had passed a law requiring Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to cast Miss Garbo consistently in costume plays. They are that persistent in killing every possibility of Garbo's being box office. "Conquest" runs true to form and, consequently, business was most discouraging. There must be a modern story somewhere that they could produce and star Miss Garbo in. And, yes, just to make the change of diet a real success, how about a happy ending? Greta deserves for just once at least to win and enjoy life with the hero of her choice. But, of course, no one would believe it really did end happily unless possibly it carried the title "Happy Ending." Garbo should be an asset on our marquee, but now things are such that our patrons think G-A-R-B-O spells "KEEP OUT." Too bad. Played February 17-18.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

EVERYBODY SING: Allan Jones, Judy Garland, Fanny Brice, Billie Burke—Gay. Clever Judy steals the honors. Wonderful singing by Jones. Exaggerated comedy.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

EVERYBODY SING: Allan Jones, Judy Garland and Fanny Brice—Entertaining all the way. Running time, 90 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

FIREFLY, THE: Jeanette MacDonald, Allan Jones, Warren William—Boy! Oh Boy! Oh Boy! Oh Boy! Can Jeanette sing! Even the small towns go for her in a big way. Jones isn't so bad, either. Think he can be compared favorably with Nelson Eddy. This is a costume and operatic picture, but they liked it here.—C. McKusick, Community Theatre, Guilford, Me. Small town patronage.

FIREFLY, THE: Jeanette MacDonald, Allan Jones—A very elaborate picture with much singing and a background of Napoleonic history. This should have been sufficient to kill it for a small town. However, it has enough story and action to get it by with persons who know nothing and care nothing about Napoleonic history. Running time, 138 minutes. Played March 4-5.—G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming community patronage.

LAST GANGSTER, THE: Edward G. Robinson, James Stewart, Rose Stradner—An excellent melodrama. This packs a fancy wallop. Fair draw. Played February 12.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

LOVE IS A HEADACHE: Gladys George, Franchot Tone—Good picture, but not a Sunday date because it won't make any money. The few that saw it certainly enjoyed it, but the trouble is getting them in. I think the title hurts it. A good kid picture. Running time, 80 minutes. Played March 6-7.—Ouida Stephano, Grove Theatre, Groveton, Texas. Small town patronage.

LOVE IS A HEADACHE: Gladys George, Franchot Tone—Like the title, this picture is rather a "headache." Comedy unworthy of its stars.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

MADAME X: Gladys George, Warren William—This new version of "Madame X" equals or betters the former versions. It is a powerful, soul-stirring drama in every way. This was doubled with "The Big House." "Madame X" drew the women and "The Big House" drew the men. Result: business considerably above average.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

MANHATTAN MELODRAMA (Reissue): Clark Gable, Myrna Loy, William Powell—Very fine reissue which we had not used before and we did a nice business on it. Running time, 90 minutes. Played February 25-26.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

MANNEQUIN: Joan Crawford, Spencer Tracy—Good picture, good dialogue, good direction and good gross. Running time, 95 minutes.—E. C. Arehart, Strand Theatre, Milford, Iowa. General patronage.

MANNEQUIN: Joan Crawford, Spencer Tracy—This one was a dandy. Everyone enjoyed it. Tracy big draw here. Running time, 95 minutes. Played March

NEW CONTRIBUTORS TO DEPARTMENT

Introducing the following exhibitors this week as reporters to "What the Picture Did for Me":

E. G. Sheetz, Hables Palace, Winchester, Virginia.

C. McKusick, Community Theatre, Guilford, Maine.

While Mr. McKusick, assistant manager of the Community theatre, is not a complete stranger to the department, his latest report appeared in the issue of July 18, 1936.

6-7.—B. J. Aylesworth, Connellee and Lyric Theatres, Eastland, Texas. General patronage.

MANNEQUIN: Joan Crawford, Spencer Tracy—A picture that brings Miss Crawford back to the pinnacle to which she belongs. No one but Tracy could have done it. One can readily see why he won the Academy award this year. Give me Tracy, Lionel Barrymore, Gable and Lewis Stone and I will bring them in every time. You can have the balance of the male stars, but, for sheer ability, these top the list. This is a wonderful picture and should do business for everyone who plays it as it seems to me to be absolutely without flaws. My audience, small as it was, went out raving about it. We played against "Snow White," so you can see what the business was. This is a wonderfully directed show that will be enjoyed by all. Running time, 95 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

MANNEQUIN: Joan Crawford, Spencer Tracy—Adult entertainment. Well acted, but unwholesome story.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

MAN PROOF: Myrna Loy, Franchot Tone, Rosalind Russell—Sparkling, smooth and smart comedy. Cast excellent in their roles.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

NAVY BLUE AND GOLD: Robert Young, James Stewart, Florence Rice, Tom Brown—Well, we knew it would be good, but we hardly expected such a grand entertainment as it was. It has everything! And if you don't drop a tear, there's something wrong inside you. We sure do go for Stewart and Rice in a big way and there isn't anything wrong with Young or Brown, either. Running time, 94 minutes. Played March 6-7.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

OF HUMAN HEARTS: Walter Huston, James Stewart, Beulah Bondi—A heart touching drama. Excellent cast. Family entertainment.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

OF HUMAN HEARTS: Walter Huston, James Stewart, Beulah Bondi—Fine picture. Good for any spot. Not an extended run, but good for any spot. Running time, 103 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

PARADISE FOR THREE: Robert Young, Florence Rice, Frank Morgan—Good comedy. Sparkling and interesting.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

ROSALIE: Eleanor Powell, Nelson Eddy—Lavish production. Superb singing. Powell great. Bolger good, but they should have had him dance more. Picture too long.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

THOROUGHBREDS DON'T CRY: Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland—Very fine down-to-earth comedy drama with a little of the serious mixed in. Can recommend very highly. Running time, 80 minutes. Played March 4-5.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

THOROUGHBREDS DON'T CRY: Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland—Great stuff for the youngsters and the oldsters liked it, too. Wish Judy had sung a couple more songs, but won't kick. Fair business.—C. McKusick, Community Theatre, Guilford, Me. Small town patronage.

TOPPER: Constance Bennett, Cary Grant—Played this with "Big City" and a Three Stooges comedy. I very seldom play two A pictures in one program. In changing dates the two pictures got doubled up. This triple show drew a swell crowd, but I will give the credit for the main draw to "Topper." This sure is the champion ghost story of them all. This was a clever piece of work from every angle. Every possible aversion to death was removed by having the ghosts behave like humans, look like humans, plus the power to appear and disappear, and this sure had the crowd roaring and laughing. The word-of-mouth must have been favorable, for the second and third day's business was also above average. "Big City" no doubt did its share also.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

WOMEN MEN MARRY, THE: Josephine Hutchinson, George Murphy—The trailer on this led me to be afraid of it, but it turned out to be a nice piece of entertainment. Running time, 61 minutes. Played February 26-March 1.—H. Wilson Young, Wahoo Theatre, Dubach, La. Small town and rural patronage.

YANK AT OXFORD, A: Robert Taylor, Lionel Barrymore, Maureen O'Sullivan. A simple theme but an interesting story, with swell performances by Taylor and Barrymore, brought us a brisk business on this one. If they keep Taylor's love affairs in future pictures at the same minimum as this one, he no doubt will establish as big a male following as he has women. Running time, 103 minutes.—Peter Panagos, Indiana Theatre, Marion, Ind. General patronage.

YOU'RE ONLY YOUNG ONCE: Lewis Stone, Cecilia Parker, Mickey Rooney—The kind of a picture everybody likes. Glad they will make more of this series. Mickey Rooney is an asset to the box office. Running time, 76 minutes.—E. C. Arehart, Strand Theatre, Milford, Iowa. General patronage.

Monogram

BOY OF THE STREETS: Jackie Cooper, Maureen O'Connor—More power to Monogram when they can produce such pictures as this. No ritzy tenement sets, but the real article. One could almost smell the garlic. This boy Cooper, in the hands of a director like William Nigh, shines like a new dollar. Applause for Monogram, for Jackie Cooper and for William Nigh. It took all three to make this picture. Played March 13.—Harry M. Palmer, Temple Court Theatre, Washington, Ind. General patronage.

BOY OF THE STREETS: Jackie Cooper, Maureen O'Connor—Booked midweek just to see what it would do and receipts were very satisfactory and it was quite generally liked. Come again, Jackie! Running time, 75 minutes.—E. C. Arehart, Strand Theatre, Milford, Iowa. General patronage.

Paramount

BARRIER, THE: Leo Carrillo, Jean Parker, James Ellison—Could not ask for anything better for my type of town. Great scenery and sets. Played March 10-11.—L. G. Tewksbury, Opera House, Stonington, Me. Small town patronage.

BIG BROADCAST OF 1938, THE: W. C. Fields, Martha Raye, Dorothy Lamour—Not the big special Paramount would have you believe. Too silly to be entertaining.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

BORN TO THE WEST: John Wayne, Marsha Hunt—Fair western.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

BUCCANEER, THE: Frederic March, Francisca Gaal, Margot Grahame, Akim Tamiroff—Historically interesting. Excellent cast. Exciting and stirring.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

BULLDOG DRUMMOND'S REVENGE: John Barrymore, Louise Campbell, John Howard—One of the best mystery dramas we have played this season. There is enough comedy in it to take off the tension created by the mystery scenes. Enjoyed by all. Running time, 60 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

BULLDOG DRUMMOND'S REVENGE: John Barrymore, Louise Campbell, John Howard—All "Drummond" stories good.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

BULLDOG DRUMMOND'S REVENGE: John Barrymore, Louise Campbell—This is good, but it didn't draw worth a darn. So what! Played February 15.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

CASSIDY OF BAR 20: William Boyd, Frank Darien—Played to a good crowd, considering lots of snow and basketball tournaments as competition. Hopalong is their favorite here, but not in roles where he pursues the fair sex. The farmers up here like to see him as a he-man, and "Lucky" can do the pursuing. These westerns are the best on the market, Mr. Sherman. Running time, 60 minutes.—A. E. Eliason, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

DAUGHTER OF SHANGHAI: Anna May Wong, Charles Bickford, Larry Crabbe—Has its moments. Dull in places and as impossible in spots as a serial. Good title and exploitation possibilities. Business far below normal due to double bill with "Merry-Go-Round of 1938." Running time, 67 minutes. Played March 5-8.—W. C. Wellen, Federal Theatre, Denver, Col. Neighborhood patronage.

EVERY DAY'S A HOLIDAY: Mae West, Edmund Lowe—As they say, it's the best of the Wests and not due to Mae, either. With the support she had in this it couldn't be anything but good. Business not so good, but those who came seemed to think they'd seen something. Running time, 79 minutes.—A. E. Eliason, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

kind, you could not sell my people into "Come and see her some time." Running time, 79 minutes. Played March 4-5.—B. J. Aylesworth, Connellee and Lyric Theatres, Eastland, Texas. General patronage.

EVERY DAY'S A HOLIDAY: Mae West, Edmund Lowe—"West" has "gone West" here. She no longer draws. Story dead and so was acting of West and Lowe. Audience'd rather had a good western. Played March 2-3.—R. L. Hall, Aztec Theatre, Van Alstyne, Texas. Small town patronage.

PARTNERS OF THE PLAINS: William Boyd, George Hayes—Where westerns go, this one will click okay.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

RUSTLER'S VALLEY: William Boyd, George Hayes—What's the use of trying to say anything about one of these? All the elements required are a western rancher with a ranch, a beautiful daughter and a herd of cattle to be stolen. Add a hero-cowboy, a sheriff, a gangster-looking bad man with a flock of cowboys who are not hero-like. A bank, stage coach or train should be added to be held up. But this mixture can be served every week and at least half of our patrons will fall for it. I think I know the reason, but it would take too long to tell it. Running time, 60 minutes. Played February 25-26.—G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming community patronage.

SCANDAL STREET: Lew Ayres, Louise Campbell—Fair small town story. Implausible.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

THIS WAY, PLEASE: Charles "Buddy" Rogers, Betty Grable, Ned Sparks—Was very agreeably surprised with this one. Interesting comedy situations with some elaborate sets. Betty Grable nice to look at, but little weak on acting. Running time, 70 minutes. Played March 2-3.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

THRILL OF A LIFETIME: The Yacht Club Boys, Ben Blue, Judy Canova, Betty Grable—Fair little musical. Canova and Ben Blue very good.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

THUNDER TRAIL: Gilbert Roland, Charles Bickford, Marsha Hunt—Very good. The best Zane Grey I have played here. Business pretty good. Running time, 68 minutes. Played March 5.—Ouida Stephano, Grove Theatre, Groveton, Texas. Small town patronage.

TRUE CONFESSION: Carole Lombard, Fred MacMurray—Good business on this one, but on the way out they would say "That was the silliest thing I ever saw," and I agree with them, but anyway, the crowd I got on this one wasn't a bit silly to me. I think they like silly pictures here. Running time, 83 minutes. Played March 3-4. Ouida Stephano, Grove Theatre, Groveton, Texas. Small town patronage.

TRUE CONFESSION: Carole Lombard, Fred MacMurray, John Barrymore—A good comedy, excellent cast with John Barrymore outstanding. However, business was off considerably and far from satisfactory. Played February 6-7. L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

WELLS FARGO: Joel McCrea, Bob Burns, Frances Dee—Very good. Good box office. Played February 5.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

WELLS FARGO: Joel McCrea, Frances Dee—Interesting historical drama. Will please young and old.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

WELLS FARGO: Joel McCrea, Frances Dee—A good production and did well at the box office. Liked generally. Comments all favorable. Played February 20-22.—M. W. Mattechek, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

WELLS FARGO: Joel McCrea, Bob Burns, Frances Dee—Splendidly produced tale of the early days of our own nation. Drew and pleased. Running time, 115 minutes.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

Republic

PORTIA ON TRIAL: Walter Abel, Frieda Inescort—Seemed as though this lasted about 20 minutes and ended 'way too soon. Everyone enjoyed this and said so. Running time, 76 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

PUBLIC COWBOY, NO. 1: Gene Autry, Ann Ruth-erford—It has been nearly a year since we have played Autry, but find that he has lost none of his popularity. This western is no different than most of them, but, with Autry as the lead, it draws as well as the "Hopalong Cassidy" series. Running time, 59 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

SHEIK STEPS OUT, THE: Ramon Novarro, Lola Lane—Ramon Novarro was quite pleasing in this, his comeback. One of his songs did not record so well, but there was some group singing that recorded well. This sheik drama follows the pattern of sheik drama with a pleasing surprise ending. This was doubled with "The Bride Wore Red." This program drew about average and I believe that "The Sheik Steps Out" held its own as part of the drawing power as well as pleasing the patrons.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

SPRINGTIME IN THE ROCKIES: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Polly Rowles—We decided to go the limit advertising an Autry picture and really see what it would do and, as a consequence, we went to town with this one. Running time, 60 minutes.—E. C. Arehart, Strand Theatre, Milford, Iowa. General patronage.

RKO Radio

DAMSEL IN DISTRESS, A: Fred Astaire, George Burns and Gracie Allen—Astaire without Rogers is like waffles without syrup. Burns and Allen are scarce in the picture. Astaire does very little dancing, but excellent novelty drum number on taps. Story weak. Business far below average. Running time, 101 minutes. Played February 26-28.—W. C. Lewellen, Federal Theatre, Denver, Col. Neighborhood patronage.

DOUBLE DANGER: Preston Foster, Whitney Bourne—Okay for double feature.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

FIGHT FOR YOUR LADY: John Boles, Jack Oakie, Ida Lupino—Only fair at best. Boles weak in this kind of role. Oakie can't carry the laughs any more. Business below average. Running time, 65 minutes. Played February 23-25.—W. C. Lewellen, Federal Theatre, Denver, Col. Neighborhood patronage.

FIT FOR A KING: Joe E. Brown, Helen Mack—Poor. Nothing to the story. Start nowhere and finishes the same place. Brown used to be a real power at the box office, but since he left Warner Brothers he has been a dud. Make them better, Joe. Played March 4-5.—M. W. Matthecheck, Lark Theatre, McMinnville, Ore. Local patronage.

HIGH FLYERS: Wheeler and Woolsey—These two are going no place fast, one bad picture after another. Well, at least they are consistent. Running time, 70 minutes. Played March 12.—A. Goldson, Gold Coast Theatre, Chicago, Ill. Neighborhood patronage.

HIGH FLYERS: Wheeler and Woolsey—Nothing to this and pleased only the kids up to about seven years of age. The producers of this evidently think only morons go to shows, if this is any indication of what they believe the public wants in entertainment. Running time, 79 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

HITTING A NEW HIGH: Lily Pons, Jack Oakie, John Howard—This was the world's worse. Pons and Oakie are ruined for life in this territory. Did a fair business on it because of its star value. It sure was lucky that I had it one day only. The cat wouldn't have come out to see it the second day. Don't play this picture unless you have to. Running time, 85 minutes. Played March 8.—B. J. Aylesworth, Connelley and Lyric Theatres, Eastland, Tex. General patronage.

HITTING A NEW HIGH: Lily Pons, Jack Oakie, John Howard—Nothing much to recommend here. Good only for the second half of a dual bill during the week. Running time, 84 minutes. Played March 12.—A. Goldson, Gold Coast Theatre, Chicago, Ill. Neighborhood patronage.

LIFE OF THE PARTY, THE: Joe Penner, Gene Raymond, Harriet Hilliard, Victor Moore, Helen Broderick—Not anything to rave about. Maybe we would have liked it better if RKO had sent us a decent print. One of our patrons who had seen it before told us that considerable of the show was definitely missing. Running time, 77 minutes (?). Played March 11-12.—G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming community patronage.

QUICK MONEY: Fred Stone, Dorothy Moore—Unimportant and unconvincing. Stone turns in a fair performance. Business off due to athletic events. Running time, 68 minutes. Played March 9-11.—W. C. Lewellen, Federal Theatre, Denver, Col. Neighborhood patronage.

SHE'S GOT EVERYTHING: Ann Sothern, Gene Raymond—Played on the upper half of a dual bill and it went over fine. RKO should have given Ann Sothern pictures she is capable of playing. She has a sweet voice as demonstrated in the one song she sang. Just a swell little comedy. Running time, 72 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

STAGE DOOR: Katharine Hepburn, Ginger Rogers—This one is supposed to be super entertainment, but it failed to give us an average program picture result at the box office. It carries an immense volume of rapidfire talk, so much so that in places several of the actors have to talk at the same time to get it all included. Most exhibitors seem to have thought well of it, but I am not able to see it as an "A" class production. Running time, 78 minutes. Played February 18-19.—G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming community patronage.

THERE GOES THE GROOM: Burgess Meredith, Ann Sothern—Good little double bill feature. Meredith better in comedy role than drama. Ann Sothern up to par. Below average business. Running time, 63 minutes. Played February 23-25.—W. C. Lewellen, Federal Theatre, Denver, Col. Neighborhood patronage.

Twentieth Century - Fox

BARONESS AND THE BUTLER, THE: Annabella, William Powell—Just fair. About half a dozen liked it, the other half dozen didn't care for it at all. Had several complaints about the French accent in Annabella's speech. Personally, was very disappointed in this one. Running time, 76 minutes.—C. McKusick, Community Theatre, Guilford, Me. Small town patronage.

BORROWING TROUBLE: Jed Prouty, Spring Byington—Entertaining programmer. Pleased. One of the best of the Jones.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

CITY GIRL: Ricardo Cortez, Phyllis Brooks—Entertaining program. Well received.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

DANGER—LOVE AT WORK: Ann Sothern, Jack Haley—The only downright sorry picture that I have ever gotten from Fox. No real laughs and very few chuckles. About half of our prevue crowd either walked out or went to sleep. Running time, 81 minutes. Played March 5-6.—H. Wilson Young, Wahoo Theatre, Dubach, La. Small town and rural patronage.

HAPPY LANDING: Sonja Henie, Don Ameche, Ethel Merman, Cesar Romero—Who says there's a recession? Play "Happy Landing" and your recession will be over. There's no recession that good pictures will not cure. Running time, 101 minutes. Played March 7-9.—E. G. Sheetz, Hables Palace Theatre, Winchester, Va. Rural and city patronage.

HEIDI: Shirley Temple, Jean Hersholt—This helped make up for some box office failures that I have been running lately, some of them from Fox. Most of my creditors have started speaking to me again so don't any of you exhibitors dare to pan this picture. Running time, 88 minutes. Played March 3-4.—H. Wilson Young, Wahoo Theatre, Dubach, La. Small town and rural patronage.

INTERNATIONAL SETTLEMENT: Dolores Del Rio, George Sanders, June Lang—Good picture, but a flop at the box office. Running time, 75 minutes.

Played February 28-March 1.—E. G. Sheetz, Hables Palace Theatre, Winchester, Va. Rural and city patronage.

JUDGE PRIEST: (reissue) Will Rogers, Anita Louise—Will Rogers still packs 'em in here. His pictures and his memory will live forever in the hearts and minds of the public. Audience sat spellbound, although half of them had seen the film before. Played January 29-30.—R. L. Hall, Aztec Theatre, Van Alstyne, Texas. Small town patronage.

LIFE BEGINS AT COLLEGE: Ritz Brothers, Gloria Stuart—This is a good musical with a college background. It is good entertainment, but for us this drew below average. I believe the title is partly responsible for its lack of drawing power in this working class neighborhood. A workingman's wife or her husband cannot be expected to get very excited about life in college.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

LOVE ON A BUDGET: Jed Prouty, Spring Byington—A natural for your family trade. Everyone, young or old, seems to like the Jones's. Might not be so good for the big towns, but for us small towns, there's nothing better.—C. McKusick, Community Theatre, Guilford, Me. Small town patronage.

ROLL ALONG COWBOY: Smith Ballew, Cecilia Parker—Anyone can see that this fellow (Ballew) has possibilities and that is what kept patrons from kicking. What can be less intelligent than to make a Western without at least one good fist fight and some fast action? Running time, 55 minutes. Played March 5.—H. Wilson Young, Wahoo Theatre, Dubach, La. Small town and rural patronage.

SECOND HONEYMOON: Loretta Young, Tyrone Power—This is a "honey." Due to the fact that our play date was bad, our crowd was not up to standard but everyone enjoyed it a lot. Running time, 84 minutes. Played February 19-21.—R. L. Hall, Aztec Theatre, Van Alstyne, Texas. Small town patronage.

TARZAN'S REVENGE: Glenn Morris, Eleanor Holm—I would call it pretty crude stuff myself, but the box office told a different story, so they must have wanted to see something like this, because they know what they are going to see and hear in advance when they come to a Tarzan picture. Production was okay and we made money, so why worry 'cause I don't like Tarzan pictures. Played March 12.—L. G. Tewksbury, Opera House, Stonington, Me. Small town patronage.

THIS IS MY AFFAIR: Robert Taylor, Barbara Stanwyck, Victor McLaglen—Went back and picked this up in place of a programmer slated for the duals. Found it to be all that we expected and did a nice business on it. Running time, 99 minutes. Played February 27-28.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

WILD AND WOOLLY: Jane Withers, Walter Brennan—A good picture but it fell away below expectations. As a last minute substitute for "Heidi," it failed to do the trick. Played February 10-11.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

United Artists

DARK JOURNEY: Vivien Leigh, Conrad Veidt—One of those English pictures not worth playing.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

DEAD END: Sylvia Sidney, Joel McCrea, Humphrey Bogart—Very thought-provoking and gripping. The older people enjoyed it, I believe, but the young people haven't any time to see a picture of this caliber. Business none too good but am not one bit sorry I played it. Running time, 93 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

HURRICANE, THE: Dorothy Lamour, Jon Hall, C. Aubrey Smith—One of the finest films ever turned out. If Dorothy Lamour had been allowed to sing one number it would have been perfect. Very good attendance. C. Aubrey Smith outstanding. Running time, 123 minutes. Played February 26-28.—R. L. Hall, Aztec Theatres, Van Alstyne, Texas. Small town patronage.

I MET MY LOVE AGAIN: Joan Bennett, Henry Fonda—A fair midweek picture with as much draw as a drinking bout at a church bazaar. Did awful on it and glad it is over with. Running time, 77 minutes. Played March 9-10.—B. J. Aylesworth, Connelley and Lyric Theatres, Eastland, Tex. General patronage.

I MET MY LOVE AGAIN: Henry Fonda, Joan Bennett—Entertaining programmer. Running time, 76 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

NOTHING SACRED: Fredric March, Carole Lombard—Impossible story value but very sophisticated comedy, from droll humor to slapstick comedy. Our audience failed to get most of the good fun out of it. Rather disappointing. Color very good. Business below average due to weather conditions. Running time, 75 minutes. Played 12-14.—W. C. Lewellen, Federal Theatre, Denver, Col. Neighborhood patronage.

NOTHING SACRED: Carole Lombard, Fredric March—You cannot go wrong with this picture. I think it will please 99%. The color is wonderful. But there are so many wonderful things nowadays that your patrons just take the coloring as a matter of fact. Played March 7-8.—L. G. Tewksbury, Opera House, Stonington, Me. Small town patronage.

PRISONER OF ZENDA, THE: Ronald Colman, Madeleine Carroll, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.—Nice picture to good business, although weather was very cold and stormy. Played February 10-12.—M. Bailey, Strand Theatre, Dryden, Ontario, Can. Small town patronage.

STAND-IN: Leslie Howard, Joan Blondell, Humphrey Bogart—Lukewarm, neither hot or cold. Just another feature to complete a double bill. "Stand-In" is no "stand out." Running time, 90 minutes. Played March 10-11.—A. Goldson, Gold Coast Theatre, Chicago, Ill. Neighborhood patronage.

STAND-IN: Leslie Howard, Joan Blondell—A very fine picture. A down-to-earth story with real comedy. Good anywhere.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

STELLA DALLAS: Barbara Stanwyck, John Boles, Anne Shirley—The old perennial tear jerker still holds its appeal. The picture has, as always, a swell story of mother love and sacrifice, and has been produced to bring out the best in the actors. Miss Stanwyck does a swell job in this one. United Artists gets more rental, but when they get through they have a picture.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

STELLA DALLAS: Barbara Stanwyck, John Boles, Anne Shirley—Played it on a bargain night as a business stimulator and did it stimulate. The ladies thought it good but the men thought Stanwyck overplayed her part. Heard no kicks and had none to make. Running time, 106 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

WALTER WANGER'S VOGUES OF 1938: Warner Baxter, Joan Bennett—Comments heard oftenest on this were: "How much did they pay you to show this," and "I thought the color and the clothes just beautiful." Color was good. Story was nothing. Bennett and Baxter didn't hit. The ladies loved it and the gents thought it pretty punk. So did I. Running time, 108 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

WALTER WANGER'S VOGUES OF 1938: Warner Baxter, Joan Bennett—An excellent picture. Color the best yet. Story good. A fine picture and should have preferred time.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

WALTER WANGER'S VOGUES OF 1938: Warner Baxter, Joan Bennett—This one will make you wish you were in the clothing business instead of motion pictures. Will not draw in small town at all. Audience was "regusted." Running time, 112 minutes. Played November 20-21.—R. L. Hall, Aztec Theatre, Van Alstyne, Texas. Small town patronage.

WHEN THIEF MEETS THIEF: Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Valerie Hobson—Good programmer. Failed to bring in any extra customers, but it pleased.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

WOMAN CHASES MAN: Miriam Hopkins, Joel McCrea—Good comedy. Excellent dialogue. Did not bring in any extra business, but those who saw it liked it.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

Universal

ADVENTURE'S END: John Wayne, Diana Gibson—Fair. Rather slow and unexciting in spots. Drags through first half. Speeds up to a rather unconvincing finish. Below average business. Running time, 63 minutes. Played March 2-4.—W. C. Lewellen, Federal Theatre, Denver, Col. Neighborhood patronage.

MERRY-GO-ROUND OF 1938: Bert Lahr, Jimmy Savo, Mischa Auer—Worst business of winter. Unapproachable from any angle you try to sell. Running time, 87 minutes. Played March 5-8.—W. C. Lewellen, Federal Theatre, Denver, Col. Neighborhood patronage.

MYSTERIOUS CROSSING: James Dunn, Jean Rogers, Andy Devine—Light mystery drama helped along by Andy Devine's original clowning. Good picture, but poor at B. O.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

NIGHT KEY: Boris Karloff, Jean Rogers—Good entertainment. This was very well received. They liked Karloff in this definitely different role.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

WESTLAND CASE, THE: Preston Foster, Carol Hughes, Barbara Pepper—Another case of sixty minutes of silly deductions, and now murder mysteries have returned to the point where the villain is really the one you suspect all the time. Buxom blonde in the picture does a poor double for Mae W. Running time, 63 minutes. Played February 26-28.—W. C. Lewellen, Federal Theatre, Denver, Col. Neighborhood patronage.

WINGS OVER HONOLULU: Wendy Barrie, Ray Milland, Kent Taylor—Very good program picture. Slightly below average weekend business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

Warner Brothers

IT'S LOVE I'M AFTER: Leslie Howard, Bette Davis—Of all the silly comedies, this one beats them all. No entertainment. Keep Leslie Howard in dramas, not comedies.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

IT'S LOVE I'M AFTER: Bette Davis, Leslie Howard, Olivia de Havilland—Very good program picture. Running time, 90 minutes.—P. G. Held and Son, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

TOVARICH: Claudette Colbert, Charles Boyer—This was terrible for us. Hardly any business, many walk-outs and many slighting remarks. I think it was the dialect that displeased.—Ray Raeburn, Grand Theatre, Lemmon, S. D. General patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

AIR HOSTESS, THE: Color Rhapsodies—Impossible situation. Makes you nervous to watch it. Makes you feel like never riding in an airplane. Very little funny about it.—W. C. Lewellen, Federal Theatre, Denver, Col. Neighborhood patronage.

COMMUNITY SING: No. 1—Don Grayson's personality caught on here. He sings the songs they like. Play this one.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

COMMUNITY SING: No. 5—Our patrons like these. This one pleased them as they like Don Grayson. Play it.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

DISPUTED DECISIONS: New World of Sports Series—Good. Well worth playing. Well received.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

FIDDLING AROUND: Monte Collins, Tom Kennedy—A hilarious comedy, mostly old-fashioned slapstick, well received.—A. Goldson, Gold Coast Theatre, Chicago, Ill. Neighborhood patronage.

HIGHWAY SNOBBERY: Crazy Kat Cartoons—Very ordinary cartoon. Nothing missed if you don't play it.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

INDIAN SERENADE: Color Rhapsodies—Simple but cute. Nothing extra. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. C. Lewellen, Federal Theatre, Denver, Col. Neighborhood patronage.

LITTLE MATCH GIRL: Color Rhapsodies—A color cartoon masterpiece.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

NEIGHBORS: Color Rhapsodies—Very good. As well as being exceedingly entertaining, contains a good moral. Worth playing.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

NEW NEWS: Monte Collins, Tom Kennedy—This one is a riot. Collins' scalp twitching and Kennedy's clumsiness, a rare combination. Do not pass this up.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

PLAYING THE PONIES: Three Stooges—As funny as ever are these screwy Stooges.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

SCRAMBLED LEGS: New World of Sport Series—The most mirth-provoking short we have played in months. Absolutely guaranteed to chase the blues. Even our projectionists liked it, which is something. You pass the best if you miss this.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

SCRAPPY'S CAMERA TROUBLES: Scrappy Cartoons—"Scrappy Cartoons" are not particularly liked by our patrons. However, worth playing.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

SCRAPPY'S TRIP TO MARS: Scrappy Cartoons—A very good black and white cartoon.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

SCREEN SNAPSHOTS (NEW SERIES): No. 2—These Snapshots are one of the finest shorts produced today. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. G. Sheetz, Hables Palace Theatre, Winchester, Va. Rural patronage.

SCREEN SNAPSHOTS: No. 2—Always worth playing. "Screen Snapshots" lets them see their favorites as they really are.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

SCREEN SNAPSHOTS: No. 12—We can't give them enough of these. This one particularly good.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

THREE STOOGES COMEDY: Played this with "Topper" and "Big City." This triple show drew a swell crowd but I will give the credit for the main draw to "Topper." Not forgetting the Three Stooges, which drew some kids from six to sixty.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

Educational

AIR PARADE: Two-Reel Comedies—Very good. Catchy songs; lots of laughs. Running time, 18 minutes.—C. McKusick, Community Theatre, Guilford, Me. Small town patronage.

GANDY THE GOOSE: Terry-Toons—A terrible cartoon. Not a laugh in the house.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

LOVE GOES WEST: Song and Comedy Hit—Western songs and music good but dialogue rather stiff. Running time, 10 minutes.—C. McKusick, Community Theatre, Guilford, Me. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

AUDIOSCOPIKS: Special—This novel and crazy short drew some extra business, especially on Monday night. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. C. Arehart, Strand Theatre, Milford, Iowa. General patronage.

BOSKO IN BAGDAD: Harman-Ising—Bosko and Grandma's cookies have another hair-raising adventure. Very good.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

CANDID CAMERAMANIACS: Pete Smith Specialties—Not so good. Not up to what we expect of Pete Smith. Running time, nine minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

CANDID CAMERAMANIACS: Pete Smith Specialties—Very entertaining and interesting. Handled in the typical Pete Smith style. Running time, 9 minutes.—C. McKusick, Community Theatre, Guilford, Me. Small town patronage.

DECATHLON CHAMPION: Pete Smith Specialties—Pete Smith will have to do better than this if he wants to attain the pinnacle that Rice and Husing have set up for sports reels. Very slow and uninteresting. Running time, 9 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

DEATHLON CHAMPION: Pete Smith Specialties—A good sports attraction.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

MAN IN THE BARN, THE: Historical Mysteries—This is the second of this series we have played and they were both unusually interesting. Running time, 9 minutes.—C. McKusick, Community Theatre, Guilford, Me. Small town patronage.

NIGHT AT THE MOVIES, A: Robert Benchley—Very funny and it didn't cover half the laughs the situation involves.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

STOCKHOLM, PRIDE OF SWEDEN: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—More favorable comments on this travelogue than we've heard in months. Color superb. Interesting throughout. Running time, 9 minutes.—A. Goldson, Gold Coast Theatre, Chicago, Ill. Neighborhood patronage.

WHAT DO YOU THINK, NO. 2: M-G-M Miniatures—Not as good as No. 3 but will pass. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

WHAT DO YOU THINK, No. 3: M-G-M Miniatures—Good. Make them think a little. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

Miscellaneous

I PLEDGE MY HEART: (United States Department of Agriculture) Interest waned considerably during the showing of this reel. It is hardly geared to the tempo of 1938 movies, and paying express charges both ways makes it cost about half, at least, of what something more entertaining would. They dramatized none of the human interest angles that a convention of 4H boys and girls must have provided. It rather evolved into routine still pictures of Washington, D. C., governmental buildings.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Modern Talking Picture Service

AMERICA MARCHING ON: An excellent reel that every one should play. Entertaining and educational.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

Paramount

EDUCATED FISH: Color Classics—Average filler short. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. C. Lewellen, Federal Theatre, Denver, Col. Neighborhood patronage.

FOXY HUNTER, THE: Betty Boop Cartoons—A good cartoon with some good laughs.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

LOST AND FOUNDRY: Popeye the Sailor—Above average Popeye cartoon. Surprising climax as Sweet

Pea eats the spinach and turns strong-man. Good. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. C. Lewellen, Federal Theatre, Denver, Col. Neighborhood patronage.

OK KAY, RHYTHM: Herbie Kay and His Orchestra—Very good band act.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

ON THE NOSE: Grantland Rice Sportlights—Very good. Dog lovers will be crazy about this one. Running time, 11 minutes.—W. C. Lewellen, Federal Theatre, Denver, Col. Neighborhood patronage.

POPEYE THE SAILOR MEETS ALI BABA AND THE FORTY THIEVES (COLOR SPECIAL): Popeye the Sailor—A two-reel cartoon that means nothing more at the box office than a single. Does not compare with "Sinbad the Sailor" in entertainment. Running time, 17 minutes.—A. Goldson, Gold Coast Theatre, Chicago, Ill. Neighborhood patronage.

POPEYE THE SAILOR MEETS ALI BABA AND THE FORTY THIEVES: Popeye the Sailor—Not nearly as funny as it ought to have been. Still most everyone enjoyed it. Popeye needs a change of diet anyway. One tires of too much spinach.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

POPEYE THE SAILOR MEETS ALI BABA AND THE FORTY THIEVES: Popeye the Sailor—Ran it to bolster "Rosalie" and really believe it drew in a few. Very good color and was well received. Play it. They'll enjoy it. Running time, 20 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

QUEENS OF HARMONY: Phil Spitalny and His Girl Orchestra—Didn't go over as well as expected. Girl orchestras don't mean much here. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

STAR REPORTER IN HOLLYWOOD, THE, NO. 2: Ted Husing, David Holt, Quinlan Juvenile Singers—Again Husing scores with this novel vaudeville act. The girls' harmony in their chorus is exceptional and little Davey Holt brings out new talents. Running time, 7 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

TUNA: Paragraphics—Good.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

TUNA: Paragraphics—I feel that parts of this short have been seen here before. Not as good as some Paramount has given us this season. Running time, 8 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

FALSE ROOMERS: Edgar Kennedy Comedies—About the poorest Kennedy we ever played. Comedy was absolutely silly.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

MARCH OF TIME: "Inside Nazi Germany-1938"—An issue of March of Time that is worth getting behind. Saturday's papers carried the Nazi Austria headlines. We opened Saturday midnight with this subject. Hitler timed it just right for us. Who said this reel was pro-Nazi? Not the way our audiences interpreted it. Running time, 18 minutes.—Harry M. Palmer, Temple Court Theatre, Washington, Ind. General patronage.

United Artists

WOODLAND CAFE: Silly Symphonies—Probably we are expecting too much from Walt Disney, but from comments this did not seem to come up to par; something lacking. Running time, 8 minutes.—A. Goldson, Gold Coast Theatre, Chicago, Ill. Neighborhood patronage.

Universal

AIR EXPRESS: Meany-Miny-Moe Cartoons—Good. Above average Meany-Miny-Moe cartoon. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. C. Lewellen, Federal Theatre, Denver, Col. Neighborhood patronage.

DUMB CLUCK: Oswald Cartoons—A funny cartoon.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

FOOTBALL FEVER: Oswald Cartoons—Very good Oswald. Running time, 7 minutes.—E. G. Sheetz, Hables Palace Theatre, Winchester, Va. Rural and city patronage.

SHOW FOR SALE: Mentone Musical Comedies—This is average for the series.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Vitaphone

ALIBI MARK: Floyd Gibbons' "Your True Adventure"—Another very interesting subject.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

ALIBI TIME: Radio Ramblers—Quite poor. The accompanying would-be plot to introduce the Ramblers' vocalizing is very dull.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

LITTLE PIONEER, THE: Sybil Jason—We gave this feature billing and it brought in a few extras. Worthwhile.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

LITTLEST DIPLOMAT, THE: Sybil Jason—A nice little color two-reeler. Nothing exceptional, but color again put it over. Running time, 19 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

MAN WITHOUT A COUNTRY, THE: John Litel—Excellent. Be sure to mention that it is a dramatization of Edward Everett Hale's story of Philip Nolan.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

MILT BRITTON AND ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—Very good. Running time, 9 minutes.—C. McKusick, Community Theatre, Guilford, Me. Small town patronage.

MOVIE MANIA: Dave Apollon and his Orchestra—Swell musical comedy. Good in any spot.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

ONE ON THE HOUSE: Willie West, McGinty—As good a slapstick comedy as one could ask for. Plenty of laughs and entertainment. Running time, 20 minutes.—A. Goldson, Gold Coast Theatre, Chicago, Ill. Neighborhood patronage.

PICADOR PORKY: Looney Tunes—Good cartoon, bull fighter, good music.—Ray Raeburn, Grand Theatre, Lemmon, S. D. General patronage.

PURE FEUD (REISSUE): Edgar Bergen, "Charlie McCarthy"—Fair reissue. Running time, 9 minutes.—C. McKusick, Community Theatre, Guilford, Me. Small town patronage.

PURE FEUD: "Charlie McCarthy," Edgar Bergen—Good entertainment. Charlie is, of course, worth advertising.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

RUSS MORGAN AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—Not as good as his first one.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

SCRIPT GIRL: Broadway Brevities—Fairly good.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

TWO BOOBS IN A BALLOON: Edgar Bergen, "Charlie McCarthy"—We remember running this once before, but Charlie's present popularity did not help this short any. Definitely not funny.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

TWO BOOBS IN A BALLOON: "Charlie McCarthy," Edgar Bergen—This reissue is funny fare and its star is so popular it should prove most worthy of advertising.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

UNREAL NEWSREEL: Vitaphone Varieties—After the audience caught on to this, they thought it very funny, but the reel was nearly over before they knew what it was all about. Poor. Running time, 8 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

*An international association of showmen meeting weekly
in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress*

COLLEGIATE NIGHT

Chris. G. Holmes, Manager of the Avalon Theatre, Ottawa, Ontario, forwards particulars on how a Collegiate Night got under way at his house. It has proven immeasurably successful and needless to say our brother Canadian Round Tabler is continuing it for the rest of the collegiate year.

Besides being put on at a practically insignificant cost, it has been productive of much revenue to him, and the student bodies of two colleges in close proximity to this theatre, are for him hook, line and sinker.

There are many theatres situated close to collegiate institutions where this type of attraction might be tried, and we deem it a pleasure to permit Chris. to tell you about it in his own words in this week's Round Table Section.

NATIONAL TIEUPS

Showmen may score valuable hook-ups on "Hawaii Calls" starring Bobby Breen, through this young star's membership and activities in the Boy Scouts, Cub division and Junior Birdmen of America.

There are some 40,000 Scoutmasters and Junior Birdmen Clubs in this country and when you play his picture we suggest that you contact your local scoutmaster for scout cooperation, and if there is a Junior Birdmen unit in your city, to do likewise. Also, innumerable newspapers have a special column devoted to Junior Birdmen, and it is very probable that you may get picture mention in these columns.

These tie-ups are specifically called to your attention since they are not incorporated in the "Hawaii Calls" pressbook.

FRENCHMAN HONORED

It is no news to fellow Round Tablers that Elias Lapiniere, M-G-M publicity manager in Paris, was the winner of the Bronze Plaque in the Quigley Awards Competition last December.

Extremely interesting to Lapiniere's friends in other parts of the world is that the presentation was made at the American Embassy in Paris by Edwin C. Wilson, Chargé d'Affairs, in the absence of Ambassador Bullitt, who is now in the United States.

Among the important dignitaries present were Allan Byre, manager of the French branch of M-G-M; Harold L. Smith, Hays office representative in Continental Europe, and the Paris Representative of Quigley Publishing Co., Pierre Autre.

Bon chance, Monsieur!

LIKE "BANK OR CHURCH"

For some little time, this department has observed with interest the improvement in theatre house programs. The tendency to utilize the front page for institutional copy is indeed praiseworthy and theatremen who are not cashing in on this surefire medium for getting their institutional plugs into the home are passing up a good bet.

With each change of program, Manager J. O'Connell, of Warner's Hamilton Theatre, Chicago, addresses himself to his patrons and in one of his recent editorials directs a message to his new neighbors:

"We extend to you an invitation to pay the Hamilton Theatre a visit at your earliest convenience. You will find an atmosphere of friendly courtesy prevailing. We bid you welcome, a welcome that is sincere, and implies something more than a desire for the money you spend for admission. The Hamilton Theatre is an institution of entertainment, and we take the same pride in serving the people of our locality that a church or a bank does."

Forewarned is forearmed and, with Spring just around the corner, now is the time for smart showmen to inspect the cooling plant. As a preliminary step, a thorough inspection should be made to make certain that all parts are in proper working order, and, if repairs are necessary, make them now. Delays are dangerous and expensive in the long run. Selling your cooling system is of the utmost importance to you; so get it in ship-shape condition and be ready to launch that "cooling campaign".

Reported as causing considerable favorable comment was display shown above, which was conceived by Manager Ralph E. Phillips, State Theatre, Sioux Falls, S. D., who also concentrated on the fight angle in the picture. Canvas covered ring carrying title, cast and cutouts of Fredric March and Carole Lombard was planted in lobby.

Reproduced at right is City Manager E. E. Whitaker's "Spring Shower of Hits" display at the Lucas and Jenkins Fox Theatre in Atlanta, Ga. The fountain in the center of this display, sprayed through glass, under which was a color wheel changing the colors on the spray. Atlanta being the Dogwood city, this showman used a profusion of the blooms as a background.

Giant telephone was placed in lobby of the Fox Westlake Theatre, Los Angeles, Cal., by Manager W. C. Ricord, Jr. Card beneath called attention that for entertainment, patrons should call theatre telephone number. Plug also was gotten in for "The Buccaneer," current attraction.

Below is reproduced display conceived and executed by Manager W. A. Sandefur of the Leeds and Colonial Theatres, Winchester, Ky., for his opening engagement of "Swing Your Lady." Constructing a barn six feet wide, eight feet long by ten feet high, it entirely covered the boxoffice. Using cutout cartoons, painted catchlines were printed on all four sides. Being in a farming section, Sandefur reports that the display attracted considerable attention.

In April, 1792, the U. S. Mint was established, a date of sufficient import to take Les Pollock, Loew's Rochester, Rochester, to the Museum of Arts and Sciences, where he promoted a lobby display of rare coins. Each coin was placed in case with its complete history and credit card was planted atop entire display.

Described in detail elsewhere in the Round Table section is Manager Jim Luntzell's outstanding street ballyhoo for "Goldwyn Follies" at the Balaban and Katz Oriental Theatre in Chicago. Five girls wearing Charlie McCarthy masks, top hats and chest banners, paraded downtown sections where they created a furore. Papers picked up the gag.

lus colorful star filled Balaban & Katz Stage

Created by Manager Charles Bierbauer and his assistant, Nick Todorov, at the Colonial Theatre in Allentown, Pa., was this attractive lobby set-piece on "Of Human Hearts." Center of display featured blowup of Walter Huston which was flanked on either side by scene stills.

QUICK REPORTS FROM THE FIELD

Relic Display

William Rast, advertising manager, Waco and Orpheum Theatres, Waco, Texas to exploit his date borrowed a display of relics from the Wells Fargo local express company amongst which was special iron trunk in lobby showing the modern way that money and other valuables are transported. Week ahead express company bannered all trucks and used attractive window displays in all branches.

Entire theatre staff were dressed in Western costumes two weeks ahead, opening day exploitation included a parade of trucks, theatre sound truck and band which started at the freight depot and ended at the theatre. Rast also employed a street broadcast which netted him newspaper breaks.

School Tieup

Contest open to all high school students was opened recently by Frank Boucher, Strand Theatre, Altoona, in connection with the engagement of "Boy of the Streets." All entrants were required to submit posters done either in crayon, paint or pastel for passes. Stories were run in papers ahead and at end of contest with winners' names and posters themselves were displayed in lobby. Also planted on this picture was an essay contest, prizes going to winners.

Manager Celebrates

Flattering indeed were the press notices received recently by Fred Reeths, Sheboygan Theatre, Sheboygan, in celebration of his sixth year as guiding head of the theatre. Detailing his background, which included legit experience and the conduct of an agency operating 14 large dramatic stock companies throughout the United States, the Sheboygan Press over a cut of the theatreman praised his work and geniality.

Candid Camera Slant

Maynard Joiner, Capitol Theatre, Vancouver, cashed in on the current camera fever with a contest for fans during the recent showing of the Pete Smith short, "Cameramaniacs."

Camera boys were invited to take shots of the subject on the screen during stated showings with three prizes awarded for the best results.

FIRST QUARTER DEADLINE SOON!

The First Quarter in the 1938 Quigley Awards Competitions ends on March 31st.

Your material, in order to be eligible to enter the Competitions for this First Quarter must be in our offices no later than April 16th. This will give you ample time in which to clean up any odds and ends in your entries before submitting them for judging purposes.

Address your campaigns to Quigley Awards Committee, Managers' Round Table, Motion Picture Herald, Rockefeller Center, New York City.

Remember, your entries must be in this office no later than April 16th!

Stage Coach Contest

First gag of its kind to be reported to us on "Wells Fargo" was that engineered by Chet McSwain, Granada Theatre, Plainview, Texas, who tied up all schools' woodwork classes on building model Wells Fargo stage coaches. These were displayed in lobby with prizes going to winners and attendant publicity.

Arrangements were made for old stage coach properly bannered to pick up film and deliver it from out of town limits to the theatre. Fence around parking lot was converted into scene of olden days showing express company office, saloon, post office, etc., etc. Coach was stationed at schools as classes broke, taking children for rides.

In conjunction with the opening of the picture coincident with Plainview celebrating its 50th anniversary, Chet succeeded in having the Mayor proclaim a "Progress Day." Congratulatory wires were received from the stars in the picture and merchants plugged "the" day with displays and tie-in copy.

Kid Matinee

Russ Barrett, manager, Warner's Strand, Woburn, Mass., ran an after school matinee for children featuring Jane Withers in "45 Fathers," and promoted from local merchants, shoes, dresses, Charlie McCarthy dolls, candy, watches and other gifts to be awarded as prizes to the children holding the lucky coupons. So successful was the show that Russ plans to repeat it in connection with the next Shirley Temple picture he plays.

Railroad Aids

Not chancing to miss a bet on landing all publicity for his date on "Snow White" at the RKO Albee, Providence, Bill Brown secured cooperation of New Haven Railroad officials to have attention called to all train users that the road ran trains at various times during the day and evening, allowing ample time to see the picture. Publicity also calls attention to the fact that none of the theatres along the route would play the picture for at least a month. Tieup was also made with bus transportation company for the same break.

Largest department store in city devoted three windows and numerous counter displays to "Snow White" material, plugging both the merchandise and engagement. Dress shops, toy stores, five and tens and other merchants came through with windows, imprinted menus were used in restaurants, letters and study guides mailed to all universities and cards were prominently displayed in all libraries.

"Mannequin" Model

Milt Harris, director of publicity for Loew's Theatres, Cleveland, put over a publicity campaign for "Mannequin" during its run at Loew's State that brought plenty of extra free newspaper space. In conjunction with one of the downtown hotels, Harris ran a "Mannequin" contest to find Cleveland's best model.

Fifty-five girls, professional and non-professional, entered the contest. From these, local judges selected 15 who, in co-operation with local department stores put on a style show in the hotel. Show was open to the public and judges made their choice before an estimated attendance of about 1,000. Winner was given an all-expense-paid trip to New York with arrangements to have her picture taken by one of New York's leading photographers.

Managers Win Prizes

Harry Holdberg, manager of the Paramount Theatre, Des Moines; Orville Rennie, manager of the Rivoli, in Hastings, Neb., and Jimmy Schlatter of the Capitol in Sioux City were the first, second and third prize winners in the Tri-States Theatre Corp., Frank Freeman drive held recently, winning $100, $75 and $50, respectively. Fourth, fifth and sixth prize winners were Harold McKenna, Rialto, Sioux City; Maurice Crew, Uptown, Des Moines, and Bob Leonard, Garden, Des Moines.

SHOWMEN'S LOBBY LAFFS

This cartoon was created by John Shevchik, Penn Theatre, Cambridge, Pa.

Paramount Arranges Tieup on "College Swing"

In exploiting "College Swing" Paramount Pictures has arranged a nation-wide promotion with manufacturers of the new Bendix Home Laundry, which will feature an offer of prizes by Bendix dealers to promote their product and publicize the picture through local giveaway contests.
